VOL. 90. No. 56. PART ONE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 31, 1937. PAGES 1—16A  PRICE 10 CENTS.

ONLY $139,552 FOR CITY RELIEF IN NOVEMBER

Since St. Louis Has Made No Appropriation State's Allotment Is All for 22,700 in Want.

FAR SHORT OF ESTIMATED NEED

Administrator R. J. Crump Had Put Amount Required for Food Alone at $263,000.

The State Social Security Commission yesterday made good its statement that it would pay only 60 per cent of St. Louis' November relief costs, alloting $139,552 to the city for relief next month.

Its action followed a reaffirmation of its policy of demanding that the city bear 40 per cent of the costs, made Friday at a meeting called to consider the city's argument that the State should bear the entire burden because of the large revenue it receives in sales tax payments from St. Louis and because of the municipal deficit of $2,000,000.

Unless the Board of Aldermen now makes an appropriation to supplement the State allotment, an action it has insisted it will not take, the $139,552 will be the only money available for approximately 22,700 persons who will be on the relief rolls next month. The city's relief administrator had estimated $263,000 would be required to supply sufficient food alone to applicants.

2000 More Expected on Rolls.

The Administrator, Robert J. Crump, said last night the allotment would leave the relief situation here substantially the same as in October, when the administration was forced to abandon all grants for rent money, clothing or any other form of relief except food. Although the allotment this month is $3552 greater than that last month, the difference will be canceled by an expected seasonal increase of about 2000 persons on the rolls.

On the basis of an expected 8722 cases, the allotment will permit an average grant of $16 to each case, an amount which Crump believed would supply about as much food as was provided in October. The Social Security Commission was expected to make provision for meeting the administrative expenses, as it has done this month.

Plan to Provide Some Warmth.

Unless further funds were made available, Crump said, it would be impossible again to furnish money for rent, clothing or fuel to the needy. If the State commission approved the plan, however, he stated, the local administration would permit recipients to use part of their food allowances to buy coal and clothing, needs which will become more intense as cold weather sets in. This would be of aid to families who were able to obtain small amounts of food from relatives, he said.

In determining that its 60 per cent share of the November relief costs should be $139,552, the State used $232,585 as its estimate of total costs. If it had used the figure submitted by Crump, which was $263,000, its share would have been $157,800.

Any hope that the State would assume the full burden of costs was dissipated at the commission's meeting in Jefferson City Friday, when it again took the position that the law and the size of the State appropriation available prevented it from taking such action.

It recalled that the 1937 Legislature had made available an appropriation of $9,000,000 for all relief work in the State during the biennium of 1937 and 1938, and that only $5,949,003 remained of this amount as of Sept. 30.

Board's Letter to Mayor.

In a letter to Mayor Dickmann, explaining its stand, the commission said this remaining amount would not last for the rest of the biennium should the State assume more than 60 per cent of the costs in any community. Under the law, the commission stated, it "does not believe it can make expenditures on a basis which would entirely dissipate its funds before the end of the period and leave it entirely without resources to meet any part of the relief need for the later months of the biennium period."

The commission's meeting was called after Mayor Dickmann wrote to Gov. Stark contending the State should assume the full costs and rejecting a proposal of the commission to advance the full relief requirements to St. Louis for November and December if the city would agree to repay 40 per cent of the

Farley and New Deal Riding For Fall in New York Election, LaGuardia Victory Seems Certain

Many Political Futures at Stake Including That of Tammany Hall, Labor Party, Dewey and the Postmaster-General.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—In the election of a Mayor here Tuesday, the New Deal is threatened with the most serious defeat it has ever suffered at the polls. This has come to pass because President Roosevelt permitted the prestige of his administration in New York to be staked upon the candidacy of Tammany-backed Jeremiah T. Mahoney, and against the re-election of Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia.

Unless every political barometer in town is haywire, LaGuardia is going to win by a tremendous majority. The straw votes, the house-to-house canvasses, the reports of the precinct captains and the opinions of the experts all say the same thing—"LaGuardia, by a landslide." If these surface indications may be trusted, this is one of the most unequal contests in the city's history.

Although President Roosevelt personally has remained silent, the campaign for Mahoney actually is being led by three of the President's closest political friends and associates, namely, Postmaster-General James A. Farley, Gov. Herbert Lehman and United States Senator Rober F. Wagner. Without their support, indeed, Mahoney could hardly be said to have a campaign.

A Hint on Public Funds.

In addition to the fact that these three outstanding New Dealers have been speaking for Mahoney, and praising him as a New Dealer, Farley has gone to the extreme of hinting publicly that the future allocation of Federal funds to New York may depend upon Mahoney's election. Only a personal indorsement from the President could have made the tie more binding.

The ironical feature of this is that LaGuardia was a New Dealer before Roosevelt was, in the sense that he sponsored and fought in Congress for most of the social and economic objectives subsequently professed by the Roosevelt administration. Moreover, he made his fight in the days when the going was rough. Ideas of social reform were not so popular when Coolidge was in the White House, Mellon in the Treasury, and the stock market was hitting a new high every day.

However, the bond between the National Administration and Mahoney's candidacy is not the only factor which invests the election with a national interest. The outcome may determine whether LaGuardia is to be a factor in the contest for the Republican nomination for President in 1940. It is almost certain to determine whether Farley will be the Democratic nominee for Governor that year.

Some Futures at Stake.

Whether the American Labor Party is to become a factor in national politics, probably depends upon the showing it makes in this election. It is one of the most powerful among the fusion elements supporting LaGuardia, and there is a good chance that it will poll more votes than the Republican Party, which also is supporting the fiery little mayor.

It should not be forgotten that the American Labor Party is the New York branch of labor's Non-Partisan League, a National political body with an organization in each of the 48 states. It was credited with turning millions of votes to Roosevelt last year. Its head is John L. Lewis, chairman of the C I O. Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers union is head of the American Labor Party in New York City. He also is secretary-treasurer of labor's Non-Partisan League, and a member of the C I O.

Another promising political career which appears to be at stake is that of Thomas E. Dewey, the 32-year-old special prosecutor whose relentless and spectacular war on commercialized vice and racketeering has excited wide attention. Dewey is the Republican candidate for District Attorney of Manhattan, running on the same ticket with LaGuardia. Admirers already profess to discern in him the potentialities of another Charles Evans Hughes, and declare that he is "a cinch for governor in 1940."

Not the least important, and certainly one of the most dramatic, aspects of the campaign, is the probable fate of Tammany. Battered by repeated defeats, and starved by loss of patronage, the Tiger is desperate. Many experts are saying that if LaGuardia wins again, the sachems may as well burn the wigwam. They say Tammany cannot survive four more years of hunger and destitution, and it is a sober fact that the institution which has flourished since it was founded by Aaron Burr appears to be toppling.

Many Strange Alliances.

The foregoing are but some of the highlights in one of the most

M. P. TO QUESTION EDEN ON COLONIES FOR GERMANY

Duncan Sandys Wants to Know What Mussolini Is Willing to Give Nazis.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Duncan Sandys, Conservative Member of Parliament and son-in-law of former First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill, announced today he would ask Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in the House of Commons Monday:

"Whether, in view of Mussolini's speech advocating the possession of African colonies by Germany and denouncing the absurdity of territorial clauses in peace treaties, he (Eden) will inquire of the Italian Government what parts of Italy's African possessions they are prepared to offer to Germany;

"Also, what their attitude is toward those clauses of the peace treaties whereby Italy acquired large German-speaking districts in the Southern Tyrol."

MOONEY AGAIN LOSES APPEAL FOR FREEDOM

Plea Rejected 5 to 1 by California Supreme Court; Prisoner Says He Will Carry Case Up.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30.—Thomas J. Mooney's petition for a writ of habeas corpus was denied today by the State Supreme Court. Five justices signed the majority opinion. The sixth, Justice William H. Langdon dissented, declaring Mooney should be set free.

In San Quentin prison, Mooney said he had been "anticipating this action for two years" and that the case would be heard quickly by the United States Supreme Court. "We will make no attempt to go before the State Supreme Court again," he said. The United States Supreme Court denied Mooney's previous application to it for a writ of habeas corpus, holding he first had to seek relief in the State court.

WIFE OF SING SING WARDEN DIES AFTER 150-FOOT FALL

Mrs. L. E. Lawes Plunges From Bear Mountain Bridge; Had Been in Ill Health.

By the Associated Press.

OSSINING, N. Y., Oct. 30.—Mrs. Kathryn Lawes, wife of Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing prison, died in the Ossining Hospital tonight of injuries suffered in a 150-foot fall from the Bear Mountain bridge to the bank of the Hudson river.

She was found at the base of a precipice by State troopers at 8 o'clock tonight, 12 hours after she drove away from her home at the prison. The car was parked on the bridge.

Warden Lawes, who accompanied State Troopers to the spot where Mrs. Lawes was found, said his wife had been in ill health for several weeks.

FIFTH PRESIDENT OF SOVIET NAMED AS 'TROTSKYIST'

Transcaucasian Chief Is Charged With Treachery At Trial of 14 Accused Of Assassination Plot.

ALL PRISONERS HAVE CONFESSED

(Copyright, 1937, New York Tribune, Inc.)

MOSCOW, Oct. 30.—The name of Hazanfar Mousabekov of Transcaucasia and one of the seven Soviet Union presidents, was added today to the list of Soviet leaders who have turned to counter-revolution. He is the fifth of the Soviet presidents whose career has ended in death or disgrace in the last six months.

The disclosure of his treachery was made at the opening of the trial of 14 members of a terrorist organization charged with plotting the assassination of Soviet leaders and the secession of Azerbaidjan, one of the 11 federated republics in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Mousabekov himself is not among the defendants at this "instructive trial," as it is officially called. It is in progress at Shemakha, Azerbaidjan, in the center of the Soviet Union's greatest oil field. His inclusion among the leaders of the plot, according to the charges, is, however, an important stone in the pyramid of guilt erected in the formal indictment, which fills 12 solid columns of the Baku Worker.

Trotsky Named.

At the top of this pyramid are Leon Trotsky, exiled former Red army leader, and "agents of certain foreign Powers conducting aggressive politics against the Soviet Union." At the bottom are the present defendants—most of them local party officials and peasants, including one 72-year-old former kulak. They are charged with the usual crimes, neglect of livestock and spoilage of grain being the most concrete. But the indictment includes the confessions of all the defendants that they understood their sabotage was part of a larger conspiracy.

The importance given to the trial indicates that the formal charges against the defendants are comparable to income tax evasion charges sometimes brought against racketeers in the United States.

Crimes Confessed.

One of the confessed but unaccomplished crimes of these conspirators was the intention to assassinate D. Bagirov, now party secretary of Azerbaidjan. The chief defendant, Gamid Sultanov, who is former Azerbaidjan commissioner of municipal works, has already confessed he had deliberated over the choice between poison and a revolver in killing Bagirov. He has also confessed to having planned every possible kind of counter-revolution, from terrorism to armed uprising.

This present indictment shows, first, that the present crusade against "bourgeois nationalism" is prying loose from power leaders whose sins date back some years. It shows, secondly, that many of these sins are inevitable debris of the first five-year plan.

Linked With Defendants.

The dates attached to separate sections of the defendants' confessions indicate that they have been in custody and under examination at least since last June. It is also clear that Mousabekov was linked to the defendants in conversations antedating 1935.

Many of the concrete charges supporting the general accusations of counter-revolution illustrate the contrast between the construction fever of five years ago and the Kremlin's present policy of domestic stabilization under the new constitution. One defendant, Guseinov, former party secretary at Shemakha, confessed, for instance, to abusing peasants in the construction of the highway to Baku—a new road crucial to the oil industry. The ten days of road building labor required of all peasants annually was stretched to six weeks. The peasants were forced to work 25 miles from their homes and were kept idling there for long periods before the week began. Guseinov confessed he did this with a clear counter-revolutionary purpose, hoping to arouse discontent among the peasantry.

Today's revelation of Mousabekov's disgrace leaves only two of the seven presidents of the Soviet Union installed two years ago—Mikhail I. Kalinin, head of the

LOYALISTS REPORT REBEL GROUP CUT OFF NEAR MADRID

Say Insurgents Are Isolated on Hill, 20 Miles From Capital, Surrounded by Machine Guns.

FRESH FIGHTING IN USERA SECTOR

Government Forces in Zofia Quarter Barricade Houses Against Bayonet Rush.

By the Associated Press.

HENDAYE, French - Spanish Frontier, Oct. 30.—Spanish Government communiques tonight said a group of insurgents had been isolated on top of a hill south of Madrid, with Government machine guns sweeping all approaches.

The engagement took place at Cuesta de la Reina, 20 miles from Madrid. Insurgent dispatches first reported a Government attack was flung back. Later, a Valencia communique said an insurgent counter-attack was beaten off and the enemy forces were surrounded.

There was close fighting along the siege lines skirting Madrid to the west. Insurgent infantry drove toward the Zofia quarter, in the Usera sector, where Government troops barricaded houses against a bayonet rush.

Insurgent Generalissimo Franco's clean-up campaign in the Asturias was continuing, a rebel communique stated.

Dispatches from Madrid said steady but unspectacular fighting west of the capital was slowly endangering insurgent occupation of University City and more distant heights commanding the city from the south and west.

Government forces were pressing on within about 150 yards of the Toledo road, entering Madrid from the southwest.

Today was the anniversary of the first aerial bombardment of Madrid. All fronts were comparatively quiet today.

Government forces reported their artillery made a direct hit on a train leaving Teruel, destroying the engine and several cars, apparently with heavy casualties.

In the Madrid sector, the artillery dispersed insurgent troops marching toward Aravaca and Pozuelo de Alarcon, west of the city.

Attacks on the eastern front were limited to artillery fire.

REBEL PLANES SINK BRITISH FREIGHTER

By the Associated Press.

VALENCIA, Oct. 30.—The northern coastal defense tonight notified the Spanish Ministry of Defense that the British freighter Jean Weems was sunk this morning in the Mediterranean Sea by Insurgent airplanes which dropped 15 bombs.

The vessel was 16 miles off the Port of Gerona enroute from Marseilles to Barcelona with a cargo of wheat and condensed milk when the bombing occurred, the English captain said.

The 26 persons on board included two nonintervention observers, whose names were given as Gustavo U. Chesom of Sweden and Arnold Cifif of Lithuania. All were saved.

The Jean Weems, a 2349-ton vessel, appears in Lloyd's register as American-owned and registered at Baltimore, Md., but Lloyd's disclosed in London the freighter had changed to British registery during July. The British admiralty said it had not heard of the attack.

Premier Moves to New Spanish Capital at Barcelona.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Oct. 30.—Barcelona, Spain's largest city, today became capital of the Spanish Government. Premier Juan Negrin left Valencia by air to take up his headquarters in the northern city, which also is the capital of autonomous Catalonia.

For several weeks Government affairs will be conducted in both cities, while the transfer is being completed. Most ministers will begin work in Barcelona next week.

The Foreign Office is expected to be transferred this week-end, with foreign embassies and legations following soon. President Manuel Azana is expected to move shortly.

The youngest class of conscripts yet called—youths who became 19 in 1937—will report for service Nov. 15, according to a War Department decree.

TWO MARX BROTHERS STOLE GAG, JURY FINDS

Federal Judge to Sentence Chico and Groucho for Copyright Infringement Monday.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 30.—Groucho and Chico Marx, movie comedians, were convicted in United States District Court today of infringing on a copyright in a radio broadcast.

The misdemeanor conviction carries a maximum fine of $1000, or maximum jail sentence of one year, or both.

Judge George Cosgrave said sentence would be imposed next Monday. Defense counsel declared they would ask for a new trial.

After only brief deliberation, a jury convicted the brothers of using certain "gag" material which Carroll and Garrett Graham submited to them previously, but which they rejected.

In the trial, the Marx brothers contended the late Al Boasberg, screen writer, prepared the script they used in the broadcast last year. They testified they did not recall the substance of the skit, "Mr. Dibble and Mr. Dabble," that the Grahams submitted, and did not realize it and their broadcast script were similar.

Defense Attorney Clyde Thomas protested against a remark Judge Cosgrave made in sending the jury out.

"Don't be afraid to bring in a verdict," Judge Cosgrave told the 12 men jurors.

"Your Honor," Thomas interjected, "that certainly can be taken to mean 'don't be afraid to bring in a guilty verdict.' I wish to take exception to it."

The Judge rejoined: "The admonition could refer to any verdict—either of guilt or innocence."

Prosecutors defeated an effort of defense counsel to show the Graham brothers had been paid $7500 in a civil suit settlement in connection with their script.

So far as could be determined, this is the first time in the history of the Hollywood film colony that anyone has been convicted of plagiarism charges. There have been many civil suits for damages charging theft of literary materials.

BRITAIN SENDS CRUISER TO TRINIDAD FOR INQUIRY

Troops Ready to Go from Bermuda If Needed in Investigation of Oil Fields Disorder.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Colonial Office officials said today that troops are being held ready in Bermuda for possible dispatch to Trinidad at the request of Sir Murchison Fletcher, Governor of the latter British colony.

The cruiser York, flagship of the British West Indies squadron, has sailed from Bermuda for Trinidad. Officials said the Trinidad Governor asked these precautions against possible demonstrations in connection with the inquiry of a royal commission into recent disorders in the Trinidad oil fields.

A company of 100 men belonging to the Sherwood Foresters Regiment was under orders in Bermuda to be ready to leave on 48 hours' notice.

FORMER OIL EXECUTIVE CONVICTED OF ARSON

A. R. Knight Acquitted, However, at Media, Pa., of Attempt to Kill Children.

By the Associated Press.

MEDIA, Pa., Oct. 30.—A jury tonight found Albert R. Knight guilty on three charges of arson but acquitted him of a charge he attempted to burn to death his four children to collect $120,000 insurance. Knight was once a well-to-do oil company executive.

Knight heard the verdict without any show of emotion. The children were in court. About 25 of Knight's friends from his home town, Lansdowne, also were present when the jury reported to Delaware County Judge John M. Broomall at 9:45 p. m.

The case was given to the jury last night after an eight-day trial.

The three charges on which Knight was convicted carry a total of from 4 to 29 years in prison. The jury found him guilty of:

Attempt to set fire to a dwelling and chattels, penalty one to two years.

Firing a dwelling, penalty two to 20 years.

Firing chattels to defraud the insurer, penalty one to seven years.

Knight's attorney announced he would ask for a new trial, and Nov. 15 was set for hearing of arguments. A request for bail was denied and Knight, free on $10,000 bond during his trial, was taken to jail. He kissed each of his children good night then conferred in a whisper with Ruth, one of his daughters. The children began to cry as they left the court room.

The jury of seven women and five men deliberated nearly 24 hours before its decision was announced by Mrs. Florence Hickey, housewife, of Marcus Hook, who was foreman.

Knight was charged with setting fire to his home in a way to murder his children and collect the insurance on their lives.

Knight testified he was returning from Washington on a bus the night the fire was discovered and did not arrive home until two hours after it had been extinguished.

He said his house was infested with insects and that he had placed kerosene-soaked paper and oakum in the basement to exterminate them.

Assistant District Attorney William A Toal accused Knight of setting the fire by means of a slow burning fuse and told the jury it was "only an act of God" by which Knight's three daughters and his son escaped death.

LAST CHINESE TROOPS QUIT CHAPEI AFTER 4-DAY STAND

377 Leave Shell-Wrecked Warehouse, Dash Past Line of Fire, and Are Interned by British in Neutral Zone.

200 DEAD ARE LEFT IN BLAZING BUILDING

26 of Survivors Gravely Hurt — Defenders' Colonel Says He Got Order From Chiang Kai-shek to Abandon Area.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 31 (Sunday).—A Chinese force which had held out in a warehouse for four days after other Chinese troops had retreated from the Chapei district, withdrew under machine gun fire early today to sanctuary in Shanghai's International Settlement.

At the height of a furious battle that sprayed shells over foreign-owned areas of central Shanghai, 377 Chinese dashed down a 20-yard opening to safety.

They were disarmed immediately by British troops and interned for duration of the conflict. Twenty-six were gravely wounded.

Chinese said they had left behind 200 dead who fulfilled their pledge to defend the warehouse until death in the face of a Japanese "surrender or die" ultimatum.

Ten minutes after the last survivor fled from the crumbling warehouse, Japanese hoisted the Rising Sun flag over the site of one of the most dramatic episodes in this conflict.

Colonel Last to Leave.

Col. Hsieh Chin-quan, commander of the battalion, part of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's own Eighty-eighth Division, was the last to reach safety of foreign protection. He said the capitulation was on Chiang's direct orders to evacuate because the defenders were "too valuable to spare."

With them, the escaping Chinese brought the Chinese colors that had fluttered above the warehouse through the four days of pounding attacks since the general Chinese withdrawal from Chapei across Soochow Creek from the International Settlement.

During the four-day attack on the warehouse the detonation of Japanese shells shook the sandbags of the United States Marine's sandbag fortifications, 50 yards across Soochow Creek. Shells hurtled through the structure, landing at many points in the International Settlement and endangering hundreds of foreign and Chinese lives.

Chinese Fight All Night.

Shrapnel whistled about in all directions while machine guns kept up a nerve-wracking chatter. The Chinese defenders answered the attack all last night with hand grenades and machine gun fire.

Surrounding the structure on three sides, Japanese three-inch guns bombarded the warehouse until the Chinese garrison dashed across the narrow strip of bullet-spattered territory to foreign internment.

The top floors burst into flames as the Chinese fled.

Three-inch shells fell in Shanghai's downtown section, but small damage was reported.

The Japanese artillery attack menaced the nearby gas works and its huge gas storage tank endangering the lives of 30 American marines patrolling the sector. Two shells struck the works but the tank remained unhit.

"Firing is still heavy" was the constantly repeated report to headquarters from Lieut. J. M. Masters of Anderson, S. C., commanding the American outpost as Japanese, apparently infuriated by the battalion's escape, brought up an armored car to add its thunder to the battle crescendo.

Expecting the escape, Japanese swept the warehouse exit with searchlights and machine gun bullets.

The dugout telephones tinkled and the report came in that "approximately 50 have made it in dribbles of twos and threes."

Until then, Lieut.-Col. Roswell Winans, peering over the sandbags,

9-POWER PARLEY ON FAR EAST TO OPEN WEDNESDAY

Four Foreign Ministers to Be in Attendance When Conference Gets Under Way in Brussels.

LITVINOV TO HEAD SOVIET DELEGATION

Baron von Neurath of Germany Says Geneva Spirit Will Defeat Purpose of Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 30.—Belgium made ready the historic Palais des Academies today for the first Nine-Power Treaty conference meeting Wednesday to seek solution of the Chinese-Japanese conflict.

Announcement that Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinov would head Russia's delegation sent to four the number of foreign ministers who are scheduled to attend the conference.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden of Great Britain and Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos of France already have indicated they would attend. Foreign Minister Paul Spaak of Belgium will open the session Wednesday morning in the palace which once was the residence of King William II of the Netherlands.

Foreign Minister Delbos, head of the French delegation to the conference, will be aided by Francois de Tessan, Undersecretary of State for Foreign Affairs; Gaston Monnerville of Guiana, Undersecretary of State for Colonies; and Ernest LaGarde, Quai d'Orsay expert.

U. S. Delegation on Hand.

Diplomats in Brussels said that length of the treaty meeting would depend on developments. The United States delegation, headed by Ambassador-at-Large Norman H. Davis, was the only group of representatives which had arrived thus far.

An authoritative source at Rome said today that Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, probably would not be a member of the Italian delegation. It was said Premier Mussolini had not contemplated sending Ciano.

Baron Konstantin von Neurath, Germany's Foreign Minister, according to dispatches from Munich predicted that the nine-Power conference will fail "if it is conducted in the spirit of Geneva."

He criticised "adherents to the collective security idea" for their methods of trying to settle international conflicts. Germany has declined an invitation to the conference.

"I would consider it a most unfortunate preface to the introduction of attempts to end the Far Eastern conflict if these attempts were to be conducted in the spirit of the resolution adopted recently by the League of Nations," Von Neurath declared in an address before the German Academy of Law. The League recently adopted a resolution naming Japan as the agressor in China.

Criticises Powers.

Powers that are anxious to mediate "must not place themselves in the chair of a judge of morals," Von Neurath said.

Deriding the "mere setting up of beautiful aims which are practically unattainable and therefore valueless," he stated that "in politics—even in peace—it is success that is decisive."

Von Neurath placed Germany on record as favoring "treatment of every concrete international problem according to methods specifically adapted to the case."

Urges City and State to End Deadlock on Relief.

A plea to State and city authorities to find some method of making more money available for relief in St. Louis was made last night in a radio program sponsored by the Social Planning Council of St. Louis and St. Louis County.

Speakers were Julian B. Cohn, chairman of the council's special committee on the relief emergency; the Rve. John J. Butler, president of the Catholic Charities of St. Louis; the Rev. Clark W. Cummings, executive secretary of the Metropolitan Church Federation of St. Louis, and Rabbi Samuel Thurman of United Hebrew Temple.

Cohn said that "more than 20,000 of our fellow citizens are being denied the simplest decencies of life because of a deadlock over financial responsibility for their care," and added:

"As representative of the social and humanitarian interests of this community, the Social Planning Council cannot be content to let the issue rest in a financial deadlock. It must be worked out by those to whom the public has a right to look for proper solution of this problem—the duly constituted authorities of the city and State Governments."

RUSSIA AND JAPAN REINFORCE FRONTIER

Heavy Red Army and 60,000 From Tokio Reported on Manchoukuan Border.

By the Associated Press.

PEIPING, Oct. 30.—Trustworthy sources said today that both Japan and Russia were rapidly increasing their forces along the boundary between Japan's protectorate of Manchoukuo and Soviet Russia.

It was authoritatively estimated 40,000 Japanese troops who had taken part in the conquest of North China had been sent into Northern Manchoukuo. Foreign sources have reported the movement of Japanese troop trains northeastward through Tientsin.

It was reported also that 20,000 Japanese troops had been sent recently from Korea into Eastern Manchoukuo where tension at the border was heightened by a Soviet-Manchoukuan clash on the Tumen River boundary Friday.

According to Domei, Japan's national news agency, travelers who have come through Siberia recently told of large movements of the Red army along the Trans-Siberian Railway into Siberian provinces adjoining Manchoukuo.

Domei also said that Soviet troops had been sent into Outer Mongolia, which is under Russian influence and protection, because Russian leaders feared an invasion from Manchoukuo.

Informed observers pointed out that the Japanese column which recently conquered Suiyuan and Chahar provinces—and which came from Japan's Manchurian garrison—had hastened to set up an independent "Inner Mongolian nation" with a capital at Kweisui (renamed Hoho), formerly capital of Suiyuan.

This, it is believed, is intended to establish a base from which to strike at Outer Mongolia should the need arise.

Authorities familiar with both Japan and Russia said that while neither country wants to fight now—each is being impelled into large military preparations by fear of attack.

Russia Protests to Japan Against Alleged Attack on Border Patrol.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Oct. 30.—The Soviet Government protested today against an alleged incursion of Japanese Manchoukuan troops across the Russian-Manchoukuan frontier where they were said to have exchanged shots with Soviet frontier guards.

The Foreign Office instructed the Consul-General at Harbin to present the protest to Japanese authorities and the Manchoukuan Government and ask them to take measures to prevent such incidents in the future.

Tass (Russian) News Agency said in a communique that "a squad of Japanese-Manchurian soldiers" crossed the frontier Thursday six kilometers (four miles) northwest of Paktshekori in the Psuietetski district and opened fire on the frontier patrol. The Soviet guard, the communique said, returned the fire and forced the invaders to retreat to the other side of the border.

The Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported from Seoul, Korea, Thursday that a Manchoukuo border regiment at Suiruho charged that Soviet troops fired on it with machine guns. Domei said Friday that Japan had protested to Moscow.

"Fisherman of Capri" Dies.

NAPLES, Italy, Oct. 30.—Michele Russo, who was called "Spadaro, the fisherman of Capri" and was one of Europe's most photographed persons, died tonight of bronchial pneumonia on the Island of Capri. His white beard and red beret made him the model for thousands of painters and amateur photographers who visited the island.

ANTI-BRITISH FEELING INCREASING IN JAPAN

Unofficial Council Says England Aids China, Threatens Diplomatic Break.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Oct. 30.—Members of the unofficial "Council on the Current Situation," including high army officers and members of both houses of Parliament, adopted a resolution today charging Great Britain had been assisting China and adding: "The Japanese cannot allow the British to continue unmolested in their present improper doings."

The resolution, approved unanimously with cheers, declared Britain had been the main driving force in persuading convocation of the Brussels nine-power pact conference Nov. 3 in an apparent effort to start intervention in the Chinese-Japanese undeclared war.

"If the British fail to reconsider their attitude," the resolution said, "we may be forced to take an attitude of grave determination by severing years of friendly diplomatic relations."

Those present at the emergency council meeting included Teijiro Yamamoto, one of the dominant political party leaders and a former Cabinet member; Lieutenant-General Yoshitsugu Tatekawa, prominent in nationalist movements, and Shingo Tsuda, an outstanding industrialist. The committee includes 100 prominent Japanese.

Anti-British feeling has been rising steadily in Japan, with charges the British fostered a report that Japanese airmen killed 2000 Chinese non-combatants in Canton and the Japanese navy had torpedoed Chinese fishing junks.

Hongkong, the British crown colony on the Southern China coast, has been mentioned continually as a source of munitions for China, and more recently it has been charged that British munition carriers have entered Tsingtao, Shantung Province port in North China.

Among other charges against the British, Japanese editorials have stated frequently that England had caused the United States to change its original attitude of "understanding" for the Japanese position.

CHAUTEMPS' PARTY AGAINST RETURN OF GERMAN COLONIES

Radical Socialists Express Confidence Government Will Maintain French Mandate.

By the Associated Press.

LILLE, France, Oct. 30. — The Radical Socialist Party, whose rolls include Premier Camille Chautemps and 16 members of his Cabinet, went on record today against the return to Germany of its pre-war colonies.

The party expressed confidence that the Government will maintain the administrative and legal setup of the colonies under French mandate.

"The party cannot take into consideration all the economic and population problems invoked to legitimize the return of her foreign colonies to Germany," the resolution stated.

JAPANESE CLAIM CAPTURE OF CITY IN SHANSI PROVINCE

Report Taking of Yangchuan 60 Miles East of Taiyuanfu, the Provincial Capital.

By the Associated Press.

PEIPING, Oct. 30.—A Japanese army communique today said three Japanese columns which had been fighting their way into Shansi Province from the east had captured Yangchuan, 60 miles east of Taiyuanfu, the provincial capital.

Yangchuan is an important station on the railway entering Shansi from Hopeh Province. Just west of it is a bottle-neck pass which the Japanese were preparing to assault.

The communique said that in the Hsinkow sector 40 miles north of Taiquanfu a fierce battle raged all day but no Japanese gains were reported. Three assault columns were said to have flung themselves against the defenders, composed chiefly of troops of the central Chinese government equipped with artillery and machine guns.

A Domei dispatch from Kweisui said the new Mongol "nation" declared its authority extended not only over Suiyuan and most of Chahar but also over "all territory originally possessed by the Mongols."

Literally taken, this would mean most of Asia and part of Europe but experienced observers interpreted it as a bid for support of Mongol tribes in sovietized Outer Mongolia and also a hint its sway might be extended—with Japanese army help—to Ninghsia, Chinese province to the west of Suiyuan.

Domei disclosed that nominal head of the new "state" is its chairman, 72-year-old Prince Yun, head of the Ulanchab Banner (tribe). However, whatever authority the Japanese sponsors leave their Mongol allies is expected to be exercised by Prince Teh, the vice-chairman, whom previous dispatches had named head of the new government. Prince Teh previously headed a smaller Japanese-sponsored mongol "state" in northern Chahar and eastern Suiyuan.

Prince Yun was made chairman because he is the senior of Mongol Banner leaders.

LAST CHINESE TROOPS WITHDRAW FROM CHAPEI UNDER FIRE

had not believed any Chinese possibly coul descape alive.

Shells Endanger Marines.

Japanese guns increased their roar. Most of the warehouse roof had been shot off. Fire spurted from the upper floors, lighting the strange spectacle of increasing numbers of Chinese dashing out and flinging themselves behind the British barricades.

Three American marine officers and four privates saw the scene repeated time after time in the intermittent flash of shells. Now and then, a Chinese would falter and have to be dragged behind the British sandbags.

Suddenly one big shell arched overhead and struck the gas plant 100 yards away. Major Howard Stent dashed across the fringe of the battle zone to determine the fate of Capt. Otho Ledbetter and 30 American marines stationed there to aid British tommies.

He found none injured and returned. Then a second shell struck the plant and he returned for a second checkup.

Finally a signal from the British pill-box across the creek relieved the tension. For despite the continuing gunfire all living Chinese had been evacuated.

Had Rejected Ultimatum.

Foreign consuls-general, fearful that the Japanese attack might cause serious damage to the foreign quarter, had urged the Chinese to give up the warehouse. The defenders rejected a Japanese ultimatum, and Thursday declined the help offered by American and British commanders.

So certain were British officials that the Chinese would withdraw before dawn, however, that trucks and heavy police reinforcements were assembled to effect the transfer. Police said the Chinese would be interned in a concentration camp.

New fires broke out in devastated Chapei despite stern efforts to quench blazes that swept the area The Isis Theater was among the newly destroyed structures.

In the midst of one of the most intense naval bombardments of the Pootung section, across the Whangpoo River and south of Central Shanghai, a Chinese air raider soared briefly over the three or four Japanese warships that were pouring shells into the Chinese positions. Anti-aircraft batteries drove off the raider and naval guns continued their bombardment.

Chinese authorities declared the Chinese army's left wing still held Nanziang, strategic Nanking-Shanghai Railway point west of Shanghai, despite a three-way Japanese land and air bombardment that reduced the town to ruins.

A Japanese bomber was shot down and three flyers killed in South China when a Japanese squadron attempted to destroy highway communications linking the port of Amoy with Changchow and Chinchew.

FLOOD DESTROYS SYRIAN VILLAGES WITH 1000 DEAD

Troops Patrol Area After Sacking of Town Is Reported — 10,000 Forced to Flee From Homes.

By the Associated Press.

DAMASCUS, Syria, Oct. 30.—Troops tonight patrolled flood-destroyed villages northeast of Damascus where more than 1000 persons were drowned and 10,000 were forced to flee from their homes.

The troops were sent out following a Ministry of Interior announcement that a village on the Damascus-Bagdad road had been sacked by thieves after inhabitants fled before advancing flood waters.

The Government recruited hundreds of volunteers and sent them into the flooded areas to work with troops in feeding refugees and recovering bodies.

The greatest loss of life and property occurred in the region 35 miles northeast of Damascus toward Aleppo, Palmyra and Badgad.

Officials listed 500 residents of the village of Deir Aatiye as missing. In the nearby village of Nebek 100 houses were destroyed and 70 bodies already had been recovered.

The flood started with a cloudburst in the mountains which poured a wall of water into the valleys. Apparently the peak of the flood was reached Saturday afternoon.

LETTER FROM MAN SOUGHT IN BURNED AUTO MYSTERY

No Reference to His Car, Which Contained Unidentified Body at Edina, Mo.

OWATONNA, Minn., Oct. 30.—Sheriff E. T. Helgeson of Steele County said today a letter, written by John Crom, missing Owatonna stock buyer, and postmarked Oct. 26 at Reno, Nev., had been received by the missing man's wife.

Crom has been sought since an automobile, bearing license plates registered in his name and containing an unidentified burned body, was found near Edina, Mo., several days ago.

The letter, Helgeson said, made no reference to the burned car or to the fact that the writer was being sought.

"It was not even apparent from the tone of the note that Crom was aware he is the object of a search," the sheriff said.

The letter indicated Crom intended to leave shortly for Prescott, Ariz.

Briton in Valencia Jail Accused of Smuggling Men

Capt. E. C. Lance Alleged to Have Aided Franco's Followers Out of Loyalist Territory —England Seeks Release.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The British Government moved today to effect the release of Capt. Edwin C. Lance, formerly an honorary attache of the embassy in Madrid, who has been held in a Valencia jail for three weeks. The Madrid-Valencia Government accuses Lance of attempting to smuggle supporters of insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco out of Government-held territory.

Lance at the outbreak of the civil war was the commercial representative of several British firms in Madrid and was made an honorary attache early in the war. He gave British residents gas-mask training, visited prisons searching out his friends and helped to arrange Anglo-American evacuations from Madrid.

In October, 1936, Lance was reported captured by the insurgents and sent to Salamanca, Franco's capital. He apparently made his way back to Madrid, for he was slightly injured in January, 1937, when insurgent bombs struck the British Embassy.

It was reported that the only person permitted to visit the captain in prison is W. H. Leche, British Charge d'Affaires in Valencia.

THOUSANDS HURRY TO JOIN AUSTRIA'S FATHERLAND FRONT

Party Expects to Have 2,400,000 Enlisted in Duling Party by Monday, the Deadline.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Oct. 30.—The Fatherlan Front, Austria's only legal political organization is enrolling new members by the thousands and officials estimated tonight the party would have a membership of 2,400,000 by Nov. 1, the deadline for registration.

Party leaders said the new total membership would make the Austrian Fatherland Front much stronger than the Nazi party in Germany or the Communist party in Russia.

Chancellor Kurt von Schuschnigg, who last year took the leadership of the Fatherland Front from Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, regarded the membership drive as the completion of his political consolidation of Austria.

Hereafter, only youths attaining the age of 18 will be accepted into Front, and all Austrians remaining outside will definitely be classed as opposed to the Christian authoritary theory of government. They will lose all prospect of obtaining government jobs and will find many forms of civil employment closed to them. Non-members will be unable to vote in future elections.

FRENCH BLOODLESS BULLFIGHT IN HONOR OF U. S. AMBASSADOR

Event to Be Held Today at Nimes, Home of William C. Bullitt's Ancestors.

NIMES, France, Oct. 30.—Workmen sanded the arena of Nimes' old Roman amphitheater today in preparation for a bloodless bullfight tomorrow, in honor of William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to France.

In the Nimes style, a bullfighter attempts, barehanded, to pluck a cockade from the bull's forehead.

Tonight the Ambassador attended a festival in an illuminated garden of this historic city, once the home of his Huguenot ancestors. A week-end holiday was declared to celebrate Bullitt's visit.

NEW CABINET IN PERU; PREMIER SUCCEEDS SELF

Civilians Replace Some of Military Men Who Served in Old Government.

LIMA, Peru, Oct. 30.—A new Cabinet, headed by Gen. Ernesto Montagne, was sworn in today, replacing the ministry which resigned last night.

Montagne, who succeeded himself as Premier, submitted the new list of ministers to the President, Gen. Oscar Raimundo Benavides, this morning. The list included three ministers from the retiring Cabinet and five new ones, some of whom were civilians. The old Cabinet was composed entirely of army and navy men.

The retiring ministers said they resigned to leave the President free to name new Cabinet members.

GUARD AT AMERICAN QUARRIES OUTSIDE JERUSALEM ATTACKED

Snipers Fire on Constables at Stone Works; No Casualties Reported.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 30.—Snipers fired on constables guarding American stone quarries outside Jerusalem today. No casualties were reported.

Police, aided by bloodhounds rounded up one gang of terrorists. Troops made extensive marches through Arab villages. Despite strict frontier guards, small bands of Syrians slipped into Palestine, but royal airforce detachments prevented them from joining terrorist groups.

Germans Buy Italian Plug Tobacco.

BREMEN, Oct. 30.—German tobacco chewers are turning to Italian plug to replace Kentucky twist. A first shipment of 600 bales from the Italian tobacco monopoly has arrived here, and is being advertised as "just as good a quid as the American stuff" which importers say is difficult to obtain because of exchange restrictions.

ITALY'S AMBASSADOR RECALLED FROM PARIS

Mussolini Said to Be Vexed Because Charge d'Affaires Represented France at Rome.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 30.—Premier Mussolini of Italy today recalled his Ambassador from Paris in a move which diplomats considered as aggravating France's strained diplomatic relations with Italy.

Ambassador Vittorio Cerruti will return to Rome tomorrow night, Italians said, for a leave of absence of "more or less long duration." Baron Angelo Scaduto Mendola, Counselor of Embassy, is also leaving his post, and the delicate Italian-French relations are in the hands of a minor official.

The sudden recall was made, a usually well-informed diplomatic source said, because France had failed to send an ambassador to Rome and left a Charge d'Affaires to handle Italian relations rather than recognize the Fascist conquest of Ethiopia.

Cerruti notified the Foreign Ministry that he was leaving a Charge d'Affaires to handle Italian relations with France and after his visit the foreign office issues this communique:

"The Italian Ambassdaro has made known to the Foreign Ministry that he has been invited by his Government to leave on vacation."

Diplomatic sources said the Ambassador's departure was felt to be due entirely to Mussolini's sense of prestige requiring Italian representation at Paris to be on the same basis as the French at Rome.

In Rome, informed quarters said the move was part of a contemplated Italian diplomatic shake-up. These unofficial reports said Cerruti would probably be replaced by Renato Prunas, now in the Foreign Ministry at Rome.

An Italian official here said Prunas, former Embassy Secretary in London, was coming to Paris as Charge d'Affaires. Before Cerruti made his formal call on the Foreign Ministry, French officials said they had known "Italy has contemplated such a move for some time."

"It is not our fault," a spokesman said, pointing out France had named Rene de Saint-Quentin as Ambassador to Rome a year ago on the retirement of Count Charles de Chambrun. Italy, the spokesman said, had refused to accept de Saint-Quentin unless he was accredited to King Vittorio Emanuelle as Emperor of Ethiopia as well as King of Italy. This, he said, France had refused to do as a member of the League of Nations which still considers Hallie Selassie emperor of the Italian-occupied empire.

Diplomatic quarters said the departure of Cerruti would make even more difficult the negotiations between Paris and Rome over the diplomatic problems arising out of the non-intervention deadlock over the Spanish civil war.

CIRCUIT ATTORNEY LETS EMBEZZLING ISSUE GO UNTRIE

Drops Case Against Simo De Bardas Who Woma Says Stole Trust Deed Worth $12,000.

MAN FREE ON FAULT IN ORIGINAL CHARG

Miller Adopts Sigmun Bass' Defense Idea Tha Action Now Woul Create Double Jeopardy

Circuit Attorney Franklin Mille yesterday dropped prosecutio without a hearing on merits of th case, of a charge that Simon d Bardas of Chicago, former St. Lou real estate promoter, embezzle deeds of trust valued at $12,00 from his client, Mrs. Henrietta M. Kring, wife of a St. Louis druggist.

Circuit Judge John W. Joynt discharged de Bardas on a technicality last Tuesday. At the close o the State's case he sustained a defense demurrer grounded on a contention the information issue against de Bardas by the Circui Attorney's office was defectiv Judge Joynt directed the jury t return a verdict of acquittal.

Question of Another Trial.

His action raised the questio whether another trial of de Bardas under a new embezzlement information would deprive the defendant of a constitutional righ by placing him in double jeopardy

In sustaining the demurrer Judge Joynt indicated he was o the opinion that a new information or charge, could be issued withou placing de Bardas in double jeopardy. He had told counsel for both sides, before ruling on the demurrer, that he did not want the jury to decide the case if the information was insufficient. He said the defendant could be tried anew.

However, the Circuit Attorney, differing with the Court's opinion that the information was defective, reached the conclusion that the State was helpless to proceed further. His opinion was that if Judge Joynt had not directed the acquittal verdict, the State could have kept the case open by filing exceptions to the Court's ruling on the demurrer, but that under the circumstances the only possible procedure for the State, issuance of a new information, would place de Bardas in double jeopardy.

Following Judge Joynt's ruling, Assistant Circuit Attorney Herman Olian, in charge of the prosecution, said the State would seek to proceed under a new information. Apparently he was relying on court decisions that criminal prosecution on an insufficient information or indictment does not bar subsequent prosecution for the same alleged offense.

After some discussion, however, the State's decision on the matter was left for Circuit Attorney Miller, then out of the city. He said yesterday he had reached his decision to drop the case after a conference with Olian and Forrest G. Ferris, first Assistant Circuit Attorney.

As worded, the information, issued last March when de Bardas surrendered here after an unsuccessful six-year fight against extradition from Chicago, charged the real estate dealer with embezzlement of two deeds of trust "to the amount and value of $12,000, the same being then and there lawful money of the United States of the value of $12,000."

Thus, the question presented to Judge Joynt was whether the "lawful-money" phrase referred to the deeds of trust as such, or whether they merely described the $12,000."

Sigmund M. Bass, defense attorney, argued in support of his demurrer that the information charged his client both with embezzlement of money and embezzlement of deeds of trust, so that he did not know which charge to meet.

Takes New Position.

After his client had received a favorable ruling from Judge Joynt and was confronted with the possibility of a new information, however, Bass took a position seemingly contradictory, insisting that a second information would subject de Bardas to double jeopardy. To the lay observer it would seem that if the original information were defective, as Bass contended in arguing for the demurrer, there was no original jeopardy. If the information did not constitute a valid charge, de Bardas was not in danger.

In deciding not to prosecute de Bardas, the Circuit Attorney agreed with the later position of defense counsel.

Before the demurrer was sustained, Mrs. Kring testified de Bardas obtained the two deeds from her in 1929, during discussion of a business deal, merely "for examination," then failed to return them. She asked for them several times, she said, but was "put off" by de Bardas. He told her later that they had been stolen, she went on, explaining that she learned finally that they had been sold and then Attorney Testified.

Joseph Oxenhandler, an attorney, testified he had represented de Bardas in the sale of the deeds of trust. Under cross-examination by Bass he said Mrs. Kring had informed him in a telephone conversation that she had authorized de Bardas to sell the deeds.

When she made her complaint in December, 1930, a fugitive warrant was issued against de Bardas. In Chicago, he resisted extradition, carrying his fight to the United States Supreme Court, which refused last March 15 to review a ruling against him by the Illinois Supreme Court. After that, he surrendered, denying any embezzlement. In St. Louis he operated the Ozark Land & Development Co. in the Planters Building.

ONE OF KIDNAPERS OF BERG TO GET PAROLE HEARING

Curtis Medlock Was Sentenced to 25 Years for Abduction of St. Louisan in 1931.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 30.—Curtis Medlock of St. Louis, one of the kidnapers of Alexander Berg in 1931, who pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary, will receive a parole hearing next Thursday before the Penal Board.

Medlock, who testified for the State at trials of his companions in the crime, has served nearly six years. A prisoner sentenced up to 25 years becomes automatically eligible for a parole after serving one-fifth of his sentence, but it is not mandatory on the board to grant it.

Berg was held captive for five days and released on the promise of his attorney to pay $50,000 ransom. Paul Richards, an attorney, conducted negotiations for the kidnapers. He was acquitted by a jury of a charge of kidnaping for ransom, but later was disbarred. Of the kidnapers, Charles Tucker also turned State's evidence, and was paroled from a five-year sentence; Charles Heuer received 99 years; Edward Barcume and George Peek 25 years each. Berg died in 1932.

3 MORE SLEEPING SICKNESS DEATHS; TOTAL NOW IS 117

429 Cases Reported in City Since Encephalitis Outbreak Began in June.

Deaths from encephalitis (sleeping sickness) in the metropolitan area since June 30 reached 117 yesterday with the report of three additional fatalities in the city. Nine have occurred in the county and two in East St. Louis.

Henry Geers, 67 years old, 3137 South Broadway, died Friday. Gloria Bean, 10-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lewis, 4313 Norfolk avenue, died Wednesday at City Hospital, and Long Rothman, 11, a Negro, 1422 North Whittier street, died Tuesday at People's Hospital.

There have been 429 cases of encephalitis reported in the city since the outbreak began late in June.

BURGLAR TWICE VISITS HOME OF ENGLAND'S RICHEST GIRL

Awakened by His Torch, 13-year-old Daughter of Aid to King George Gives Alarm.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 30. — Scotland Yard tonight hunted a burglar who twice invaded London's most fashionable apartment, the second time flashing a light in the sleeping face of 13-year-old Patricia Mountbatten, cousin and personal aide-de-camp of King George VI and sometimes referred to as England's richest little girl.

Her father, Lord Louis Mountbatten, who is a great-grandson of Queen Victoria, dismissed as "ridiculous" theories that spies or kidnapers had invaded his 30-room penthouse last Sunday and Thursday nights.

A dozen homes in London's fashionable West End have been looted of more than $50,000 in valuables in the last six weeks.

When the intruder appeared Thursday night, Lord and Lady Mountbatten were at dinner. Their daughters, Patricia and Pamela, 8, were asleep. The man went into Patricia's room.

"She was awakened by a torch being flashed in her room," stated Lord Mountbatten. "Coolly she rang the bell. Within two minutes Scotland Yard men were on the scene. The man had been on the verandah and we assume he escaped over the roofs."

TRAINING OF PUBLIC LEADERS

Phi Beta Head Commends Objective to Colleges.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 30.—Dr. Frank Pierepont Graves, national head of Phi Beta Kappa, advocated today wise selection and higher training for leaders in social, political and religious life.

In an address at a founders' day celebration at Washington and Jefferson College, Dr. Graves, who is State Commissioner of Education of New York, asserted a college could have "no more worthy objective" than the production of leaders. His speech preceded the installation of a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at the college, founded 157 years ago by John McMillan and Thadeus Dod, Calvinistic preachers.

BOUND OVER AS EMBEZZLER

Suspended Texas County Circuit Clerk Accused of Fee Thefts.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HOUSTON, Mo., Oct. 30.—William F. Carty, suspended Circuit Clerk and Recorder of Texas County, was bound over to Circuit Court on a charge of embezzlement after a hearing today before Justice W. L. Kenney. He was released on bond of $1000. The charge involves $60 in offiical fees alleged to be due Sheriff Andy H. Johnson.

Four charges against Carty are set for trial in Circuit Court, which opens Nov. 8—three of embezzlement of fees and one of taking whisky from a warehouse here. Carty was suspended by Circuit Judge W. E. Barton in July.

MAN IN AUTOMOBILE KILLED BY TRAIN

Edward McCabe Fatally Hurt in Accident Near Granite City.

Edward McCabe, 65 years old, owner of a filling station on Rural Route 2 near Granite City, died last night at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Granite City, of head injuries suffered a few hours earlier when his automobile was struck and demolished by a freight train at an unguarded crossing about five miles northeast of Granite City.

There were no witnesses to the accident. A farmer living near the scene of the accident said motorists using the crossing were often blinded by afternoon sun. His wife survives him.

Driver's Head Injured in Crash After He Faints at Wheel.

Robert M. Heuchan, a salesman, 6019 Washington avenue, suffered head injuries yesterday afternoon when his automobile ran over a curb on Skinker road, just south of Clayton avenue, and hit a tree. He is at City Hospital.

His wife, who had been riding with him, told police her husband apparently fainted, and that the car got out of control before she could stop it.

Wife Loses Hand in Crash After Husband Swerves to Miss Boy.

Mrs. George Schuler, 58 years old, 3426A Indiana avenue, suffered a broken right arm and severe lacerations of the right wrist which necessitated amputation of the right hand at City Hospital when an automobile driven by her husband overturned last night on Arsenal street near Jamieson avenue. He had swerved suddenly to avoid hitting a boy on a bicycle.

The boy did not remain at the scene. Schuler, 65 years old, was taken to the Mounted Police Station where he was charged with careless driving and felonious wounding.

FRATERNAL BODIES TO SEE NEW INSURANCE CHIEF

Robertson to Meet Representatives of Companies Whose Licenses O'Malley Suspended.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 30. — George A. S. Robertson, State Superintendent of Insurance, said today he would confer next week with representatives of two fraternal companies whose licenses were suspended by R. Emmet O'Malley, former superintendent. Representatives of the Knights of Columbus will meet him here Monday and those of the Modern Woodmen of America Friday.

"They asked for conferences to discuss the general situation pertaining to fraternal companies," Robertson said. "Formal applications for the reinstatement of licenses have not been made."

Robertson was appointed Oct. 19 by Gov. Stark to succeed O'Malley.

MAN FIRES IN CROWDED CAFE; KILLS TWO AND WOUNDS ONE

Felled With Ball Bat, He Says He "Lost a Lot of Money in a Poker Game."

By the Associated Press.

WEIRTON, W. Va., Oct. 30.—Frank Strabitinsky, 35-year-old steel worker, walked into the crowded Blossom Cafe in downtown Weirton today and emptied his pistol into a group at one table, killing two and wounding one.

Deputy Sheriff S. E. Exley said a cook ran out to the street after Strabitinsky and felled him with a baseball bat. The men killed were George Polanakis, 36, father of three, and Frank Pashkoss, 40.

Exley quoted Strabitinsky, who was taken to the jail at New Cumberland, as saying he had "lost a lot of money last night in a poker game."

ST. LOUISAN SELLS RARE BOOK FOR $1150

Disposes of One of Five Copies of Old Indian Fighter's Story Published in 1846.

An old Indian fighter's story earned a $200 profit overnight for a St. Louis book dealer, it transpired yesterday when Edwin I. Hyke, the dealer, announced the sale of a copy of Gen. Thomas James' "Three Years Among the Indians and Mexicans" to Everett D. Graff, president of a Chicago steel concern, for $1150.

The 130-page book in its yellow paper covers is one of five known copies of the work, Tyke says. He purchased it for $950 on Friday from the Rev. Henry H. Regent, librarian of St. Louis University. The copy was found in the university library last spring.

Published at Waterloo, Ill., in 1846, it soon became a rarity because the author sought to suppress it when it was assailed by newspaper critics. A reprint was issued some time ago by the Missouri Historical Society which is the owner of one of the first editions. Graff has another copy, and others are in the possession of another Chicagoan and the New York State Library at Albany.

James, who lived in Monroe County, Ill., dictated the book to Nathaniel Niles at Belleville. Because it is one of the few first hand accounts of the Western fur trade, it is important as source material for American historians. In it James described his trading and fighting from New Mexico to the Yellowstone, as well as encounters with Lewis and Clarke, John Colter, Ramsay Crooks and other figures of the frontier.

MAN ARRESTED AT HOTEL ADMITS HE IS LIFE-TERMER

Says He "Walked Off" From Arkansas Penitentiary, Where He Was Trusty.

A man arrested Friday at a Locust street hotel, where he was employed, admitted under questioning by Chief of Detectives John J. Carroll yesterday that he was Lucius Newton, an escaped life-termer from the Arkansas Penitentiary at Gould.

Newton, 38 years old, said he "walked off" from the penitentiary June 8. He was a trusty. He stated he killed a man for paying attentions to his wife and he felt he did not receive a fair trial. After signing a waiver of extradition, Newton was returned to a cell to await the arrival of Arkansas officers.

The man at first denied he was Newton. His admission came after police had found his fingerprints tallied with those of the escaped Arkansas convict.

Attorney Weds Chicago Girl.

Burt A. Kaemmerer, an attorney, and Miss Claire Buchanan, 180 East Delaware street, Chicago, were married Friday night in a ceremony performed by Justice of the Peace George R. Hart, against whom an ouster suit is pending on the ground that the petition under which he was appointed to office is defective. The bride gave her age as 27 and her occupation as a singer. Kaemmerer has been married twice previously, each marriage ending in divorce.

Mysterious Decimo Club Revived With New Name

Organization Now Known as the Mantle—Even Members Are Not Told of Purposes and Objectives.

The old Decimo Club, a mysterious fraternal organization which enrolled 1000 members in St. Louis and 75,000 throughout the country before its bubble burst 10 years ago, is back again, known now as the Mantle Club.

St. Louis headquarters have been established in the Roosevelt Hotel, Delmar boulevard and Euclid avenue, in charge of Robert J. Burns, formerly a cigar salesman. Each Monday evening about 75 earnest young men attend a club meeting at the hotel. Presumably that represents about the total membership so far enrolled here, for the Mantle Club is very strict in its insistence that members attend meetings regularly.

The purposes and objectives of the club are no clearer than were those of the Decimo Club—not even to Mantle Club members. Inquiries of outsiders are met with vague generalities, and members fare no better.

"Benefit of the World."

Burns told a Post-Dispatch reporter: "Our members know that first we must have a united, great organization. After that, we are going to prove to the doubters outside just what men of our character can do for the benefit of the world at large."

A Cleveland newspaper reporter who joined the Mantle Club there learned no more about it in the two months he was a member than Burns disclosed in his statement.

Nothing is promised to members, the Cleveland reporter said in a series of articles written for his paper, but the members are told of a "definite plan" in the mind of the founder, Hugh B. Monjar, and there is talk of "group power" which will achieve the "definite plan."

For this, and the companionship which association with other members affords, Mantle Club members pay an initiation fee of $20 and dues of $2 a month.

All the money, Burns told the Post-Dispatch reporter, is used in organization work. "Look," he said, "it takes money to pay my salary and keep me in this hotel, doesn't it? Well, where do you suppose it comes from?"

Prospects Told of Flop.

One curious thing about the Mantle Club, and it was true too of the Decimo Club, which Monjar founded in 1925, is the distinctly "low pressure" method of soliciting members. Mantle Club prospects are not urged to join, they receive the "opportunity." When they have paid their $20, they are told all about the Decimo Club flop and the criticism to which that organization was subjected. Then their money is handed back to them. If they do not want to go ahead, they can back out.

Burns, anticipating from the reporter's visit that the club was in for some unfavorable publilcity, said he was glad of that. "Anyone who would be dissuaded from joining by anything a newspaper writer might say would be a poor man for the organization," he said.

Unofficially, Mantle Club members hear all sorts of rumors about what membership can do for them. There is talk of factories which the club will build, with the best jobs going to the hardest working club members. There is talk of great successes which members in other cities have somehow won through their club association. Nothing is definite, nothing is official.

1000 Members Expelled.

Monjar, guiding genius of the Mantle Club, started the Decimo Club in California in 1925. When the club had 1500 members, about 1000 became restless and critical. Promptly he expelled them, and, strangest of all, refunded their fees and dues. From that point on the membership expanded with phenomenal rapidity.

But here and there State officials and others began to wonder about the propriety of the Decimo Club. Better Business Bureaus published unfavorable reports. There was an official investigation in Wisconsin. The Missouri Securities Commissioner barred the club under the Blue Sky law, from selling memberships in this State. New York and California ousted the organization. The Massachusetts Attorney-General, criticised for his connection with the club, resigned when impeachment charges were voted and later was disbarred by the Supreme Court of his State. Monjar's associates expelled him from the organization and it collapsed in receivership in 1927.

All this is freely told to prospective Mantle Club members, and they are told almost nothing about what the Mantle Club holds for them except that Monjar has a "definite plan."

But the membership grows. Prospective members are told that membership in St. Louis will be limited to 2000. Cleveland now has more than 1500 members.

Social Security Office Changes.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. — The Internal Revenue Bureau announced today part of auditing duties of its Social Security tax unit here would be transferred to existing field offices as soon as feasible. The announcement said 300 employes to be dismissed here would be given preference in filling about the same number of positions in field offices.

MRS. HOLMES' ALIMONY SET AT $350 A MONTH

Former Anne Francis, Suing for Divorce, Had Asked Court for $750.

Mrs. Anne Francis Holmes obtained a grant of $350 a month temporary alimony pending the outcome of her divorce suit against John A. Holmes of the St. Louis Country Club Grounds, in a decision by Circuit Judge John A. Witthaus at Clayton yesterday.

The 23-year-old plaintiff, granddaughter of the late David R. Francis, one-time Governor of Missouri and Ambassador to Russia, had contended she needed $750 a month for support. Counsel for her husband, who is vice-president of the J. A. Holmes Lumber Co. and beneficiary of one-fourth of a $1,300,000 estate left in trust by his father, Robert Holmes, lumberman, on his death in 1934, contended she was asking for more than she needed, merely to punish Holmes. This was denied by her attorney.

She left their home at 460 South Price road, Ladue, last May 20 after a year and three months of marriage, when he told her "to get the hell out of the house and stay out," she testified Friday. After a vacation at a beach resort and a ranch she went to the home of her father, Thomas Francis, real estate dealer, at 6464 Ellenwood place, Clayton. She has been living there 71 days and has agreed to pay her father room and board at the rate of $8 a day, she said. Her accumulated expenses total $3114 and Holmes has given her only $100 to pay outstanding bills, according to testimony.

She said she was "a very lucky girl to have a family to take me in." Later, remarking that she had been leading "a very quiet life," she said, "I don't intend to live like a little girl. I'm not a little girl any more. I have definite ideas of my own and want to establish a home of my own."

Holmes, who is 28, testified that his income was $46,704 in 1936. The divorce petition alleges general indignities and charges persons not named by her poisoned his mind against her and alienated his affections. He has not yet filed an answer.

MAN KILLED BY AUTO IDENTIFIED

He Was Jacob A. Lusch, 60, 2104 South Ninth Street.

The body of a man killed Friday night when struck by an automobile in front of 2624 South Broadway was identified yesterday as Jacob A. Lusch, 60 years old, 2104 South Ninth street.

The driver, Charles Sills, 1312 South Third street, told police Lusch stepped from behind two parked cars and into the path of his northbound automobile.

AIRLINE EXECUTIVE QUESTIONS CRASH INQUIRER'S STATUS

DISPATCHER ADMITS FLIGHT PLAN FAULT

Concedes Pilot's Orders, as Written, Did Not Comply With Company's Altitude Regulations.

BY T. P. WAGNER,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 30.—The unexpected admission today by the chief dispatcher for United Air Lines that the flight plan for the fatal trip of the company's Mainliner the night of Oct. 17, as written, was in violation of regulations, precipitated a tense situation in the public inquiry into the crash. The development was followed by an apparent attempt by an executive of the air line to halt further direct questioning of witnesses by Utah's Aeronautics Commissioner, W. D. Hammond.

The hearing, which has for its purpose the determination of causes of the crash in which 19 persons died, adjourned late today until Monday morning.

Hammond, a former Mormon bishop, who is sitting in an advisory capacity on the Department of Commerce Accident Board, took over the questioning of witnesses yesterday and developed the interesting testimony that the flight plan, on its face, was in conflict with regulations in specifying instrument flying over a portion of the 392-mile course from Cheyenne to Salt Lake City without noting that altitude should be changed from 10,000 to 12,000 feet, as provided in company rules. The plane, testimony has shown, crashed head-on into a mountain side when flying at 10,200 feet, about 16 miles south of the regular course.

"Not Within Regulations."

Frank E. Caldwell, chief dispatcher, was asked by Hammond if the flight plan, on its face, was in conflict with the rules. He replied: "I would say there was a conflict in the flight plan and that it is not within regulations."

Caldwell then expressed the opinion that there was no intention on the part of Pilot Earl Woodgerd to operate at 10,000 feet on instruments during the latter part of the trip.

Caldwell and R. M. Gallagher, the dispatcher who sent the air liner on its way, then sought to explain that the flight plan under discussion was superseded by a subsequent plan of operations, which the witnesses termed a "preliminary flight plan." At this point Miller C. Foster, chairman of the Accident Board, presented the following hypothetical question to the flushed and uncomfortable Caldwell: "If this pilot had gone to 12,000 feet on instruments and run into an icing condition, which would cause him to crash, would you not have for the record at such an inquiry as this a piece of paper to show that he should have stayed at 10,000 feet?"

Caldwell's reply was: "I can't imagine it."

"You may not imagine it, but it is in the record." Foster commented.

"The flight plan reads that way, but to carry it out is a violation of regulations," Caldwell hastened to explain.

"Then you, and by that I mean your department, gave him a plan in violation of regulations?" Foster asked.

"Yes, that is true," the witness replied.

Time "To Do It Right."

Hammond asked Caldwell if Woodgerd and Gallagher, who collaborated on the flight plan, could have taken time "to do it right." The witness replied, "It would seem so."

Gallagher, who yesterday started Hammond searching for dispatching irregularities by remarking that Pilot Woodgerd had failed to make the 12,000-foot entry in the flight plan, was recalled to the stand. The dispatcher again aroused Hammond's interest with the statement that he was certain Pilot Woodgerd had definite knowledge that the dispatcher had accurately written the subsequent, or "preliminary," flight plan, dictated by the pilot, although he had overlooked Woodgerd's omission in the first document.

"How did he know it?" Hammond demanded.

"Because he saw me do it," the harrassed witness replied. He then offered an unusual explanation. He and Woodgerd stood side by side as they put the final touches to the two documents termed "flight plan" and "preliminary flight plan." Gallagher is left-handed and, he explained, he stood at Woodgerd's right affording the pilot an unobstructed view of what was being written on the preliminary plan. He failed, however, to notice that Woodgerd had not written "12,000 feet" into the other plan until after the plane had departed.

"Would you say," Hammond asked, "that these plans were so unimportant, of such small concern, that your being left-handed would explain and excuse you for not knowing what Woodgerd had done?"

Hammond's Right Established.

Maj. R. W. Schroeder, vice-president in charge of operations for United Air Lines, interrupted Hammond with the request that Foster's opening statement, delivered last Tuesday, be read. It was his understanding, Shroeder stated, that the Accident Board was to consist of three men and technical advisers and that board members were to ask questions, while all other persons concerned would be permitted to submit questions in writing for the board to present to witnesses.

Foster, whose manner had been extremely tolerant, stiffened and read part of his opening statement, which definitely established Hammond's right to interrogate witnesses. The statement added that, "Should some interested person conceive that something has been overlooked, he may write his question and submit it to the board."

Schroeder, who had been permitted to interrupt testimony by other witnesses "to clarify the record," found himself in the position of having called for a ruling which could well be construed as precluding such practices in the future. He was undismayed, however, thanked the chairman and offered the statement, "to clear the record," that a plan of operations adopted by a dispatcher and a pilot "could have been by the spoken word."

"There is no requirement that the plan be on paper," Schroeder asserted. "I admit it is good practice to have the essential details appear on paper, but the flight plan about which there has been so much said here could be left in the waste basket. The actual flight plan is the subsequent matter, dictated by the pilot before he leaves, and sent by radio to the terminal to which he is flying."

Visual Contact Flying.

In Woodgerd's case the subsequent, or "preliminary" flight plan, specified "intermittent instruments," instead of "instruments," as in the original plan. Air line witnesses have testified they interpreted intermittent instruments to mean visual contact flying, for which 10,000 feet is the prescribed level for the course involved.

After Schroeder completed his explanation, Foster stated for the record that "the paper we are discussing comes from your record and bears the written identification, 'flight plan.'"

The developments resulting from the efforts of Hammond, who also is State Road Commissioner and knows little of aviation, bear out a statement by J. E. Garn, director of the State Aeronautics Commission. Garn, who is present as adviser to Hammond, told a reporter, "This State Commission is not a rubber stamp." Hammond told the reporter that the commission, established by legislature this year, has the power to conduct a separate hearing, but has no inclination to do so. In view of his activities so far, little that would be new could be brought out at a separate inquiry.

Eleven of 13 men arrested following a raid on pinball games here July 3 have pleaded guilty to date.

1932 DELINQUENT TAX BILL SALE TO BE TOMORROW

Offering Totals About $3,000,000; Similar Bidding at Clayton and Other County Seats.

Delinquent real estate tax bills for 1932 and previous years will be offered for sale at the Civil Courts Building at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning under the Jones-Munger law. Similar sales of county tax bills will be held at Clayton and in other county seats of the State.

Collector William F. Baumann said the city bills total about $3,000,000. He expressed the opinion that the city would bid in for the amount of the bills those which will be offered for the third time. On the first two occasions on which a bill is put up the bid must be at least as much as the delinquency and penalties, but on the third offering the highest bid is accepted.

Out for State Senate at Stover, Mo.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 30.—Charles E. Hasty of Stover, Mo., announced his candidacy today for the Democratic nomination for State Senator from the fourteenth District in the 1938 primary. The district, comprising Camden, Morgan, Moniteau, Cooper and Howard Counties, is now represented by Will G. Lockridge, Fayette, who will seek the Democratic nomination for Congressman in the Second District next year. Hasty is employed at the state penitentiary.

DETROIT TO VOTE TUESDAY ON C I O MAN FOR MAYOR

450,000 Ballots, a Record Number, Expected to Be Cast in Election Following Hot Campaign.

A. F. OF L. CANDIDATE BEATEN IN PRIMARY

But Organization Backs R. W. Reading, So-Called Conservative, as Against Patrick O'Brien.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Oct. 30. — The City Election Commission estimates 450,000 votes will be cast in Detroit's municipal election Tuesday, with the Committee for Industrial Organization making its first attempt to control the government of a major city.

Only 167,312 voters participated in the municipal election two years ago, but that campaign was devoid of the oratory that has characterized the campaign between Richard W. Reading, so-called conservative candidate for Mayor, a Republican, and Patrick H. O'Brien, a Democrat, standard bearer of the C I O.

The largest number of ballots ever cast in a strictly Detroit municipal election was 263,713 in 1931, when Frank Murphy, now Governor of Michigan, was re-elected Mayor.

That number was far exceeded at the primary four weeks ago when 327,000 voters went to the polls to nominate the two candidates for Mayor and the 18 candidates for nine City Council seats whose names will be on the ballot Tuesday. The number of registered voters increased from 611,000 to 625,000 in the week following the primary.

A. F. of L. Man Eliminated.

In the election, as in the primary, the American Federation of Labor is pitted against the C I O. The A. F. of L. backed former Mayor John W. Smith in the primary. He ran third and was eliminated from the mayoralty race.

Last week the Detroit and Wayne County Federation of Labor, composed of delegates from A. F. of L. unions, indorsed Reading. Dissenters, however, met the next night and formed a "joint committee for the election of Patrick H. O'Brien and the labor slate."

The entire C I O slate, consisting of O'Brien for Mayor and five candidates for the City Council, survived the primary. O'Brien, however, trailed Reading by nearly 39,000 votes, and the six incumbent councilmen who sought renomination led the highest C I O candidate in the council race.

C I O Could Control City.

Should the C I O elect all of its candidates, and should O'Brien, as Mayor, carry out his avowed intention of submitting appointments and matters of policy to the C I O Political Action Committee, the labor organization would have virtual control of the city government. The Mayor, whose salary is $15,000 a year, appoints more than 70 administrative officials, including the Police Commissioner. Five C I O Councilmen, if they voted as a unit, would control the city's legislative body.

C I O Test Also in Elections at Akron and Canton, O.

By the Associated Press.

AKRON, O., Oct. 30.—Akron and Canton mayoral candidates are completing intensive campaigns for next Tuesday's elections, which are expected to indicate C I O's ballot box power in these industrial centers.

Registered for Akron's election are 110,000 voters, a record for municipal campaigns in this rubber city. The opponents are Mayor Lee D. Schroy, Republican, completing his first two-year term, and Municipal Judge G. L. Patterson, Democrat, indorsed by Labor's Non-Partisan League.

In the steel center of Canton, 20 miles south, the campaign pits Mayor James Seccombe, Republican, completing three and a half years in office, against Darrell D. Smith, Democrat and 34-year-old labor leader.

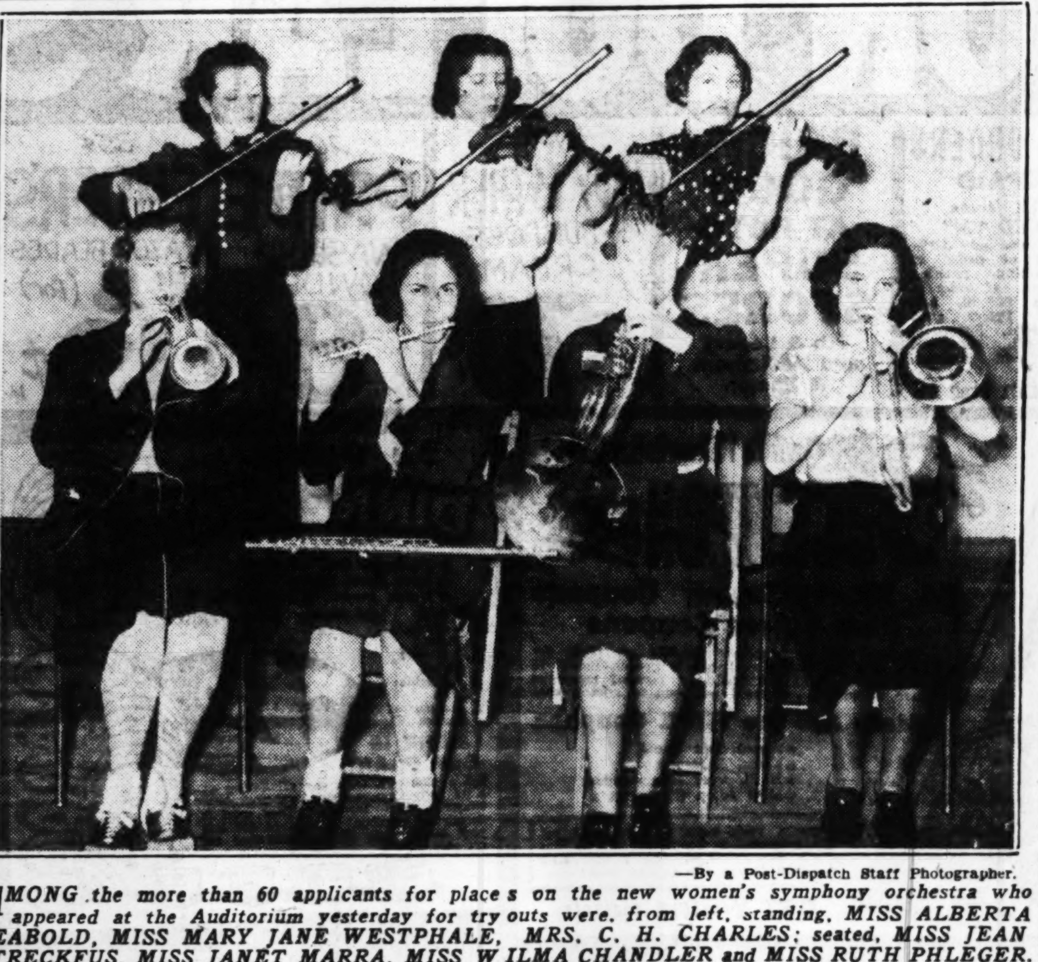
The Non-Partisan League claims A. F. of L. support for both labor candidates. Organized labor in both cities is dominantly C I O, as a result of intensive membership drives by the United Rubber Workers and the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee.

Mayors Schroy and Seccombe have stood on their cities' financial records.

Leaders of Akron's C I O United Rubber Workers berated Schroy after he called out police to keep open a fishing tackle manufacturing plant against which the C I O was directing a strike. Schroy is 50. Patterson, 34, was a National Labor Relations Board attorney until Jan. 1.

Smith went into union organization work when Canton milk wagon drivers organized several years ago. Mayor Seccombe, 45, was shop foreman at the Timken Roller Bearing Co. before entering politics.

Candidates for New Orchestra



—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

AMONG the more than 60 applicants for places on the new women's symphony orchestra who appeared at the Auditorium yesterday for try outs were, from left, standing, MISS ALBERTA SEABOLD, MISS MARY JANE WESTPHALE, MRS. C. H. CHARLES; seated, MISS JEAN STRECKFUS, MISS JANET MARRA, MISS WILMA CHANDLER and MISS RUTH PHLEGER.

Frank Balch, Inventor, Dies.

By the Associated Press.

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 30.—Frank Balch, inventor of the Balch Roentgen scopic screen, died today at his home. He was 56 years old. Balch's invention, in 1916, reduced the time required for taking an X-ray picture from 20 seconds to one-fifth of a second.

SENTENCED FOR KILLING DAUGHTER'S SUITOR IN JAIL

Everett Counts, Who Got 75 Years, Will Appeal; New Trial Denied.

By the Associated Press.

EMINENCE, Mo., Oct. 30. — Circuit Judge Will H. D. Green denied today a motion for new trial for Everett Counts, convicted of killing his daughter's suitor, Miller Crane. The Judge then formally sentenced Counts to serve 75 years in the penitentiary.

Attorneys for Counts will file an appeal, they said.

Counts was found guilty last Saturday of killing Crane while he was held in the county jail after an attempted elopement with Counts's daughter, Nadine.

SHAPLEIGH SIGNS WITH C I O

Hardware Company Recognizes Union and Increases Wages.

A labor agreement has been signed between the Shapleigh Hardware Co. for about 400 of its warehouse employes and the United Warehouse Workers' Local Industrial Union, the St. Louis regional office of the C I O announced yesterday.

Major provisions are recognition of the union as bargaining agency, wage increases up to 15 per cent, a 40-hour week and time and a half for overtime. A day's notice of a lay-off is provided in the agreement.

KANSAS U. COMMUNIST INQUIRY

Committee Named to Investigate Alleged Radical Activities.

By the Associated Press.

MANHATTAN, Kan., Oct. 30.—A committee to investigate alleged Communist activities at the University of Kansas was appointed today by the board of regents. The investigation was brought about at the behest of Ed Henry of Dodge City, father of Don Henry, University of Kansas student, who was reported killed in Spain while with the loyalist army.

H. L. Snyder, member of the board of regents, was appointed chairman. Other members are Charles Scott, chairman of the University Endowment Association, and Ralph O'Neil, a member of the board of regents. The committee will report to the board Nov. 13.

37 OF 60 WIN PLACES IN WOMEN'S SYMPHONY

Miss Ethel Hayward of Ballwin, Mo., Named Concertmaster After Tryouts.

Thirty-seven woman musicians were selected for membership in the new St. Louis Women's Symphony Orchestra in preliminary auditions yesterday at 1113 Olive street, Miss Edith Gordon, the director, said last night. There were about 60 applicants.

Miss Ethel Hayward of Ballwin, Mo., was named concertmaster by Miss Gordon and the four judges, all members of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. Miss Hayward has appeared as soloist with the St. Louis Symphony, Miss Gordon said.

Miss Louise Zupf, 826 Clara avenue, was selected first cellist and Miss Lina Anton of St. Louis, head of the viola group. Six women from Collinsville, Ill., were accepted as members of the woodwind and bass horn sections.

When complete the orchestra, which is being formed after the success of similar organizations in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, will have about 60 members, Miss Gordon said. She pointed out that most of the applicants yesterday were under 30 years old.

A second audition will be held tomorrow night, preceding the opening rehearsal. When formed, the orchestra will hold rehearsals once a week and give a concert in the spring.

Miss Gordon, one of the original sponsors, has studied under Rudolph Ganz, former director of the St. Louis Symphony, and is pianist for the St. Louis Symphony Chorus. During the summer, she is pianist for the Municipal Opera.

Judges at the audition included Herbert Van den Burg, viola player; R. M. Zottarelle, clarinetist; Alfred Hicks, english horn player, and Joseph Gustat, trumpeter, all members of the St. Louis Symphony.

Escapes From Jail at Cassville.

CASSVILLE, Mo., Oct. 30.—Tommy Embry, 16 years old, who was held in the Barry County jail charged with the theft of two automobiles, escaped by picking the lock into the jail hallway, then breaking the lock on the outside door. His cellmate claims to have been asleep during the break.

CHURCH BACKS RIGHT OF LABOR TO ORGANIZE

Disciples of Christ Convention Ignores Pleas to Keep Out of Affairs of State.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 30.—The international convention of the Churches of Christ (Disciples) indorsed labor's right to organize in a resolution adopted tonight at its final business session, disregarding pleas to keep the church from interfering with affairs of state.

The convention called on church members to help maintain the constitutional rights of assembly and speech in communities where labor tension exists; urged religious organizations to "recognize the right of their laborers" to support organized labor, and "in a spirit of penitence for its own divided loyalties" deplored evidences of division in the ranks of organized labor.

Informed churchmen said they thought it was the first time that the convention, representing a denomination of about 1,800,000 members, had indorsed collective bargaining.

Beverly Jouett, an attorney of Winchester, Ky., asked "why does the church want to get into this business of running the state? I say to you, that we're going to get ourselves into the worst jam that any church ever got into if we attempt to regulate hours, wages, the C I O, the A. F. of L. and other things."

The Rev. H. Austin Smith of Coffeyville, Kan., supporting the resolution, asserted: "We're only telling the laboring man that we're for him in his search for a more abundant life. Many laborers think the church is the friend of the employers and not of the laborers. I want to assure the laborer that the church is for him, too."

Three pacifist resolutions were adopted. One asserted "we cannot condemn the actions of nations which resort to force to gain national objectives without accepting our share of guilt for the world situation;" recommended that the United States surrender its right to maintain armed forces in China, and opposed use of a governmental boycott "because of our conviction that such movement increased the likelihood of war."

The two others expressed opposition to compulsory military training in colleges and to the sale of toy guns and cannons.

Other resolutions adopted, urged the enactment of a Federal anti-lynching bill; proposed a closer fellowship with the Congregational-Christian churches, and referred to the Association for the Promotion of Christian Unity a proposal for organization of a United Church of America, to which all the Protestant denominations would grant full authority in national and international affairs and in foreign missionary administration.

FOUR EX-OFFICERS OF BANK AT GRAYVILLE PLEAD GUILTY

Three Fined $400, Other $300 for Embezzlement and Misapplication of Funds.

By the Associated Press.

DANVILLE, Ill., Oct. 30.—Four former officers and directors of the Farmers' National Bank of Grayville, Ill., pleaded guilty in Federal Court today of embezzlement and misapplication of bank funds.

U. S. Judge Walter C. Lindley imposed $400 fines on Francis R. Bowman, 56 years old, who was president of the bank; Edwin P. Bowman, 57, his brother, and George F. Bowman, 40, son of Edwin. Another brother, Albert H. Bowman, was fined $300.

The indictments charged that from 1934 to 1936 the four misapplied bank funds by fraudulent loans to the George P. Bowman & Sons Co., of which they were incorporators, and others. They denied criminal intent.

Disposition of one count of the indictment against the four was continued for three years. No disposition was made of similar charges against Samuel A. Gilpin, another officer of the closed bank and relative by marriage to Francis R. Bowman.

COOLEST OCTOBER HERE IN 12 YEARS

Mean Temperature 3 Degrees Below Normal in Spite of Warm Spells.

In spite of unusually warm weather during the last few days, the month ending today was the coolest October here in 12 years, records of the Weather Bureau show. Mean temperature for the month was 56 degrees, almost 3 degrees below normal.

However, Friday's 85-degree temperature was the highest on record for so late in the year. Even that was not the warmest day of the month, the temperature having reached 89 on Oct. 1. Oct. 5 was another unusually warm day, the temperature having been 10 degrees above normal for that date.

On the cooler side of the weather chart, the temperature fell to 32 on both the 14th and 23d. There were cool spells from Oct. 7 to 9, from the 13th to the 17th and from the 21st to the 24th. The last two periods averaged 13 degrees below normal, with one day in each of those periods averaging as low as 20 degrees below normal.

The freezing temperature on Oct. 23 killed much vegetation, although there had already been light frost on the 8th, 10th and 14th and heavy frost Oct. 15. Oct. 23 is, therefore, considered the end of the growing season for this year.

The first trace of snow fell on the 22d and again the following day. Rain fell on 16 days, with thunderstorms on the 4th and 5th. The total precipitation was 3.51 inches, or .79 inch above normal.

The river stage, however, was far below normal all month, the average being 2.4 feet below zero. That is the lowest October mean river stage on record. Normal stage for the month in 7.9 feet.

Dense smoke irritated throats and caused discomfort on the 10th and 24th. In addition, dense fog was noted on the 5th and 18th.

U. S. NAVY RECEIVES BIDS ON 216 BOMBERS

Five Manufacturers' Offers Total $18,597,000 for Machines and Parts.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The Navy announced today the prospective purchase of 216 new bombing planes, publishing bids from five manufacturers aggregating $18,597,898 for machines and spare parts.

The bids were asked for in secret, and specifications and other details were withheld. Officials said part or all might be rejected, and predicted no awards would be made for two months or more.

The Glenn L. Martin Co., Baltimore, was sole bidder on one lot of 14. Patrol bomber planes, bidding $2,086,606 on the machines themselves and $3,698,849 on spare parts, data, drawings and tests.

The Curtiss-Wright Corporation, Curtiss Aeroplane Division, Buffalo, N. Y., was sole bidder on one lot of 31 scout bombers and spare parts at $1,690,174, and 58 other scout bombers at $2,928,274.

The Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, San Diego, Cal., bid $4,957,237 on a lot which included 24 patrol bombers and spare parts. On the same lot, the United Aircraft Corporation, Sikorsky Aircraft Division, Stratford, Conn., bid $6,073,794.

The United Aircraft Corporation, Chance Vought Aircraft Division, East Hartford, Conn., bid $1,897,670 on a separate lot of 31 scout bombers and spare parts, and $3,425,694 on another lot of 58 scout bombers and parts.

On the same lots the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation, Long Island City, N. Y., bid $2,267,160 and $3,680,400, respectively.

WHEAT EXPORT SURPLUS PUT AT 132,100,000 BU.

Estimate of World Supply in Excess of Requirements Does Not Include Russia, China.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Oct. 30.—A world wheat export surplus of 3,600,000 metric tons (about 132,100,000 bushels) from the 1937 crop was forecast today by the Institute of Agriculture.

This estimate did not include the Russian and Chinese crops. The Russian is said to be large; the Chinese poor.

Added to the estimated export surplus are 2,900,000 metric tons remaining from previous surpluses. A metric ton amounts to 36.7 bushels.

Probable requirements of importing countries, the institute said, would be 14,500,000 metric tons. The quantity available for export from exporting countries from the 1937 crops was put at 18,100,000 tons, leaving a 3,600,000-ton surplus.

World production exclusive of Russia and China was estimated to be 9 per cent higher than in 1936, due chiefly to increased production in the United States.

WON'T JOIN ANTI-NAZI PROTEST

Federation of German Societies Not Interested. Leader Says.

The St. Louis Federation of German Societies will not participate in the anti-Nazi demonstration by the St. Louis Council for American Democracy during the Amerika-Deutscher Volksbund convention here Nov. 20 and 21, H. A. Homeyer, president of the Federation, said yesterday.

A letter invited the organibation to take part was read at a meeting Friday night at the German House, attended by delegates representing the 27 German societies composing the Federation. No action was taken but Homeyer said the Federation was not interested since it was formed to promote friendship among German people.

NAVY PLANS MASS FLIGHTS TO HAWAII AND CANAL ZONE

Purpose Is to Deliver New Planes and to Provide Training for Crews.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. — The Navy is arranging for mass flights of patrol craft, probably within the next few months, to Hawaii and the Panama Canal Zone, officials disclosed today.

One group of flying boats will leave early in December for Coco Solo, Canal Zone, and in March another group will undertake the 2400-mile flight from the Pacific Coast to Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

Officials said the planes would be replacements for less modern craft and that they would be "ferried" by air as a matter of economy and for training of crews.

In naval circles it was said 14 planes would be flown from San Diego, Cal., to the Canal Zone and 12 from the same base to Hawaii. Department officials said, however, the number and other details had not been finally decided.

ROOSEVELT TALKS TO PEACE FLIGHT GROUP

Urges People's Mandate Deputies to Emphasize Sanctity of Treaties.

By the Associated Press.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Oct. 30.—President Roosevelt urged deputies of the People's Mandate Committee today to emphasize on a 17,000-mile all-America peace flight that treaties are not scraps of paper. The President expressed the belief that progress in the Americas toward peace in the past four years has had a great effect in other parts of the world. He said the effect had been perhaps greater than would be realized from reading of the belligerent attitude of some other countries.

The people all over the world are beginning to say to themselves, the President asserted, that in the Western Hemisphere there is the most interesting thing that has ever happened—a whole continent has abolished war and has provided the machinery so any question between nations may be peaceably settled.

The Americas also, he said, have set an example to the rest of the world in treaty adherence.

Ratification Campaign.

Mr. Roosevelt received the People's Mandate group a few hours before four representatives of the organization set out to urge republics in Latin-America to ratify the anti-war and commercial treaties which came from the 1936 Buenos Aires conference. They also hope to give such publicity to the treaties as to promote popular sentiment for ratification and adherence.

The Buenos Aires conference was called and attended by Mr. Roosevelt. Since its adjournment nearly a year ago, the United States, Ecuador, Santo Domingo and Nicaragua have ratified the treaties proposed. Venezuela has ratified some of them. Sixteen American nations have not yet acted.

The deputies, who left here to start their southward flight, from Newark tonight, are Mrs. Burton W. Musser of Salt Lake City, only woman member of the United States delegation to the Buenos Aires conference; Mrs. Ana del Pulgar de Burke of Washington, D. C., a native Chilean; Mrs. Enoch Wesley Frost of Texarkana, Ark., and Mrs. Rebecca Hourwich Reyher of New York City.

They were introduced to the President by Dr. Mary E. Woolley, president emeritus of Mt. Holyoke College and chairman of the mandate committee.

A large delegation of members of the committee, including several men, met the flying deputies here and were present for the interview with the President.

In talking to them about the treaties, Mr. Roosevelt asked what was the use of making treaties if the world as a whole was in the frame of mind to violate them on the spur of the moment or use them to meet temporary needs. Wishing the delegates God speed, he expressed a desire to go with them, asserting he hoped during the next four years to go down the west coast of South America as far as Chile.

He said also he was working with the Maritime Commission to put into operation a steamship line down the east coast of South America, so travel between this and the Latin-American countries would be speedier and more comfortable than at present. He said he thought that next year there would be such a new steamship service.

The President said his trip to South America last year was an amazing experience he could never forget; that the trip of the peace deputies should be followed by other agencies—commercial, educational, scientific and those in all other fields of human effort.

Hopes to Extend Its Scope.

Dr. Woolley, who talked to newsmen after the delegation's visit with the President, said the peoples mandate organization was devoting itself to the American situation now, but hoped to extend its work to the rest of the world. She said Asiatic and European strife were not discussed by her group with Mr. Roosevelt.

The deputies will reach Miami tomorrow, accompanied by Miss Jacqueline Cochran, the flyer. From Miami, the deputies will fly to Havana.

After meeting the peace deputation the President was visited by Harry L. Hopkins, the Works Progress administrator. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau went to his farm at nearby Fishkill this morning after staying overnight at the Roosevelt home. Morgenthau and Under Secretary Magill worked with the President on the budget last night.

HALLOWEEN CELEBRATION MORE ORDERLY THAN USUAL

Three False Fire Alarms and Firing of Air Rifle by Boy Are Chief Offenses.

An unusually quiet celebration of Hallowe'en was reported by police last night, the most serious offenses up to midnight being the turning in of three false fire alarms and the only arrest that of a 9-year-old Negro boy for shooting an air rifle at his playmates.

There were the usual window rappings and the soaping of automobile and store windows, leading in some cases to calls for police. Police put out a bonfire, started by celebrators in the 4400 block of Olive street, and took due note of the extinguishing of gas street lights in the 8800 block of Lowell street.

Because Hallowe'en falls this year on Sunday (Oct. 31), the occasion generally was observed last night.

DEATH UNDER INQUIRY

MISS HELEN GRIER, PONTIAC (Mich.) stenographer, who was found shot to death in a hunting cabin north of Sault Ste. Marie., a rifle beside her. Her companion, Vernon Spencer, of Wixom, Mich., who said he was absent when the shooting occurred, was held as a material witness when medical examination indicated the bullet's course was such that Miss Grier could not have shot herself.

YOUTH BURIED IN SAND BANK TELLS OF NIGHT OF TERROR

Says He "Cried a Little and Prayed a Lot" While 100 Men Worked to Rescue Him.

By the Associated Press.

CHELMSFORD, Mass., Oct. 30.—How he "cried a little and prayed a lot" while more than 100 men worked all night to rescue him from a sand bank that collapsed and buried him was told from his hospital cot today by 19-year-old Manuel Camacho.

Camacho was helping load a truck when the sand bank caved in on top of him yesterday afternoon.

"I couldn't breathe," he said, "I knew I was going to die. Then I felt some one's fingers clutching at my hair through the sand. I cried 'don't let that thing come down again.'

"My father came down and talked to me. Things were becoming hazy and far away. Someone gave me some brandy and later coffee and a sandwich."

Because fresh slides engulfed Camacho as fast as rescuers dug the sand away, a plank barricade was built to shore up the 35-foot sand bank, and Camacho was extricated at dawn. At the hospital he was treated for general exhaustion. No broken bones were found.

Fall Down Elevator Shaft Fatal.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 30.—William Stowman, 17 years old, died Thursday of injuries suffered in a fall down an elevator shaft. A junior at Central High School, he occasionally operated the elevator at the Ivanhoe Temple. He stepped into the shaft at the fourth floor, apparently believing the elevator was at that floor, and fell to the top of the elevator which was at the first floor.

SENATORS HEAR ILLINOIS CRITICS OF CROP CONTROL

Two Make Unscheduled Appearance at Hearing to Refute Rumor That Witness List Is Packed.

OTHERS TELL BOARD THEY FAVOR PLAN

Agricultural Groups Praise Program, Then Wire Wallace Asking Him to Help Effect Regulation.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 30.—Two Illinois farmers made an unscheduled appearance before a Senate agriculture sub-committee today to oppose crop production control as a solution to the agricultural problem.

Their testimony was invited by Senator Thomas of Oklahoma to refute rumors that the witness list had been "packed" with farmers receiving financial aid under the Federal conservation program and consequently sympathetic to any Government plan.

A. C. Helleman of Tremont, Ill., said the problem was one of marketing and not production.

"You can't limit production on a farm like in a factory," he said. "We can't put meters on our wheat or corn field, nor on our sows"

Helleman said one year he may get 12,000 bushels of corn from 60 acres and the next, 5000.

Under a crop reduction program, Helleman asserted, a crop failure leads to importation. He said he had seen trainloads of Argentine and South African corn coming into the processing plants in the Peoria-Pekin area.

Helleman said the farmer needed the assurance of minimum prices for his commodities.

Assails "Policy of Poverty."

Also unscheduled, William E. Tanner of Kankakee said the problem was one of under-consumption rather than over-production. Advocating a marketing program, Tanner said that "We're treading on dangerous ground when we establish a policy of poverty rather than one of plenty."

Opposition to crop control was not evident, however, in all the unscheduled testimony. Taking exception to the implication that Government aid had colored some of the testimony, Floyd E. Morris of Buffalo, Ill., secretary-treasurer of the Sangamon County Agricultural Conservation Association, said he didn't believe such help for work done would alter a farmer's opinion in regard to legislation for the good of all farmers.

Vaugh Douglas of McLean County said 90 per cent of the farmers in his county would go along on a voluntary production control plan. He said parity prices would make the need for Government benefits unnecessary.

Appeal Sent to Wallace.

Earlier, representatives of Illinois agricultural organizations called on Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to support proposals for a Government loan of at least 60 cents a bushel on the 1937 corn crop. They sent an appeal to Wallace after telling the sub-committee yesterday that a falling cash market made a corn loan imperative.

Some of the farmers who appeared at the sub-committee hearing insisted the loan should be as high as $1 per bushel, but at a meeting last night they voted, 30 to 1, to ask for a 60-cent loan.

The sub-committee, consisting of Senators Thomas of Oklahoma, Frazier of North Dakota and Ellender of Louisiana, is touring the farm belt to gauge sentiment on agricultural measures to be introduced at the special session of Congress.

The Senators were told Illinois farmers were almost unanimously in favor of administration proposals for crop production control and the ever-normal granary plan. Declaring such legislation was necessary to stabilize the livestock industry, livestock farmers joined grain farmers in urging enactment of production control and granary laws.

Majority for Program.

A majority of farmers who appeared before the sub-committee advocated continuation of the present soil conservation program.

Earl C. Smith, president of the Illinois Agricultural Association, which claims a membership of 72,000 farm families, said a 60-cent corn loan would add $500,000,000 to the value of the 1937 corn crop.

Fred Winterroth, representative of the United States Farmers' Organization at Bloomington, told the sub-committee "prices can never be stabilized until the Chicago Board of Trade can be made to quit the buying and selling of hundreds of millions of bushels of grain that never were produced," he said.

Congressman Scott W. Lucas of Havana informed the Senators he favored an immediate corn loan of 60 cents a bushel. Senator William H. Dieterich of Illinois said he would support any farm bill recommended by the Senate Committee.

Senator Thomas said the sub-committee hoped to have a farm bill enacted by the first of the year, but if not, it would be considered early in the next regular session of Congress.

The principal opposition to a control program was voiced by Robert Spencer, Monticello, Ind., president of the Indiana Farmers' Union. He said he opposed controlled production "100 per cent" but added that sufficient loans offered the only solution to the farm problem. Spencer said if the farmer is given cost of production, he will conserve his own soil, without any definite program.

ILLINOIS RAIL RATE HEARING

Set for Nov. 8 for Any Objections to Increases.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 30.—The Illinois Commerce Commission set a hearing today for Monday, Nov. 8, in Chicago, for any objections to the new increased freight rates on intra-state shipments.

The commission authorized the Illinois railroads to publish the same rates on intra-state freight as were approved Oct. 19 by the Interstate Commerce Commission for interstate freight. Unless suspended by the commission, the Illinois rates will become effective on five days' notice after new tariffs are filed with both the Interstate and Illinois commissions.

LESTON'S

Cooking School Daily Feature At Food Show

Winefred B. Loggans, Well-Known Home Economist, to Stress Menus Built Around Typical Dishes.

One of the outstanding features of the Food Show will be the daily cooking school, conducted by Winefred B. Loggans, home economist, from 2 to 4 p. m., beginning Monday, Nov. 1, through Saturday, Nov. 6.

Mrs. Loggans, over a period of 14 years, has conducted cooking schools and given cookery demonstrations in many cities throughout the United States and Canada with a total audience of more than 500,000 housewives, club women, students and others interested in foods and their preparation. She has given demonstrations in every type of place, from log school houses in Northern Wisconsin to radio kitchens and college cooking laboratories. One of the most amusing cooking school sessions, she says, was held in a county courthouse in Texas. The court obligingly adjourned, a gas stove with portable tank was moved into the jury box and she conducted from the Judge's bench. The session was attended by the Judge, the jury and the prisoner, who occupied the front row.

To Stress Variations.

Mrs. Loggans will stress the many interesting variations possible with simple every-day menus and will suggest a number of attractive menus built around dishes which are typical of different sections of the United States. This food travelogue will include many famous old recipes, among them an apple cake which is typical of the Northwest, down-South biscuits from Virginia, California and Eastern shore recipes, and some of the Midwestern favorites.

She will demonstrate to the housewives how to combine variety and originality in cookery with ease of preparation. Her cooking is in step with the modern trend for quick and attractive meals that follow a carefully planned routine which becomes a time saver and leaves time for leisure.

All recipes used in the demonstrations have been triple-tested in the Kellogg home economics kitchen. These recipes will be distributed at the cooking school.

National and Local Food Products to Be on Display

One Hundred Manufacturers to Have Booths at Show in Auditorium.

The annual Food Show sponsored by the St. Louis Retail Grocers' Association opens today at the Auditorium. One hundred national and local food manufacturers will have their products on parade in attractively decorated booths and many free samples will be distributed.

In addition to food exhibits, there also will be displays of the latest appliances for the modern home.

Among the outstanding features will be a cooking school conducted by Winefred B. Loggans, held each day, including Saturday, at 2 p. m., and two public appearances by Irene Rich, well-known radio and stage star, who will autograph photographs. In addition to these features there will be contests, drawings and special demonstrations. Music is to be furnished by a local orchestra and local radio entertainers also will be featured.

A number of electrical transcriptions will be made by radio station KMOX of impromptu interviews with visitors at the Food Show. These will be re-broadcast later in the week as a feature over the station.

Arrangements for this annual event were made by a committee under the direction of J. T. Westfall, secretary of the St. Louis Retail Grocers' Association.

The Food Show will continue through Saturday Nov. 6. The outstanding event of the closing night is to be a public wedding. The bridal outfit, as well as ring, license and flowers for the bride's attendants will be furnished. The bride will choose her own attendants and the minister who will perform the ceremony.

HAVE YOU TRIED THE NEW WAY TO MAKE ALL-BRAN MUFFINS?

NOW you can make the famous ALL-BRAN Muffins with sweet milk. Cut out the recipe at the right for your kitchen file. Then treat the family frequently to these golden-brown muffins.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies the "bulk" to relieve faulty elimination. Also vitamin B and iron. Serve it regularly to help keep your family regular. As a cereal with milk or fruits. Or in muffins, breads, waffles, cookies, etc.

ALL-BRAN absorbs at least twice its weight in water, and forms a soft mass which aids elimination from the colon.

Two tablespoons daily are sufficient. In severe cases of common constipation, serve with each meal. Isn't this food better than taking pills and drugs?

Get a package of ALL-BRAN at your grocer's today. Made by Kellog in Battle Creek.

ALL-BRAN MUFFINS
2 tbsps. shortening
¼ cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup Kellogg's ALL-BRAN
¾ cup milk
1 cup flour
½ tsp. salt
2½ tsps. baking powder

Cream shortening and sugar thoroughly; add egg and beat until creamy. Add ALL-BRAN and milk; let soak until the moisture is taken up. Sift flour with salt and baking powder; add to first mixture and stir only until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in a moderate oven (400° F.) about 30 minutes.

NOTE: When sour milk or buttermilk is used instead of sweet milk, use ½ teaspoon soda and only 1 teaspoon baking powder. Yield: 8 large or 12 small muffins.

DIRECTED ACQUITTAL PLEA FOR MRS. HAHN

Judge to Rule Tomorrow on Motion in Poison Murder Trial.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 30.— Judge Charles S. Bell took under advisement today a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal for Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn, on trial accused of murdering by poison 78-year-old Jacob Wagner.

Attorney Joseph H. Hoodin took up today's two-hour session attacking the State's case, asserting Prosecutor Dudley M. Outcalt had failed to prove a prima facie case in the death of Wagner. The State's promise to prove a prima facie case was the basis on which the court permitted evidence of the poison deaths of three other elderly acquaintances of Mrs. Hahn.

Judge Bell said he would rule on the separate motions Monday. He instructed Hoodin to be prepared to present defense witnesses.

Mrs. Hahn was scheduled to be among the first three to take the stand.

ST. LOUIS DIPHTHERIA DEATHS CUT 52 PCT. BY CAMPAIGN

Health Department Aid, in Radio Address, Says 43,000 Children Have Been Immunized.

The campaign against diphtheria in St. Louis, resulting in the immunization of 43,000 children, has reduced the number of cases 60 per cent and the number of deaths 52 per cent, Dr. Maurice B. Roche of the city health department said in a recent radio address.

"By having your child immunized against diphtheria by toxoid you are giving it the most effective type of life insurance, and you are making your city of St. Louis a safe place in which all other children might live," he declared.

LETTERS TELL OF LIFE IN ST. LOUIS IN 1840'S

Correspondence Published in Pamphlet of Missouri Historical Society.

Life in St. Louis and nearby Missouri settlements in the middle of the last century, when a trip from the Atlantic seaboard by means of "modern transportation" took 20 days and St. Louis was called the "Mound City" is vividly described in a series of letters written by a Missourian of the time and just published in pamphlet form by the Missouri Historical Society.

The author of most of the letters in the collection, Flora Byrne, lived in Clark County, in the northeastern corner of the State, approximately 200 miles by water from St. Louis. She depended upon river traffic from the city for many of her household comforts, and was greatly relieved when in 1840 she obtained a home recipe for "white soap" and no longer had to depend upon soap deliveries from St. Louis.

Travelers from the East crowded into small coaches in which "there was some difficulty as to the disposition of legs" and proceeded to Wheeling, W. Va., where steamboats took them down the Ohio and up the Mississippi to St. Louis. The trip is referred to in an exchange of letters between Mrs. Byrne and friends in Baltimore as "an entire summer's excursion."

Tells of Coach Accident.

One of these friends wrote in 1849:

"We got safe to Wheeling, but one of the five stages in our company was upset at Freezeburgh and all the passengers were more or less injured, one old gentleman and a boy very seriously. Early next morning we left Wheeling for Cincinnati in a little sternwheel boat with a motley lot of about 150 passengers.

"The river being very low, we were frequently fast on sand bars—the passengers used to assist and we got along tolerably to Cincinnati, where we got on board a large boat, but equally crowded as the other—say 200 and from 50 to 60 children under 6 years old—the confusion of tongues at Babel was only a circumstance to that of the Ladies' Cabin. The day before our arrival at St. Louis, poor Aunt Flora, who got on so far wonderfully well, had a fainting fit. I do not consider her fit or able to take such a journey, certainly not by herself."

Invitation to a Ball.

Living with her husband, Dr. Edmund Byrne, later a St. Louis physician, in their log dwelling at "Byrnham Wood," Mrs. Byrne often felt completely cut off from nearby St. Louis, the letters indicate. She wrote on one occasion apologizing for her inability to attend a ball held here, and explained: "The invitation did not come until a week after—besides the telegraph is six miles from us, and so I could not have got there, as I had water to cross."

She found the Planter's House in St. Louis "quite as stylish as ever" and expressed amazement over the purchase in the city of a can of soft crabs from Baltimore.

"Is not this wonderful," she wrote. "Eating salt water fish, 1500 miles in the interior in such perfection!"

Buffalo was considered the ideally situated metropolis, according to the letters, and comparisons between that city and St. Louis were often drawn.

The collection covers the period from 1839 to 1861. The final letter, written from Fulton, Mo., by the son of one of Mrs. Byrne's closest friends, refers to the impending Civil War and advises as many Missourians a possible "to decamp for Arkansas and Mississippi to assist Jeff Davis."

The pamphlet is available at Jefferson Memorial.

Labor League Meeting Postponed.

A meeting of the St. Louis section of Labor's Non-Partisan League, scheduled for this afternoon at Carpenters' Hall, Grand boulevard and Cozens avenue, has been postponed to Dec. 5.

PARENT-TEACHER CONVENTION TUESDAY

Missouri Congress to Hold Sessions in St. Louis Through Thursday.

The annual convention of the Missouri Congress of Parents and Teachers will be held at Hotel Jefferson Tuesday through Thursday. The meeting will mark the organization's twenty-fifth anniversary.

Tuesday morning's session, beginning at 9 o'clock, will be devoted to committee reports, awards and a review of activities by the district presidents, who afterward will hold a luncheon. The morning's speaker will be Mrs. J. K. Pettingill of Detroit, national president of the organization.

Lloyd W. King, superintendent of the State Department of Public Schools, and Roscoe V. Cramer, president of the Missouri State Teachers' Association, will speak at the afternoon meeting, which also will include a panel discussion of group recreational work. At a dinner meeting, Dr. Franc H. McCluer, president of Westminster College, will deliver the address.

At the evening meeting Wednesday, Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman of Temple Israel will speak on "Neutrality or Collective Security—Which Shall America Choose?" The address will follow a day of department meetings and reports, including a conference on rural education. After final business and department sessions, the convention will close at 3 p. m. Thursday.

In preparation for the meetings, the State board of managers of the congress will meet tomorrow at the hotel and attend a dinner given by the St. Louis Council of Parent-Teacher Associations.

TOWN GETS TOO MUCH MONEY

Rutherford, N. J., Forced to Rescind Tax Discount.

RUTHERFORD, N. J., Oct. 30.—So much money has been pouring in that the Mayor and Council of this town acted today to stop the flood of tax payments.

The municipality voted a 6 and then a 4 per cent discount on early tax payments. So many persons took advantage of the high discount that the treasury found itself flooded with money that drew no interest in banks. With $1200 lost last year and $100,000 idle in the banks, the officials decided to rescind the discount.

Drouth in Western Missouri.

RICH HILL, Mo., Oct. 30.—This section of Western Missouri is experiencing a severe drouth. Farmers hdave begun to haul water for stock. Wells that went through the 1934 and 1936 drouths without failing now are dry.

FRENCH TRYING TO BAR SPREAD OF MOROCCO REVOLT

Heavy Troop Patrols on Algerian Frontier, Which Is Virtually Closed to All but Foreigners.

By the Associated Press.

CASABLANCA, French Morocco, Oct. 30.—Heavy patrols of French troops were stationed on the frontier between French Algeria and French Morocco tonight, virtually closing the border to all but foreigners to prevent the spread of Arab nationalist agitation.

Police and troops pushed their roundup of nationalist leaders, arresting Mohammed Hassan El Ouezzani, chief of the Moroccan Action Committee which officials said worked closely with Arabs in Syria and Palestine.

Gen. Amedee Blanc, commander of French troops at Fez, where Hassan was arrested, told a gathering of Arab leaders that France "clearly recognizes the hand of a foreign power" in the attempts to overthrow the French protectorate and set up a native Arab kingdom.

Evidence of French determination to stamp out the revolt was shown by Blanc's disclosure that French troops for the first time in history had penetrated the native Medina quarter of Fez—regarded as a holy place by the Mohammedans.

Jails at Rabat, Fez, Sale and Marrakech were jammed with the more than 1000 demonstrators arrested as an aftermath of the riots which started Wednesday. Native judges in Casablanca sentenced 60 persons to varying terms in prison for participation in the outbreak which was said to have been designed to place Moulay Allal El Fassi on the throne of the new state.

The would-be King and his prospective cabinet were arrested yesterday. Officials said they had plotted against Sultan Sidi Mohammed as well as the French and were supplied with funds by "a European totalitarian power."

A military tribunal, sitting at Fez continuously since last night, convicted 255 as agitators. They were sent to a prison at Boulmane in the Atlas Mountains. The prisoners were arrested at Settat after authorities learned that 20,000 natives planned a Nationalist demonstration.

Record Electric Power Output.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The Federal Power Commission reported today that production of electricity for public use in the United States reached a new high of 118,809,000,000 kilowatt-hours in the 12-month period ending Sept. 30.

WINDSOR SAID TO HAVE PLAN TO AID WORKERS

Reported to Be Considering Formation of International Philanthropic Foundation.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—George Link Jr., an organizer of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor's American tour, said tonight the former British monarch is considering the formation of a new international philanthropic foundation to study and improve working and living conditions in industrial areas of the world.

Link, who has been making plans here for the tour as attorney for Charles E. Bedaux, close American friend of the Windsors, said the proposed foundation "has been a thought" behind both the German and American investigations undertaken by the pair. He said "the discussions have not reached the point where any step has been taken to create the foundation."

"The Duke wants to do something constructive to solve the problems he is studying," said Link. "If his trips in Germany and America do not lead to something, they will be an idle gesture."

Link said he had last heard from Bedaux regarding the proposed foundation about two or three weeks ago. The attorney will meet Bedaux when he arrives here Monday from France as advance representative of the Duke and Duchess, and expects to learn more about the plan then.

"It also would be an outlet for Mr. Bedaux's services," said Link. He said Bedaux, for many years a labor efficiency expert in this country, "increased labor payrolls in America over a period of 10 years by more than $60,000,000."

Link said he understood that a number of leading industrialists, who may contribute funds for the foundation, already have discussed the project with the Duke and Bedaux.

Link stressed that, while the object would be to improve relations between employes and employers as well as working conditions, the foundation would not consider questions of wages and hours. Nor will the Duke interest himself in wage and hour questions on his tour, Link said.

National Guard Association Meeting

By the Associated Press.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 30.—The National Guard Association of the United States called today for additional ultramodern armaments, and elected Brigadier-General George E. Leach, mayor of Minneapolis, Minn., as president. San Francisco was chosen for the 1938 convention. The executve council was asked to fix a date that would enable delegates also to attend the American Legion meeting at Los Angeles Sept. 19-22.

LaGuardia Victory Seems Certain

fascinating political pictures in contemporary history. The profusion of strange alliances and illogical antagonisms is paralleled only by the barrenness of the issues.

LaGuardia has made his campaign solely on the alternatives: "Good government or Tammany government." Mahoney's battle cry is that LaGuardia is "the candidate of Communism."

There is a technical basis of fact in Mahoney's charge. The Communists actually are supporting LaGuardia. But so are the Republicans. And so are the Independent Democrats. And so are the Socialists and Laborites. As a matter of fact, it is rather difficult to find any one, outside of Tammany and its allied Democratic machine organizations in Brooklyn and the Bronx, who is not supporting him.

The range of his support is graphically illustrated by the newspaper "front." Starting on the extreme left, it begins with the Communist Daily Worker, and moves rightward through the radical Democratic Evening Post, the strongly pro-New Deal Daily News, the middle-of-the-road World-Telegram, the conservative-independent-Democratic Times, and winds up on the extreme right with the thoroughly standpat Republican Herald-Tribune. Every one of them is vociferously calling for the re-election of "the best mayor New York ever had."

The only papers not supporting him openly are the two Hearst papers and the extremely conservative Sun. Apparently they just don't know what to do.

LaGuardia Leads Straw Vote.

A straw vote is being conducted by the Daily News, a morning tabloid with a daily circulation of more than 1,725,000—largest in the United States—on the races for Mayor and District Attorney. It has commanded much attention, because a similar ballot conducted by the paper last year accurately foreshadowed the vote for President in New York City. This straw vote to date shows LaGuardia receiving 72.2 per cent of the vote, as against 27.8 per cent for Mahoney; and Dewey receiving 74.4 per cent, as against 25.6 per cent for his Democratic opponent, Harold W. Hastings.

Another equally impressive "straw" is seen by political observers in the size of the audiences which the candidates are drawing. For example, on Thursday night LaGuardia and Dewey addressed a throng of 18,000, which jammed Madison Square Garden and overflowed into the streets, while Mahoney, appearing at Tammany's final rally at the Hippodrome, found himself facing a huddle of about 1500 persons in the front of that cavernous hall.

What makes LaGuardia's apparent margin so astounding is the fact that he was elected four years ago by a minority vote. That was a three-cornered race, in which he opposed Mayor John P. O'Brien, Tammany candidate, and Joseph McKee, candidate of Farley's highly synthetic "recovery party." The result was as follows:

LaGuardia, 868,522.
McKee, 609,053.
O'Brien, 586,672.

Estimates, based on the registration, are that the total vote Tuesday will be about 2,200,000. If LaGuardia receives as much as 60 per cent of this, it will mean that his supporters have almost doubled in number since the last election. A victory by any margin would mean an increase of several hundred thousand, and would be a remarkable tribute to his administration and his dynamic political personality.

Why Farley Backs Mahoney.

Why did Gov. Lehman, Senator Wagner and Farley elect to enter the lists against him? As to Farley, the answer seems quite obvious. He is still seeking, as he sought through McKee's candidacy four years ago, to obtain control of the Democratic organization throughout Greater New York. It is commonly accepted that his goal is the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Through his friends, Democratic Bosses Ed Flynn of the Bronx and Frank Kelly of Brooklyn, he already occupied a dominant position in the party machinery. His dominance was increased when Mahoney soundly trounced Senator Copeland, Tammany's candidate, in the recent Democratic primary. Tammany has been forced to go along for Mahoney in the general election, although the association obviously is distasteful to both.

Incidentally, this illustrates the dire straits to which Tammany has been reduced. If the incredible should happen, and Mahoney should win, the Wigwam would be "reorganized" from top to bottom. The old leaders would be supplanted by Farley men. Tammany would survive, but it would be a "new Tammany." If LaGuardia wins, as expected, the deadly process of attrition would proceed.

As a matter of fact, it probably would proceed at an accelerated pace. At present, Tammany and the other Democratic machine control a majority of the board of estimate and apportionment, that powerful policy making and budgetary body which serves as a sort of Mayor's cabinet. A LaGuardia sweep almost certainly would carry in a majority of his candidates for the board, and that should be just about the last blow for Tammany.

Wagner's Unhappy Role.

While Farley's support of Mahoney is easy to understand, Senator Wagner's case is rather difficult. Originally urged to run for the Democratc nomination himself, he said to friends:

"How could I run against LaGuardia? We have always stood for the same things in public life. What would I campaign about?"

Well, what is he campaigning about now? Let the reader judge. Addressing the forlorn 1500 in the Hippodrome Thursday night, the Senator said:

"The opposition (to Mahoney) consists of a fusion of mixed political faiths and mixed objectives, including a large part of the old reactionary Republican leadership. And that combination would have you believe that it can co-operate with the Democratic administration in Washington better than a Democratic administration in New York City."

Wagner's close friends say privately that he is miserable over the part he is playing, and they explain his course on grounds both practical and sentimental. First, he formerly was Mahoney's law partner, and is still his personal friend. Second, Robert F. Wagner Jr., a 30-year-old graduate of Yale law school, is running for the state assembly, and must have Tammnay support to win. Third, the Senator has always been "an organization man."

Finally, delegates to a State constitutional convention will be chosen in this election, and each party has a full slate, the Republican candidates being on the same ticket with LaGuardia. As a long time member of the State Senate, Wagner is painfully aware of the need for constitutional changes which will end the condition which enables a minority of upstate Republicans to control the Legislature. That is the most respectable argument advanced to justify his position.

Lehman's Eyes on Legislature.

The only credible explanation of Gov. Lehman's attitude is that he is supporting the Democratic ticket because he wants a Democratic Legislature to support his legislative program. He is not an "organization man"; has always prided himself on the contrary. One of the numerous ironies of the situation is that which finds Lehman opposing the slate which contains Dewey—whose career Lehman made possible by appointing him special prosecutor in the vice inquiry.

Mahoney's campaign in his own behalf is perhaps the most fantastic performance of all. Once a famous athlete, his chief prominence has come through being president of the American Amateur Athletic Union, and, as such, opposing American participation in the Olympic games in Nazi Germany last year.

In stating earlier in this dispatch that Mahoney is relying on the "Red Menace" issue to defeat LaGuardia, the writer was neither being facetious nor understating the fact. It was the theme of Mahoney's entire Hippodrome speech, as it has been in other speeches.

In concluding it, he held up a document and solemnly intoned:

"I have in my hand a photostatic copy of a report of the stockholders of the Russian-American Industrial Corporation for the year 1923. On the back of it are the names of the subscribers to the stock of this Communist organization. There appears there the name of Nikolai Lenin, the father of Communism and the patron saint of Red Russia. The next name to that of Nikolai Lenin is that of F. H. LaGuardia.

"LaGuardia and Lenin—Lenin and LaGuardia—stockholders in the Communist Russian-American Industrial Corporation!"

The simple fact is that the Russian-American industrial corporation was a natural sequel to the relief administration in Russia, headed by Herbert Hoover. A condition of famine and destitution prevailed there, as a result of the civil wars aimed at the overthrow of Soviet Government. Charitable Americans decided upon a practical form of relief. Acting in connection with Russian officials, they organized the Russian-American Industrial Corporation, which purchased clothing machinery in this country and shipped it to Russia, to be used in manufacturing garments for shivering women and children.

Campaign Won in 1929.

This represented the peak of Mahoney's campaign. On the same night, before the howling, laughing crowd that packed Madison Square Garden, LaGuardia was alluding to the Seabury investigation which led to Tammany's downfall, in this language:

"This is not a political rally, but a meeting to celebrate victory. This campaign was won in 1929. At that time Judge Seabury put a lot of witnesses on the stand, and asked them how they came by the contents in their tin boxes. When they got through answering, some gentlemen went to Canada, some went to England, some went to France—and I went to the City Hall."

Appealing for the election of Dewey as District Attorney, the Mayor said: "It would have only one result that might be called harmful—that of reducing the size of the population. We can spare them." He was alluding to the racketeers whom Dewey is sending to prison. In other words, Mahoney's speeches and LaGuardia's provide a comparison in realism.

Attitude of Roosevelt.

Reporting the progress of the primary campaign in September, the writer pointed out that many people were asking the question—why did the President let Farley muscle into this municipal campaign? Officially, that question remains unanswered.

Those seeking to explain it are prone to recall the President's habitual indulgence where the personal desires and ambitions of his intimates are concerned. Whether the self-seeking one is a member of the President's personal family or his political family, he is notoriously inclined to be indulgent, and Farley seems to have his heart set on the Governorship.

However, another and more practical consideration may have influenced Roosevelt. It has long been a matter of common observation among political historians and others, that the administration, while professing the loftiest aims at Washington, found it convenient and practical to do business with the big city political machines which thrive on municipal corruption, vice and even on crime.

Reform-Never-Lasts Theory.

Examples are found in the unbroken cordiality which has existed between the administration and the Pendergast machine in Kansas City, and with the Kelly-Nash machine in Chicago. It has been intimated that Farley emphasized this fact in persuading the President that the administration should ally itself with Tammany in the present campaign.

If this is true, both Farley and "the chief" failed to realize that Tammany had become a liability, instead of an asset. This is entirely possible. There is an old tradition in New York that "reform administrations never last more than one term." Throughout the campaign political wiseacres have harked back to the case of John Purroy Mitchel, a fusion and reform Mayor, whom Tammany defeated for re-election exactly 20 years ago, after four years of excellent municipal government.

But history does not always repeat itself. In this instance the alliance between Mahoney and Tammany has enabled LaGuardia to make the issue on which he seems to be riding to an overwhelming victory. The lesson in this seems to be: You can't eat your tiger and have it too.

Hudson, Terraplane Cars Give Impression Of Overall Bigness

The new front end and body lines, and the impression of overall bigness, are noticeable in the Hudson and Hudson Terraplane cars which are being shown here.

The two-tone treatment of the interior of all Hudson six and eight models was hailed at the New York Auto Show as a real style surprise. In the Hudson Terraplanes, the new luster boucle and suede boucle upholstery is used.

The Hudson engines still hold 86
A. A. A. stock car records for speed and endurance, and have been improved for 1938. In addition, there is a "six star" engine of a different type for the Hudson six.

Lamps for Longest Bridge.

Lighting on the new San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge will be by sodium vapor lamps, equivalent to the glow of 35 full moons.

Let COAL SAVINGS help you make the easy payments on a genuine CHARTER OAK

Less than A PENNY A DAY COST TO OWN A CHARTER OAK STOVE or RANGE for countless users

NOW stove manufacturing takes its proper place with inventions which modernize home heating with COAL just like the radio, electric refrigerator and automobile have produced modern convenience. Now come great advances made by heating engineers--and here is news of these modern inventions--inventions that CUT DEEPER into coal bills than anything ever dreamed possible.

CHARTER OAK PERFECTED CONSTRUCTION SAVES AS MUCH AS HALF THE COAL

All these advantages yours in a CHARTER OAK

① The Heat Deflector for warming and drying out cold, snow and rain-soaked feet; eliminating cold floor drafts, also.
④ Paper-tight doors save you money.
⑤ Charter Oak Coal Saver saves heavily.
⑥ Big Fire Doors—make fueling easy, take the bigger, longer-burning, economical lumps.
⑦ Sliding Ash Pans with easy-hold handles and special chutes to guide ashes into pan.
⑧ Larger, longer-lived grates; free-moving, easy to turn as a door-knob.
⑨ Double and Triple-Deep Enamel, speedily cleaned bright as new.
⑫ Optional side-vents for warming bitter-cold hands.
⑬ Humidifying Apparatus to keep air from getting too dry.
⑮ Outer jacket separated so as not to get too hot—safer when children touching heater.

1. In CHARTER OAK a SLOTTED FIRE POT instead of the common type. HOT AIR--oxygen-rich--forced on flames, speeding and completing combustion, saving fuel formerly lost in smoke, gas, soot—ALL THIS PART OF THE COAL IS USED! EXTRA LARGE for 12 to 15 hour banking of fires.

2. In a solid fire-pot of this type, draft enters only from bottom; not pre-heated -- thus fire sluggish, burns mostly in center, wastes up to 38% of fuel in soot, smoke, gas up the chimney.

used by many heaters. Yes, it does sound astonishing! But you have heard how THERMOSTATS control waste of heat in automatic stokers, etc. THERMOSTATIC METAL, in the CHARTER OAK COAL SAVER does the same for YOU! Too much heat brings the CHARTER OAK COAL SAVER AUTOMATICALLY into action, holds back the fire, saves dollars worth of coal. The SLOTTED FIREBOX and HOT BLAST, sending large quantities of OXYGEN into the fire BURN UP SMOKE, GAS, SOOT and save as much as 38% of coal formerly wasted. In a few years, THE MONEY YOU SAVE ON COAL will pay the difference in cost between a CHARTER OAK and the cheapest parlor heater you can locate. Without Charter Oak economy, YOU PAY MORE THAN THE COST OF OWNING A CHARTER OAK—so see a CHARTER OAK dealer and get the facts now! Hard-earned money is worth saving!

3. Heavy, massive, ONE-PIECE heating dome and combustion chamber. No leakage of smoke, gas or heat. Smoke pipe placed below dome top saves heavily on heat bill.

4. CHARTER OAK HOT BLAST drives hot oxygen-rich air down through cast-iron tube directly on the fire. Tremendous gain in combustion of fuel otherwise lost as smoke, gas and soot. Your coal bill cut proportionately.

As many as 20 to 69 Years Service to CHARTER OAK Users

A Jamestown, Mo., family used their CHARTER OAK from 1865 to 1934. For 90 years CHARTER OAK has stood for LONGER-LIVED CONSTRUCTION, fuel economy, years without repairs or replacements. Out of more than a million sold, untold numbers in use over 20 years. Let COAL SAVINGS help you make the easy payments on a CHARTER OAK.

SAVE THIS HALF OF COAL BILL

5. CHARTER OAK PATENTED HEAT DEFLECTOR! EXCLUSIVE! Radiates heat downward and out over floor, warming it, preventing cold floor drafts, providing scientific air circulation throughout the home.

6. Patented Automatic CHARTER OAK COAL SAVER opens check draft when fire burns too freely, preventing overheating, fuel waste. Closes damper, opens draft when fire burns too slowly, automatically revives fire. Never permits over or under-heating.

St. Louis Auto Show to Open Sunday, Nov. 14, For Eight Days in Arena

Twenty-Three Makes of Cars, Also Trailers, Accessories and Trucks to Be Exhibited.

Twenty-three lines of American-made automobiles are to be displayed in the thirty-first annual St. Louis Automobile Show, which will open in the Arena on Sunday, Nov. 14, Joseph A. Schlecht, secretary-manager of the Greater St. Louis Automotive Association and manager of the show, announced yesterday.

The show will run for eight days, including Sunday, Nov. 21. In addition to the exhibits of motor cars, it will feature a number of factory exhibits never before shown at a local show. About 30 booths also are to be devoted to trucks, equipment and accessories.

Both the west exhibition hall and the main Arena building will be used, Schlect said.

The east exhibition hall and the oil-surfaced grounds about the buildings are to be set aside for free parking, giving visitors to the show 40 acres of space in which to park their automobiles without charge.

40 Acres of Parking Space.

Elaborate plans have been drafted for decorating the Arena for the show. The west exhibition hall, in which passenger models are to be shown, will be decorated in blue and gold while the main building will be decorated with flags and bunting.

Last year's show was held at the Mart Building in the business district, but the show committee selected the Arena for this year's event because of its more central location and more ample exhibition space and the large area available for free parking.

Virtually all cars have been redesigned, according to advance information sent to Schlecht from the various factories.

Safety factors have been increased, with brakes being considerably strengthened, while smaller gasoline consumption is promised. Exterior lines have been revamped, while interior appointments have been given the attention of artists and engineers with convenience playing an important part in construction.

Trailers to Be Shown.

Stream-lining is again very much in favor, although no radical departures from the general lines of previous years have as yet been made known to officials here.

Trailers, which will make up an important part of the equipment and accessories division of the show, have been greatly improved. A number of the latest models are to be on display, with the family-size vehicle getting particular attention in several exhibits.

The show will be supervised by a committee selected from the Automotive Association. Members of this committee include: W. H. Willcockson, of Willcockson Motors; P. H. Brockman, of Phil Brockman Motor Co.; W. B. Denhard, of Denhard Motors, Inc.; J. Rush James, of Downtown Chevrolet Co.; C. F. McClure, of Mendenhall Motor Co.; Sidney Weber, of Sidney Weber, Inc., and W. P. Winslow, zone manager for the Pontiac Motor Co.

The price of admission to the show will be 50 cents. Children under 12 years old, accompanied by adults, will be admitted free.

Hudson, Terraplane Cars Give Impression Of Overall Bigness

The new front end and body lines, and the impression of overall bigness, are noticeable in the Hudson and Hudson Terraplane cars which are being shown here.

The two-tone treatment of the interior of all Hudson six and eight models was hailed at the New York Auto Show as a real style surprise. In the Hudson Terraplanes, the new luster boucle and suede boucle upholstery is used.

The Hudson engines still hold 86 A. A. A. stock car records for speed and endurance, and have been improved for 1938. In addition, there is a "six star" engine of a different type for the Hudson six.

Acoustical Laboratories Of General Motors Have Been Completed

Elimination of noises in automobiles, household appliances and other General Motors products was the purpose behind the construction of the new acoustical laboratories at the General Motors' proving ground at Milford, Mich., according to an announcement the past week.

The sound laboratories have been constructed so that an automobile can be studied in detail from the standpoint of noise.

General Motors sound engineers report that physiological and psychological tests have shown a very pronounced fatigue effect from noise.

They have found that a passenger or a driver will be much more tired at the end of an automobile trip of three or four hundred miles in a noisy car than he would be in a really quiet car. Noisy household appliances also have a tiring effect.

To reduce noises, it is necessary to make a thorough study of the noises existing and determine the causes. The sound laboratories are being used to more rapidly and accurately determine the sources of noises originating in motor cars with a view toward reducing these noises as far as possible and as rapidly as possible.

The building which houses the laboratories is constructed to cut off as much sound from the outside as possible. The walls are of glass blocks, and the laboratories are air-conditioned, serving the dual purpose of making windows unnecessary and reducing the possibility of outside noises, and also of keeping the temperature constant, aiding in the efficiency of the delicate recording instruments.

The building has seven rooms, two being super-quiet rooms. They are so quiet that the silence is almost oppressive. There is not even the faintest murmur or slightest vibration. The other five rooms contain recording instruments and sound equipment. They are the very finest instruments science has been able to produce up to the present.

Car Prices at Detroit As Set by Factories

Chevrolet's 1938 prices at the factory range from $648 to $755 for the Master series and $714 to $817 for the Master De Luxe series. Increases are $26 to $34 per model or 3.4 to 5 per cent. The factory prices include S. A. E. group of accessories and on the De Luxe models the right hand tail light.

Plymouth factory prices, including Federal taxes, safety glass and standard accessories and, in the case of the De Luxe line, fenders and sheet metal colors to match body colors, range from $645 to $730 for the business line and $745 to $818 for the De Luxe models.

Dodge prices for 1938 models at Detroit, on a "ready to run" basis, range from $808 to $910. Federal tax and safety glass are included in the prices.

Prices of Chrysler cars at Detroit for 1938 are announced to run from $918 to $1010 for the Royal models and $1123 to $1198 for the Imperial. Prices of the Royal and Imperial convertibles and of the Custom Imperial were not given out. The prices include Federal tax and cover more equipment than in past years.

De Soto's prices at the Detroit factory, including taxes, safety glass, standard accessories and fenders and sheet metal to match body colors, range from $870 to $1285.

Prices of Willys cars for 1938 at Toledo without inclusion of Federal tax range from $499 to $715. Prices of the Willys commercial units range from $480 to $530.

Hupmobile has fixed its factory prices range from $1045 to $1340 for the six-cylinder models and $1325 to $1485 for the eight-cylinder line.

Two New Ford V-8 Cars, De Luxe and Standard, Introduced

Differ in Styling and Appointments—Have Same Chassis—Trucks for 1938 Also Seen in New York.

An advance showing of 1938 Ford V-8 cars and trucks was opened Wednesday in the Ford Metropolitan showrooms, 1710 Broadway, New York City.

Two distinct Ford V-8 cars, differing in appearance, appointments and price, were presented. One was the de luxe Ford V-8, the other the standard Ford V-8.

The standard car is designed for owners to whom economy in first cost and operating cost is paramount. The de luxe car provides more luxury and style.

Both cars have the same V-8 chassis. The eight de luxe types are available only with the 85 horsepower V-8 engine, the three standard types with either the 85 horsepower or the 60 horsepower engine.

The de luxe car is a stylish companion of the standard. It is entirely new in appearance. The radiator grille is of new design. Appearance of the hood is longer and more sweeping. Fenders are massive. Interior appointments are in keeping with the styling of the exterior. Substantially more room in the closed sedans, greater passenger comfort and much larger luggage space are provided.

The standard V-8 cars have new styling, with a different radiator grille design, long hood and flowing contours. The interiors are roomy and attractively upholstered and appointed.

In addition to the two passenger cars, Ford is to present an expanded line of V-8 trucks and commercial cars. Both are newly styled for "eye appeal" in commercial transportation.

A new group of "one-tonner" trucks also is offered, in addition to the 112-inch commercial cars and the 134-inch and 157-inch wheelbase trucks.

The new "one-tonner" is designed specifically to bridge the gap between the commercial cars and the truck groups. Available with either 85 horsepower or 60 horsepower engine, it is designed to make the economies of the latter engine more widely available in commercial transportation.

Other advances for 1938 are the new 134-inch wheelbase truck, replacing the 131½-inch wheelbase in the big truck line, a new frame width for the 134-inch and the 157-inch wheelbase units, improved brakes and easier steering and stronger construction throughout.

General Motors Officers to Sponsor Chevrolet Sales Drive

Officers of the General Motors Corporation are to sponsor the Chevrolet Division for 1938, giving special attention to the plans and programs of the largest unit of the corporation, and to aid Chevrolet in every possible way in the coming year to attain its objective of new car and truck sales. This year's quota is the highest sales quota ever undertaken by any division of General Motors.

A. P. Sloan Jr. and W. S. Knudsen, chairman of the General Motors board, and president, respectively, have communicated with the more than 300,000 shareholders of the corporation, telling why General Motors is officially sponsoring Chevrolet for the new model year that started with the opening of the New York Automobile Show.

They complimented M. E. Coyle, Chevrolet general manager, and W. E. Holler, general sales manager, for the large growth of the company during the past four years, and pointed out that Chevrolet was a million-car-per-year company with sales of 1,015,000 for 1937 and 1,168,000 for 1936.

Both Sloan and Knudsen said they were enthusiastic concerning the advanced dealer-factory relationship that Holler has organized in the quality dealer program and the dealer planning committees.

New Stations Built To Handle Products Of Standard Oil

Three new service stations handling Standard Oil products have been opened recently. H. V. Kelley's station on the northwest corner of Hampton and Devonshire is a modified modernistic building of gray stone and enamel brick, with washing, lubrication and rest-room facilities.

The Gimlin Oil Co. station, at the southwest corner of Theresa and Chouteau avenues, has lubrication, washing, and is equipped for auto repairing.

The J. R. Goddard station, at the southwest corner of Kingsbury and Des Peres avenue, was built by the Standard Oil Co. and leased by Goddard. It is of the modernistic type, in tile and enamel.

Conditioned Air System Leads New Features in Nash Models for 1938

Style Changes, Simplified Engine, Different Shock Absorbers, Vacuum Gear Shift on List.

Three series of new 1938 Nash cars said to have 83 new value features, six of which the company asserts are revolutionary, are now being shown here by the Nash-St. Louis Co., the distributer, and dealers.

Foremost of the six leading features is the system of conditioned air for winter driving, which makes Nash the first car to be equipped with this development. The system, which is installed under the cowl and uses the cowl ventilator for an intake, is designed to purify and circulate the air, prevent chilling drafts, prevent windshield and window steaming and enable one to drive in his shirt-sleeves when it is zero outside.

Nash's new "super-thrift" engine is a motor of simplified designs with fewer parts than conventional motors. It is said to produce 10 per cent more power, to offer 12 per cent more gasoline mileage, to have the lowest maintenance costs in the company's history and to give uniform motor performance in all kinds of weather.

New Features.

"Sea legs," skyliner-type shock-absorbers, designed to steady a car on curves and smooth out pitch, roll, bumps and side-sway is another new Nash feature.

Another development is a vacuum gear-shift, the oerating lever of which extends from the instrument panel to within a few inches of the righthand position on the steering wheel. It can be operated by a flick of the fingers, and is said to assure perfect gear-shifting, as well as an all-clear front floor.

A new sound-proofing method, said to make these cars 25 per cent quieter, is the fifth development. The sixth is the spacious interior, which the company claims makes these cars the roomiest in their field.

The Three Series of Cars.

The three series announced include the Ambassador eight-cylinder line, which consists of five models on a 125-inch wheelbase with a new "super-thrift" valve-in-head, twin ignition, double carburetion type motor, rated at 115 horsepower; the Ambassador six on a 121-inch wheelbase, which also is available in five models and has a "super-thrift" valve-in-head, twin ignition type of motor of 105 horsepower, and the LaFayette models, in both de luxe and master styles, on 117-inch wheelbase with 95 horsepower "super-thrift" engine, the monitor-sealed design of which has been proven successful in the Nash low-priced line the last three years.

Models in all Nash lines will come in seven standard colors—black, mohawk maroon, cascade blue, Brunswick blue, golden beige, empire green and dido gray.

An automatic cruising gear which, engineers say, is the equivalent of an automatic fourth speed forward and goes to work at the 40-mile-an-hour speed level, permitting the engine to "loaf" at higher speeds by reducing engine revolutions, is an cptional feature on all new Nash cars.

The Nash bed arrangement again is a feature of the four-door sedan model in each series. This exclusive automobile sleeping arrangement utilizes the rear passenger compartment and trunk section of a car.

As a reward for good work, automobiles are being given to workmen and miners for some concerns in Russia.

Dodge Truck Starts Alaska-New York Run With Load of Potatoes

A Dodge standard one and one-half ton truck has left the region of Ketchikan, Alaska, for New York City with a capacity load of potatoes raised this season in the farm colony at Matanuska. Even in the face of possible early winter snow flurries in the Far North, the distance of 4700 miles is expected to be run in 130 hours of driving time or less. Announcement of the departure was made today in a telegram to Joseph D. Burke, director of truck sales for the Dodge Division of Chrysler Corporation, under whose direction the enterprise is being carried out.

On leaving Ketchikan the truck used a ferry across Dixon Entrance to Port Simpson and Prince Rupert, B. C. It will take to the trails and highways of Northern British Columbia and will travel via Prince George, Quesnel, 150-Mile House, 100-Mile House, 70-Mile House, and Chilliwack. From this last city it will turn southwest on the Caribou Trail to Vancouver and enter the United States at Blaine, Wash.

Upon arriving in this country the truck will be driven over the most convenient route to New York City via the principal consuming markets. It will stop briefly for good-will greetings and gifts from Alaska to mayors and chamber of commerce secretaries.

After leaving New York it will stop at Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Johnstown, Pa., Youngstown, O., Akron, Cleveland, Toledo and then return to Detroit.

The purpose of this long distance journey from Alaska to New York on a rigid travel schedule, it is said' is to demonstrate the feasibility of long-distance hauling across North America and to indicate the closeness of Alaska to the United States and Canada by motor truck.

Three Car Heaters Made by Goodrich

Three hot-water automobile heaters, designed to fit virtually every make and model automobile, are in the line of the B. F. Goodrich Co. for the fall and winter season, according to J. Harry Evans, manager of the Goodrich-Silvertown Stores, 2301 Olive street.

The Goodrich line this year is headed by the new super de luxe model heater. Through a new principle of down-draft heat, it throws out a four-way stream of heat, to the windshield defroster, across the driver's feet, down to the passengers feet, and through the entire car. It is compact, and has no sharp edges.

The other two heaters in the line are the de luxe and the regular. The de luxe, has an exclusive "heat-trap" construction to store hot water in the heater, instead of allowing it to be drawn back into the cooling system.

The regular is made in dark brown crackle finish trimmed with chromium.

Cadillac, La Salle Cars Have New Gear Shif and Smoother Engi

Grilles More Massive—16-Cyli Engine Has 135 Degree Angle Refinements Numerous.

There are three advances stand out in the 1938 Cadillacs La Salles now on display by Oliver Cadillac Co., the distribu and dealers here.

First is a new method of shifting said to have the vantages of the fully autom shift and none of the complic mechanical design.

Second is a radically enginee 16-cylinder motor.

Third is a new flywheel design reduce driving fatigue by elimi tion of a source of vibration.

The New Models.

In the La Salle, the 125 ho power V-8 motor that accounted a new stock car record is contin with refinement. Five body sty are mounted on a 124-inch wh base.

The Cadillac V-8, in 1937 kno as "Series 65" and built in only body type, now includes an Impe and a convertible sedan in addit to the five-passenger sedan. T car is larger this year, being o 132-inch wheelbase and its V-8 tor develops 135 horsepower.

In the Cadillac-Fleetwood, m luxury of appointments and comf have been built into this custo built line. Headroom, legroom seat widths have been increas and visibility and cushioning proved. The horsepower of the motor is 140 with chassis advan ments designed primarily smoother performance.

The Cadillac 16 has a new eng with two banks of eight cylind mounted at a 135-degree angle, c ating a cradle for motor accessori Almost flat and with its center gravity lower than conventio practice, the engine makes for creased roadability and safety. T horsepower rating is 185, and t ratio is a horsepower to each pounds of weight. Twelve Fle wood body styles are presented wheelbases of 141 inches.

New Shift and Motor Flywheel.

The new gear shifting metho termed by Cadillac the "syncr matic," is in each Cadillac a La Salle. Instead of a lever moun ed on the floor, where it has bee an unsightly obstruction, the shi is controlled by a large-knobbe lever beneath, and parallel to, th right side of the steering wheel

No relearning of shifting is i volved. The driver merely throw out his clutch as formerly, lifts th lever and draws it toward him f first speed, then follows the rang available in the customary practic

The "syncro-flex" flywheel o Cadillac eights is not a dampene to overcome torque vibration. fexible disc has been placed ne the hub of the flywheel so that th flywheel rim is rigid torsionally, bu flexible in bending. The disc a sorbs the "bending" vibration nor mally transmitted to the body, an so apparent engine strain has bee eliminated.

Many of the body and chassis refinements are common to both the Cadillacs and La Salles, although each line has a distinctive appearance. Grilles are generally more massive.

"Alligator hoods" have been adopted. Batteries are mounted under the hoods at the right.

The backs of the La Salle front seats are now heavily padded as a cushion against emergency stops. Instrument control knobs have been recessed under the panel.

Hypoid axles and self-lubricating rear spring inserts are standard throughout the line. Frames are more rigid.

Independent front wheel suspension, solid steel tops and uni-steel body construction are among the engineering features continued from 1937.

Hitch Hiker Has Code.

Arthur D. Swift of Reno, Nev., who after 90,500 miles of hitch-hiking dubs himself the "world's champion hitch hiker," gives three rules for success in the profession. They are cleanliness, neat appearance and traveling alone.

Driver Fingerprinting Advocated.

Fingerprinting of applicants for automobile operators' licenses as an aid to crime detection was urged recently by the New York State Motor Vehicle Commissioner.

Cadillac, La Salle Cars Have New Gear Shift and Smoother Engines

Grilles More Massive—16-Cylinder Engine Has 135 Degree Angle—Refinements Numerous.

There are three advances that stand out in the 1938 Cadillacs and La Salles now on display by the Oliver Cadillac Co., the distributer, and dealers here.

First is a new method of gear shifting said to have the advantages of the fully automatic shift and none of the complicated mechanical design.

Second is a radically engineered 16-cylinder motor.

Third is a new flywheel design to reduce driving fatigue by elimination of a source of vibration.

The New Models.

In the La Salle, the 125 horsepower V-8 motor that accounted for a new stock car record is continued with refinement. Five body styles are mounted on a 124-inch wheelbase.

The Cadillac V-8, in 1937 known as "Series 65" and built in only one body type, now includes an Imperial and a convertible sedan in addition to the five-passenger sedan. The car is larger this year, being on a 132-inch wheelbase and its V-8 motor develops 135 horsepower.

In the Cadillac-Fleetwood, more luxury of appointments and comfort have been built into this custom-built line. Headroom, legroom and seat widths have been increased, and visibility and cushioning improved. The horsepower of the V-8 motor is 140 with chassis advancements designed primarily for smoother performance.

The Cadillac 16 has a new engine with two banks of eight cylinders mounted at a 135-degree angle, creating a cradle for motor accessories. Almost flat and with its center of gravity lower than conventional practice, the engine makes for increased roadability and safety. The horsepower rating is 185, and the ratio is a horsepower to each 5.7 pounds of weight. Twelve Fleetwood body styles are presented on wheelbases of 141 inches.

New Shift and Motor Flywheel.

The new gear shifting method, termed by Cadillac the "syncromatic," is in each Cadillac and La Salle. Instead of a lever mounted on the floor, where it has been an unsightly obstruction, the shift is controlled by a large-knobbed lever beneath, and parallel to, the right side of the steering wheel.

No relearning of shifting is involved. The driver merely throws out his clutch as formerly, lifts the lever and draws it toward him for first speed, then follows the range available in the customary practice.

The "syncro-flex" flywheel on Cadillac eights is not a dampener to overcome torque vibration. A flexible disc has been placed near the hub of the flywheel so that the flywheel rim is rigid torsionally, but flexible in bending. The disc absorbs the "bending" vibration normally transmitted to the body, and so apparent engine strain has been eliminated.

Many of the body and chassis refinements are common to both the Cadillacs and La Salles, although each line has a distinctive appearance. Grilles are generally more massive.

"Alligator hoods" have been adopted. Batteries are mounted under the hoods at the right.

The backs of the La Salle front seats are now heavily padded as a cushion against emergency stops. Instrument control knobs have been recessed under the panel.

Hypoid axles and self-lubricating rear spring inserts are standard throughout the line. Frames are more rigid.

Independent front wheel suspension, solid steel tops and uni-steel body construction are among the engineering features continued from 1937.

Hitch Hiker Has Code.

Arthur D. Swift of Reno, Nev., who after 90,500 miles of hitch-hiking dubs himself the "world's champion hitch hiker," gives three rules for success in the profession. They are cleanliness, neat appearance and traveling alone.

Driver Fingerprinting Advocated.

Fingerprinting of applicants for automobile operators' licenses as an aid to crime detection was urged recently by the New York State Motor Vehicle Commissioner.

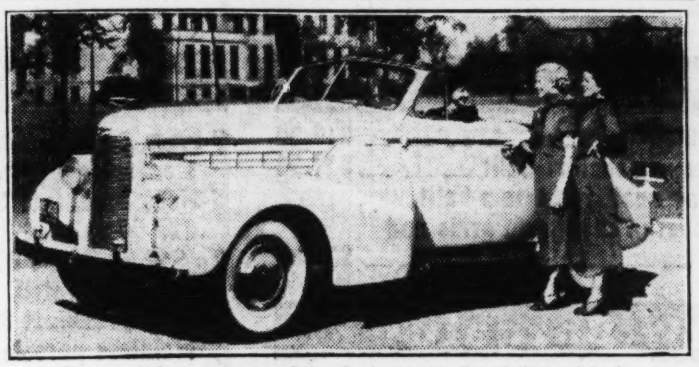
Four-door sedan model of the Cadillac Eight for 1938, with new exterior design, a new method of gear shifting and a "syncro-flex" flywheel to make the engine operate without apparent effort.

The New La Salle



Convertible coupe model of the 1938 La Salle with "syncromatic shift" and improved performance and restyled lines.

Chevrolet Increases Production Facilities For 1938 20 Per Cent

"Chevrolet has prepared for 1938 with an increase in its production facilities of 20 per cent. When it is considered that the company's production for 1937 will total more than 1,120,000 new cars and trucks, this increase in the production facilities is large," M. E. Coyle, general manager, says.

At Buffalo, N. Y., the company is building a plant that will have a daily capacity of 1200 motors and front and rear axles. It will be in operation about Jan. 1 and is intended to supply the eastern seaboard, freeing part of the production facilities of the Michigan factories for the rest of the country.

Signaling Always Advisable.

Rear view mirrors have not eliminated the need for giving signals. Many a motorist looks in his mirror, sees nothing immediately behind him and assumes that any maneuver may be made safely. The point overlooked is that the mirror does not show what is off to the immediate right or left at the rear of one's car.

Studebaker Backing Safe Headlights Drive

The Studebaker Corporation, a pioneer in the safe driving movement, is co-operating with national organizations to promote improved automobile headlighting and consequently safer driving at night.

The Automobile Manufacturers' Association, national organization of car manufacturers, is sponsoring a campaign to improve the headlighting on all cars.

Studebaker has advised its dealers to lend a hand in curbing faulty headlights by suggesting to all car owners a periodic inspection, by using special equipment and specially trained headlighting experts to aid in this work.

Gas Taxes Amount to Millions.

Every time a watch ticks, $25.37 is paid in State and Federal gasoline taxes in the United States. In the course of a year, it amounts to approximately $800,000,000.

Automobile Boycott.

Because they cannot get higher prices for the rubber they gathered this year, people of British Malay are refusing to buy automobiles.

Cadillac Co. Adds 60 and 60 Special

Four new Cadillac body types to accompany the wholly new Cadillac Sixty Special are announced.

The additional models fit into the range between the 1938 La Salle and the Cadillac Sixty Special. The Sixty Special made its debut at the New York Show the past week.

The cars will not get into production before January. The new line consists of a coupe, convertible coupe, convertible and four-door sedans. The Cadillac Sixty Special, one of the "surprise" models at the New York show, will be presented in only one body type, the touring sedan.

The new line will be known as the Cadillac Sixty. It will be on a 124-inch wheelbase, while the Special has a 127-inch wheelbase. Each is powered by a V-8 engine of 135 horsepower.

Illuminated Auto Plates.

License plates in Colorado will be illuminated next year. The plates will be dipped in a beaded solution to make them glisten at night. The cost is about a cent a plate.

Busiest Toll Crossings.

The most heavily traveled toll crossing is the Holland Tunnel of New York, with the Delaware River bridge at Philadelphia second, and the new San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge third.

Radio Curbs Auto Thieves.

Trading in stolen automobiles has been greatly curbed in Great Britain by means of an almost instantaneously working network of wireless messages, backed up by the police patrol car system.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 30.—Yale hauled itself back from the brink of the Blue's first defeat of the football season today by tying Dartmouth, 9 to 9 with only three seconds to go in an electrifying finish witnessed by a capacity crowd of 72,000 spectators.

The Elis snatched a touchdown from the air, with a last-ditch flourish, after Dartmouth's rugged convalescents, getting better as the game progressed, appeared to have clinched a third straight conquest over Yale with a 90-yard touchdown dash by Bob MacLeod and a field goal from the 30-yard line by Phil Dostal.

Al Hessberg took two long passes from Captain Clint Frank, Yale's All-America back, to gain 63 of the 65 yards reeled off in the closing Eli scoring thrust. The first was for 28 yards, the second for 35 yards as Hessberg took the ball 20 yards from the goal and shook off two tacklers to complete the scoring play.

Sub Kicks Extra Point.

It was a race against time, with the huge clock at one end of the field showing only three seconds remaining, and the Elis took full advantage of their opportunity. Gil Humphrey, substitute fullback, place-kicked the tying point, with Captain Frank holding the ball. There was time only for another kickoff before the final whistle.

The first full-house in Yale's mammoth bowl since the boom days of 1929 saw the chief contenders for eastern "Ivy League" honors, both previously unbeaten and untied, put on one of the most thrilling finishes of the season. Balmy Indian summer weather not only produced an unexpected sell out of the permanent stands but Eli officials said 10,000 spectators were turned away.

Dartmouth's powerful array not only manifested close to complete recovery from the epidemic of dysentery, which affected a dozen members of the squad the night before last, but had the Elis back on their heels most of the game. Among the Green's regulars who had been reported on the sick list only Dick Campbell, a guard, failed to start the game and he was put into the game in the last period. The others, paced by MacLeod and "Wild Bill" Hutchinson, sophomore backfield ace, played nearly the entire game.

Elis Are Outrushed.

The heavily favored Elis, outrushed nearly two to one, were saved from a decisive defeat mainly by the sensational punting of Fullback Dave Colwell. The longest of Colwell's magnificent "coffin corner" kicks traveled no less than 84 yards before caroming out on Dartmouth's six. It led to the Elis' first two points as Hutchinson, from kick formation, was tackled be-

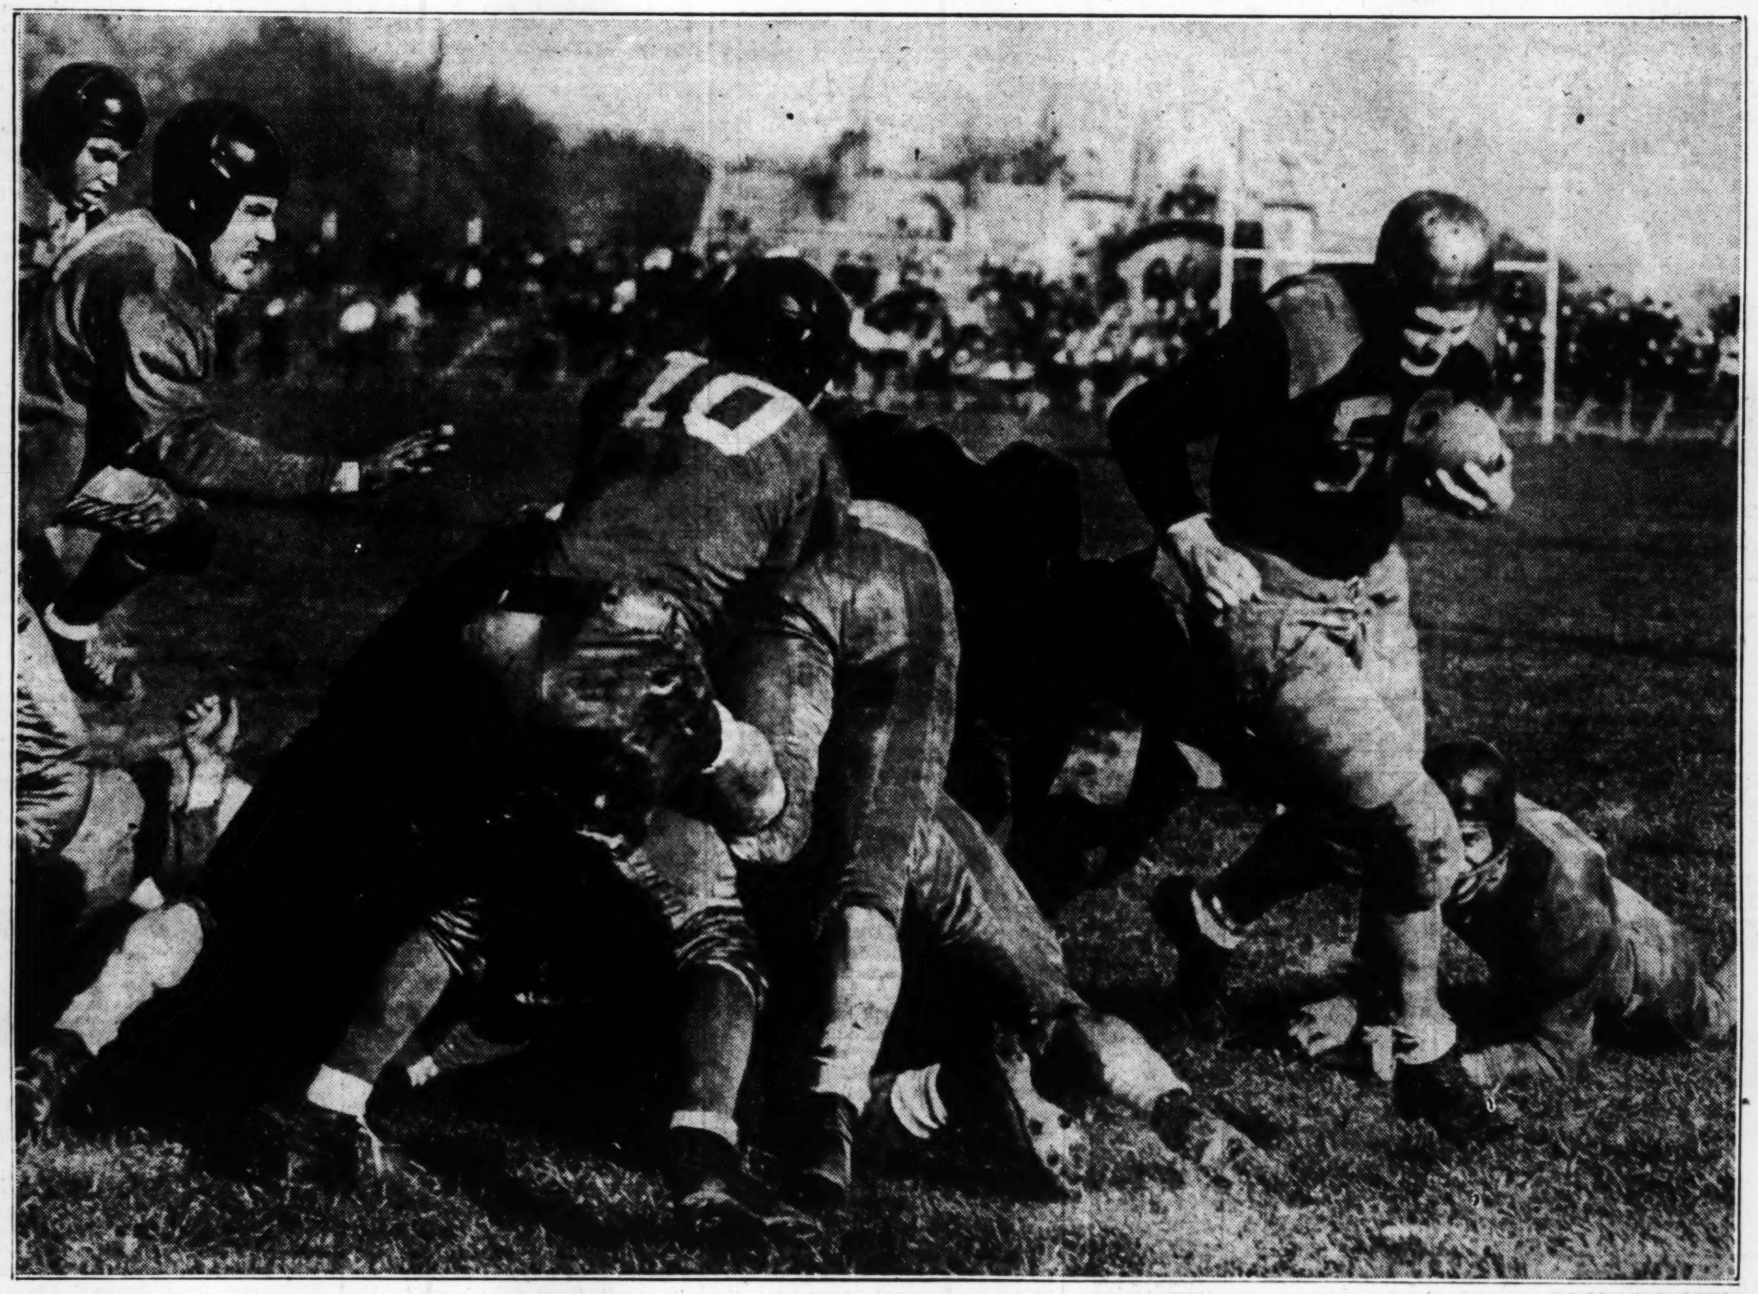
FINE WHILE IT LASTED: Bukant Scoring for Washington



Washington U. took a 12-0 lead in the first half of its game with Boston U. yesterday at Francis Field but the Easterners put on too much power in the second half and the Bears were defeated, 14-12. Here Joe Bukant is shown scoring the second Washington touchdown. Joe passed to Dick Yore for the first local score.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 30.—Notre Dame gridders proved again today why they call them "The Fighting Irish."

Fighting back a supposedly mighty Minnesota team which figured to sweep it right off the gridiron, Notre Dame rose to the heights to defeat the Golden Gophers in one of the major surprises of the season by the narrow margin of 7 to 6.

The result stunned a record crowd of 64,100 which sat under a brilliant sunlight canopy in Memorial Stadium expecting Minnesota to triumph and thus blot out the bitter memories of two previous defeats and one tie at the hands of Notre Dame.

Notre Dame battled the Gophers to a standstill early in the first period, after scoring a touchdown, and then protected its slim lead like football masters. Minnesota displayed no flash of class that won it national recognition in previous years until the closing minutes of the game when the Gophers opened up with a forward pass attack which advanced the ball from their own 12-yard line to the Notre Dame 35 before it ended with a pass interception. In desperation Harold Van Every, Minnesota's brilliant forward pass artist, hurled the ball through the air eight times in an attempt to score and turn defeat into victory.

Playing for Sweeney.

Just as he did a week ago, Chuck Sweeney, the smiling Irish lad of Bloomington, Ill., saved the game for Notre Dame. After Minnesota had scored a touchdown in the second period, Sweeney blocked George Faust's try for extra point, allowing the fighting Irish to retain

WRAY'S COLUMN

What Makes Him Tick.

WHEN Henry Jackson, now featherweight ring champion, chose the name Armstrong for his nom de guerre he made no mistake. One of the features of his fighting has been his strong arms, with which he punches at top speed, round after round, without ever appearing to tire. Not only are they seemingly tireless, but at all times they carry a powerful knockout punch, as 22 knockouts in his 23 fights of the current year attest.

So amazing is the endurance he shows in standing up under the terrific pace he sets that he has been called the Perpetual Motion Man of the ring. Many fighters in the past have been able to throw plenty of gloves; but none that we recall was able to maintain the pace for ten rounds and still carry a finishing wallop at the close. Fans wonder how he does it.

Probably the answer is to be found not so much in Henry's arms as in his legs. For when pace is to be maintained the first War Admiral, sent to front at once, was kept out from rail throughout, drew out without effort approaching stretch and was going handily at end. Heelfly, off well, dropped back going to first turn, was rated to half pole, improved position between horses and was doing best at end. Burning Star, off tardily, was rushed up to press pace and tired gradually through stretch under strong handling. Firethorn went evenly but could not threaten. Aneroid was in tight quarters at first turn. Chanceview had early speed. Calumet Dick was taken up sharply at first turn and failed to rally thereafter.

By the Associated Press.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 30.—War Admiral, Samuel D. Riddle's little brown colt, scampered to his seventh straight triumph today to win the mile and a quarter Washington Handicap and become the big money winner of the year.

His victory by a length and a half over Heelfly in the fast time of 2:04 4-5 was worth $15,350 to the Admiral, bringing his earnings for the year to $160,820 and shoving him ahead of C. S. Howard's Seabiscuit in money earning ranks.

The prospect of a duel between War Admiral and Seabiscuit, the handicap champion of the season, vanished when Seabiscuit was scratched early this morning.

It was War Admiral all the way.

Easily the best of the three-year-olds, War Admiral was asked to battle some of the "grown-up" stars for the first time, but it was the same old story.

He was out front all the way and ran them all into the Maryland dirt, with only T. P. Morgan's Heelfly able to stand the pace and make any sort of a challenge down the stretch. None of the older

BUKANT'S FINE EARLY WORK OFFSET BY FAMIGLIETTI'S SCORES IN SECOND HALF

Bukin' Joe Passes to Yore for First Touchdown and Then Scores One Himself; Visiting Back Crosses Goal-Line Twice and Kicks One Extra Point.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Jimmy Conzelman's Washington University Bears played with inspiration and an attack that had both precision and definition at Francis Field for 30 minutes yesterday afternoon. When the versatile Sir James' warriors romped to the dressing room at half time, they were leading the Boston Terriers, 12 to 0.

The Washington team played its best football of the season, it seemed to all observers. The line repulsed every Boston thrust when the goal was in danger. The ends had raced down on punts and dropped the Terriers in their tracks. The blocking was good, and the most pleasing thing of all was that the Bear attack was functioning. There were two scoring opportunities and Washington made the most of them, driving through the hard-charging and powerful Boston machine for two touchdowns. Failure to convert two extra points constituted the only flies in the salve, and with a 12-point lead, who was going to worry about two measly points?

Perhaps in those 30 minutes of hard fighting, the Bears gave all they had and nothing left. Perhaps the Terriers had superior man power or stamina. At any rate, the tide of the battle suddenly turned in the second half. Twice the Bears fumbled in their own territory. Each time the Terriers seized Old Man Opportunity by the beard and smashed through the weary Bears for touchdowns. And whereas the Washington place kicks for extra points had sailed wide of the goal posts, the Terriers sent the ball squarely between the uprights after their touchdowns and by the margin of those two points, Pat Handley's machine from Boston triumphed over the Bears, 14 to 12. About 6000 attended the game.

Heroes Are Goats.

Leo Shakofsky and Jack Warner were the Bears who made the costly fumbles and it so happened that each played a brilliant game, except for the dropped footballs. Shakofsky started the Bears on their first touchdown drive with a brilliant 39-yard run and Warner, besides doing a fine job of kicking was powerful on defense and did a full share on the attack.

While it was a heart-breaking defeat for the Bears and no doubt put a few more gray hairs in the thatch of the hard-worrying Conzelman, it would have been an upset victory, if Sir James' warriors had taken the measure of the Terriers. There was far more power in the visiting machine. The statistics proved this conclusively. The Boston ball carriers lugged the pigskin 257 yards through the Washington defenders, more than the length of the field in excess of what the Bears could gain from scrimmage.

One hard-driving Boston ball carrier made the difference between victory and defeat. His name is Gary Famiglietti and it was his smashes through the Washington line that made the Bear defense look like so much tissue paper, that gave the visitors their extra yardage and eventually the two touchdowns that matched the Bear lead of the first half.

The program says that Famiglietti weights 194 pounds, but he looked like a ton of dynamite as he boomed into and through the Washington line. He had important help, too, from the Boston forward wall. It seemed that in the second half the visitors resorted to a trick of the gridiron that is known as cross blocking. Or so the learned followers of the gridiron sport inform us. At any rate something was happening. A Bear lineman would break through, the Bear next to him found himself hit by two numbers of the enemy and through this hole, the width of two positions, Famiglietti charged so often that the public address system became weary of trying to pronounce his name correctly. The name and the man also had the entire Bear team nauseated before the final gun barked that sent the unhappy Bears to the showers.

Yore Scores on Pass.

About nine minutes of the first period had been played when the Bears suddenly struck and scored their first touchdown. Shakofsky found a hole on his left side of the line and filtered through, sidestepping and slipping until he had advanced 39 yards to put the ball on the Boston 41-yard line. Shakofsky then took a pass from Joe

HARVARD GAINS FIRST VICTORY OVER PRINCETON SINCE 1923, 34-6

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 30.—It was a long haul, but Dick Harlow's Harvards finally made it.

Before a crowd of 48,000 gathered today in Palmer Stadium, the Crimson developed sufficient power to steam-roller Princeton, 34-6, in the first "Big Three" game of the season. Thus Harlow was amply rewarded after two and a half seasons of fruitless waiting for Harvard's first major triumph of his Cambridge coaching career. The Crimson had not won over Princeton since 1923.

And in winning Harvard uncovered an outstanding star in Vernon Struck.

The Cantab fullback, scored three of the winners' five touchdowns, handled the ball on virtually every play, was in for 59 of the 60 minutes and a terror on defense. He piled up over 200 of his team's 293 yards gained rushing, and tacked on 21 more with his second touchdown, a runback of a short Princeton punt which he took on the fly.

Harvard scored twice in the first period, once in the second, then added two more for good measure in the last quarter. After the Tigers' second-period touchdown, scored on a 17-yard pass from Jack White to Johnny Vruwink at the end of a 62-yard march, they got beyond midfield only twice.

A 65-yard drive gave Harvard its opening score, made by Torbert MacDonald from the two-yard line. The second followed a few moments later, as both of Harvard's ends broke in to block a punt by Bob Hinchman. Bob Green actually got in front of the ball, then retrieved it and, with blocking from fellow-wingman Don Daughters, carried it to the Tiger two. Struck bucked it over.

MacDonald's punt downed on the Princeton three, set up Struck's next score, as Givens had to kick back hurriedly from behind his goal line. In the last period Struck

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 30—Michigan's scrappy Wolverines applied a spot of tarnish to Bob Zuppke's silver jubilee celebration today, coming from behind with a quick third period scoring thrust to defeat Illinois, 7 to 6, before 30,000 spectators in Memorial Stadium.

It was the fifth successive year in which battles between the old rivals had been determined by a place-kick. Michigan, in snapping the Illinois string of victories over the Wolverines at three straight, won on Fred Trosko's perfect conversion after his long touchdown pass to John Nicholson had caught the Illinois secondary flatfooted.

69-Yard March.

After a fumble-marred first half, Illinois began a 69-yard touchdown march in the third period. Taking the kickoff, the Illini, with Sophomore Ralph Bennett and Ken Zimmerman sparking a brilliant running and passing attack, drove to the Michigan 15.

Zimmerman then faded back and shot a bullet-like pass to Bill Bennis, who made a brilliant, finger-tip catch and was nailed by Trosko on the Michigan five. Zimmerman, on his third line smash, reached the Michigan three when he fumbled. The ball bounded crazily a foot over the goal line and Willard Cramer, sophomore Illini tackle, recovered for a touchdown. Bill Berner's conversion try was low.

Michigan's alert secondary gave the Wolverines their chance for victory in the closing minutes of the third period. Bill Barclay intercepted one of Zimmerman's passes on the Wolverine 44. Thosko shot a pass to Danny Smick which put Michigan on the Illinois 47. Trosko and Barclay alternated in smashing to the Illinois 39. Then Trosko dropped back five yards and shot a long pass diagonally across the field.

Nicholson Disregarded.

Nicholson was completely disregarded by the Illinois backs and no Illinois man was within 20 yards of him as he took Trosko's aerial on the 14 and ran unmolested over the goal line. Trosko, with his line holding firm, calmly booted the winning point.

Illinois made 10 first downs to three for Michigan and gained 123 yards by rushing to 56 for the Wolverines. The Illini, however, could not crack the Wolverine forward wall when scoring chances came. Illinois recovered four Michigan fumbles. The Wolverines retaliated twice.

"ROLLER DERBY" AT COLISEUM NOV. 19

The Roller Derby, skating event in which men and women skate in teams in a theoretical cross-country competition, will return to the Coliseum, starting Nov. 19, for 21 days. The skaters will "travel" 1500 miles from Salt Lake City to St. Louis.

BEARS FAIL TO HOLD 12-0 LEAD AND LOSE TO BOSTON U., 14-12

Bukant and made it another first down on the enemy 27-yard stripe. Bukant bucked through for eight but the Bears were offside and took a five-yard penalty instead of the gain. It was fourth down and a yard to go. Bukant faded back and flipped a pass to Dick Yore who raced down the side of the field for the touchdown. Shakofsky's try for the extra point was low and wide.

An excellent quick kick by Warner after three and a half minutes of the second quarter, set the stage for the second Washington touchdown. The Terriers downed the ball on their 15-yard line and the Bears blocked a kick, Bill Seibert grabbing the ball out of the air to give the Conzelman team another scoring opportunity. A five-yard penalty against Boston for offside advanced the ball to the seven-yard mark and after Warner cracked through for three, Bukant found a hole and plunged over for the touchdown. Lloyd Harris' try for the extra point was wide.

Early in the third quarter Shakofsky received a punt and carried it back to his 24-yard line. On the next play Shakofsky dropped the ball as he was charged and downed by a horde of Boston defenders and Don Livingston recovered on the Washington 23-yard line. Earle Crompton made a yard and Famiglietti added a small piece. A pass was incomplete and on fourth down the Terriers still needed five. But Famiglietti was good for that five. He found that ubiquitous wagon gate in the Bear line and made it first down on the 12-yard line. The Famiglietti—let's call him Gary—hit center for seven, added four to put the ball a yard from home and on a third thrust he smashed through the Bear defenders for the touchdown.

Saul Nechtem converted the extra point and the Bears were only five points ahead.

Another Break.

The Bears repulsed all other threats in the third period and were gamely defending their lead in the fourth when another fumble gave the Terriers the opportunity they needed. Bukant intercepted a pass on Washington's 29-yard line, a break that was cheered by the hopeful Bear stands, but on the next play Warner fumbled and when the pile of young warriors was untangled, Crompton was hugging the ball.

Crompton then took to the air and flipped a long pass to Al Holgerson, who reached the two-yard line before he was dropped. The rest of the business of scoring was easy, however. Famig—oh yes, we were going to call him by his first name—Gary took one crack at the line and he was over just like that, to turn a day of much early hope for the Bears into an evening of bitter disappointment. That made it 13 to 12 and Gary made it 14 to 12 by place-kicking the extra point.

Until Mrs. Famiglietti's broth of a boy Gary wore the Bears down to shreds, aided no little by Lou Blaszynski, Nechtem, Crompton and Leon Spivack, the Washington team, as suggested before, was brilliant at the ends. Norman Tomlinson and Miles Cunningham did a fine job at the tackles and Libero Bertagnolli and Russ Meredith could be proud of their work at guard. Charley Gould and Jack Maginn performed more than creditably at center.

There was much fine blocking and many a Boston play was upset before it was fairly started. But they made a tough boy when they made that Gary Famiglietti. And he brought a tough gang of young men with him. But that's football for you, as Mr. Conzelman so entertainingly has told us.

feature to be put to the test is the fighter's wind, then his legs and finally his arms.

Legs and the Man.

IN the old days when fighters worked hard and prepared for long battles a boxer was "no better than his legs." As long as the underpinning stood up, the boxer was never licked. And so they hammered away with the idea of getting a man's legs fit by mountain climbing and road work, now almost neglected by the fighters of today. Daily the boxer went for road jogs looking to strengthen his leg muscles for long battles; and in making his props stronger, boxers necessarily developed their wind. Week after week fighters kept it up, although it was perhaps the most arduous and the least interesting feature of training life.

So important did the legs become that, late in his career, Featherweight Champion Johnny Kilbane, while training for his fight with Criqui, ran up several flights of stairs in the Woolworth tower daily to test both his leg and wind power.

Strong Legs, Strong Arms.

ARMSTRONG, champion today by virtue of his recent victory over Petey Sarron, is of the old school. Even as an amateur in St. Louis he ran from Jefferson avenue to Maplewood and back to condition himself. He even trained to enter C. C. Pyle's bunion Derby, although he did not start, to better his leg power.

Still adhering to his early road work custom Armstrong today has legs that carry him around the ring when the underpinning of his foes begins to tire. That happened to Petey Sarron who for four rounds was swarming all over Armstrong only to find his own props "shot" and his whole battle campaign wrecked, while the strong-legged and strong-armed foe was just getting down to business.

Other boxers, copying Henry's training habits, might learn that ring success is as much a matter of legs as fists.

The "Color Line" Withdrawn.

IT WAS John L. Sullivan who started the fashion of drawing the color line. John L., apparently, wanted none of the great Peter Jackson's game, more than 40 years ago, and took all Negro names off his challenge list.

Off and on, white champions occasionally invoked the same excuse. In case where a Negro fighter happened to be the champion, however, white challengers forgot there ever was a color line.

More than 20 years ago, believe it or not, there were more great Negro battlers in the fight game than there are in top-rank circles today, despite the amazing activity shown among the dusky athletes since the rise of Joe Louis.

Not only were there more, but better fighters than the present crop—hardier, better coached and trained, men who could be champions if in their prime today.

Joe Louis at his best probably would not have been able to whip anyone of that great group of heavyweights who flourished a quarter of a century ago, including Jack Johnson, Sam Langford, Sam McVea and Harry Wills. And what chance would Light-heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis have had against the old master, Joe Jeanette, or even Jeff Clarke, the "Fighting Ghost" of Joplin?

Came Up the Hard Way.

ALL of the old-time Negro fighters named were contemporary and all came up the hard way, battling up through the years, taking on the toughest.

One thing that can be said of Tommy Burns, in his day called a cheese champion when he took the title from Marvin Hart, is that he did not invoke the color line to protect his title from the group of powerful Negro champions who were hounding his footsteps, in those days.

He accepted a match with Johnson, after being followed to Australia by his Negro challenger. He was a game but rather easy foe for the Negro giant.

Strange to say, when Johnson became champion, it was he who drew the color line—against his own race. Sam Langford begged Johnson for a fight. Joe Woodman, Langford's manager, employed every device he knew to force "Li'l Artha'" into a match—in vain.

Langford, the greatest hitter of them all, never got a crack at Johnson's title. Instead, Johnson took on Jeffries, out of the ring seven years, and little Jim Flynn, whom he previously had stopped.

Dempsey Was Willing.

AFTER becoming champion, neither Dempsey nor Tunney fought Negro opponents, and the powerful fighter, Harry Wills, had to remain on the outside looking in, because he could not get a match with the champion of the day.

Neither Dempsey nor Tunney really "drew the color line" against him. Dempsey, in fact, tried to arrange the match. But the country's promoters, mindful of the racial agitations which followed Johnson's rise to the title and his conquest of the ancient "hollow shell" Jeffries, decided that it would be imprudent to put on a mixed battle for the title.

Today, the agitation has died down, and Joe Louis' conquests of white opponents has produced scarcely a ripple of excitement and no race troubles.

The color line has faded out.

NORTHWESTERN WINS, 14-6, FROM WISCONSIN IN BIG TEN GAME

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 30.—Northwestern pushed Wisconsin from the ranks of the undefeated in Big Ten football competition today with a 14 to 6 victory before a defense stride after a setback by crowd of 30,000.

Northwestern, resuming its title-Ohio State last week, found the weaknesses of the Wisconsin forward early and stuck mainly to conservative ground plays.

Captain Don Heap, left halfback, put Northwestern in the lead midway in the first period, plunging to a touchdown from the 5-yard line after he led a drive from his own 33-yard mark. Nick Conteas, quarterback, kicked the extra point from placement.

AMES, Ia., Oct. 30.—Denied in the first half by a spirited Iowa State line, Missouri struck in the third and fourth quarters to hand the Cyclones a 12-0 homecoming defeat today, before a crowd of 11,000.

The trimming was the third Big Six Conference loss in a row for Iowa State. The result gave Missouri a .500 standing with one victory and one defeat.

The heralded return of Everett Kischer, injured star back, did not materialize. And with its offensive power sitting on the bench, Iowa State never seriously threatened.

A 51-yard march produced the Tigers' first touchdown in the third period after the Cyclone forward wall had dug in during the first half. Don Johnson's 18-yard pass to Mahley was the scoring play.

A fourth quarter break in the way of a recovered fumble helped the Tigers score their second touchdown. Darrow, Iowa State back, tried to pick a punt on the run, but muffed it and Haas recovered for Missouri on the Iowa State 19.

Johnson, Mahley and Mondala took turns at walloping the tired Iowa State line, Johnson going over for the touchdown from the one-foot mark.

The Iowans outgained the Tigers on first downs, 8 to 7, but Missouri had the more profitable afternoon in yardage gained. The Tigers rolled up 134 yards net on the ground and 34 in the air, against 40 on running plays for Iowa State and 49 on passes.

NOTRE DAME UPSETS MINNESOTA, 7 TO 6

their one-point lead. There was a swirl of bodies crashing into the ball after Faust's toe hit it, but it was Sweeney who did the work.

It was the same Sweeney who last week rocketed into Allen McFarland in the end zone to give Notre Dame a safety in its 9 to 7 surprise victory over the Navy.

From the very beginning Notre Dame was an alert, smart, scrappy eleven. The first time the Irish got the ball on a punt, action began. Andy Puplis, Notre Dame's little quarterback, ran the ball back 35 yards along the side lines, going to Minnesota's 34 before Larry Buhler, Minnesota fullback, smacked him out of bounds. On the third down McCarthy passed to McCormick who was stopped on Minnesota's 19 and then McCarthy struck the end of the nine-yard stripe. Thesing, Notre Dame fullback, plowed three yards and McCarthy banged around right end to the four. From there Puplis on a quarterback sneak, dived across the line and then kicked goal.

There Elmer Layden, coach of Notre Dame, sent his second team into the game and Minnesota got to work. Van Every advanced the ball to the 43 and then the Irish regulars came charging back into the game.

Minnesota however, scored on a tricky double lateral and a forward, with Capt. Ray King snaring the ball on the five-yard line and going across the edge of the field without a Notre Dame player touching him. Marty Christianson started the pass, tossing it to Rudy Gmitro who heaved it to Van Every who tossed to King.

That was the spot for Sweeney who came charging forward to block Faust's kick.

Minnesota Can Pass.

Notre Dame missed another opportunity to score in the second period when Puplis intercepted Van Every's pass on his own 47 and dodged through the Minnesota team to the Gopher 16 before Christianson brought him down. There was a minute and 30 seconds left to play but the Irish could not get the ball across.

Minnesota surpassed Notre Dame in only one department and that on the strength of the last minute aerial assault in the frantic closing minutes.

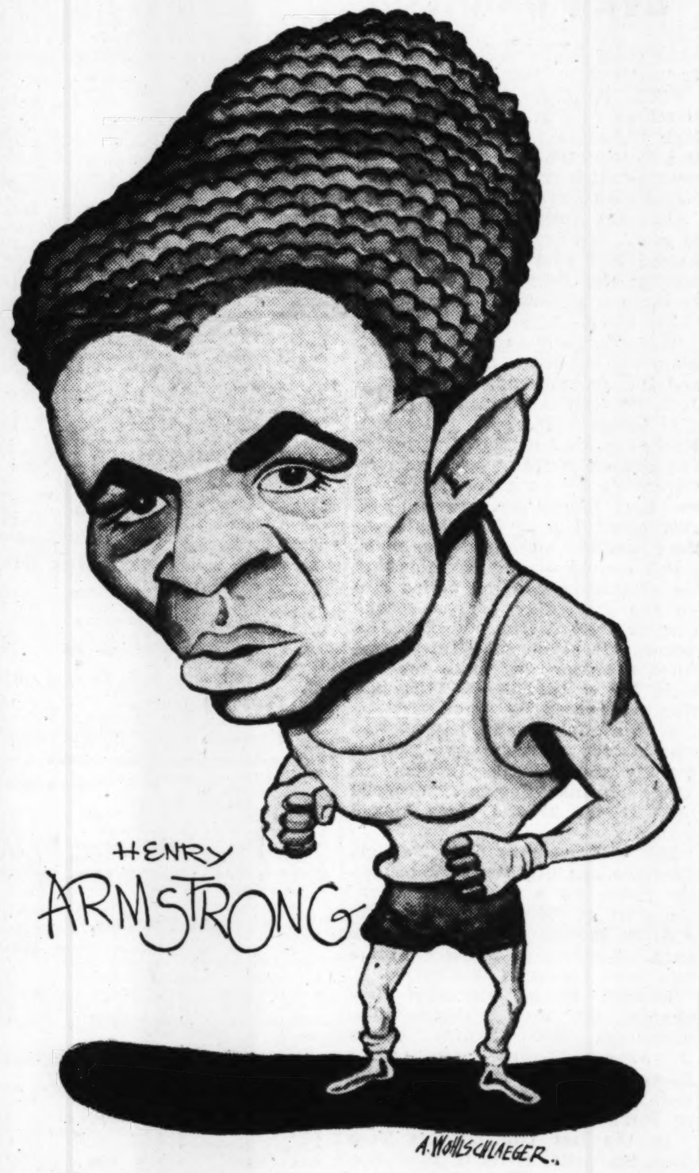
Armstrong Took Up Boxing After He Found Football Too 'Rough'

Armstrong and Billy Beauhuld To Fight, Nov. 19

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30..

HENRY ARMSTRONG, St. Louis boy, who won the featherweight championship from Petey Sarron last night, will face Billy Beauhuld of Jersey City, also former St. Louisan, at Madison Square Garden Nov. 19, it was announced today. Armstrong's new title will not be at stake.



He couldn't make the grade as a football player at Vashon High School in St. Louis, and it took him a long time to believe the stories about "Sunny California" because he arrived there on his first visit during one of those rare three-week rain "spells", but today Henry Armstrong, born here 25 years ago on two blocks long Josephine street, is featherweight boxing champion of the world.

The Negro who beat Petey Sarron in New York, Friday night, to become the first native-born St. Louisan to gain recognition as a world titleholder, once thought football was too rough for a light athlete and failed in an effort to gain a positon on the Vashon High eleven.

Like the history of many fighters, Armstrong, or Henry Jackson, as he was baptized, had a long, tough trail before he reached the fistic heights.

He was born on Josephine street, near the Jefferson avenue viaduct, Dec. 12, 1912, youngest of 14 children. His real name is Henry Jackson, but he changed it to Henry Armstrong simply because he reasoned the latter was a better name for a boxer.

Was an Honor Student.

When Henry was eight years old, his mother died. He then was supported by his grandmother, who recently died at the age of 95. Henry was smaller than any of his brothers or sisters, but showed greater strength even in his youth, according to St. Louis Negroes who grew up with him at the L'Ouverture Grammar School.

At Vashon High, Armstrong, or Jackson, as the files will show, was an honor student. He found football too rough for a lightweight like himself, so in his spare time at school he tried writing poetry and songs.

Upon graduation from high school, Henry figured it was much easier to meet one opponent in the boxing ring than to face eleven would-be tacklers on a football field. He had hopes, however, of attending the University of Southern California. But there weren't enough funds in the Jackson treasury.

About this time, C. C. Pyle was looking for contestants for his "Bunion Derby," and Harry (Armstrong) Jackson, Henry's brother, thought Henry might earn enough money in this race to enter college. But when Harry saw that his brother liked roadwork so well, he decided Henry might make a good boxer, because his endurance was without limitation.

Did Plenty of Road Work.

That was the beginning of Henry Armstrong, St. Louis featherweight boxer. Brother Harry had tried boxing prior to that, but gave up the idea and decided to push Henry along. For one year, Harry and James Brown, physical athletic director of the Pine Street Y. M. C. A., drilled and coached Henry. Part of the daily training grind was to run from Jefferson avenue to Maplewood and return, a distance of approximately 15 miles.

Henry won four amateur bouts, but failed to interest St. Louis fight managers, so the Armstrong brothers set out with one "Kid" Mississippi, a local boxer, in a second-hand auto for an "Eastern tour" in search of engagements. The "tour" ended like many others and Henry was soon back in St. Louis, broke and disgusted.

With $3 and plenty of determination, the two Armstrongs three weeks later started "bumming" their way to California on freight trains, eating cheese and crackers until they reached the coast.

When they arrived there, they began to wonder about the boasted California weather. It rained for three weeks; there wasn't any sun in the skies and none shone on the Armstrongs. The only blessing was that it taught Henry a few things about diet.

Finally Hits Pay Dirt.

Times improved, and soon Henry "ran" a number of shoe shine stands, but found himself gaining in weight. He soon worked himself into fighting condition and got a few bouts, but these netted him only small cash returns.

His record soon attracted the attention of promoters, not to mention a few moving picture notables, and after Al Jolson became interested in the native-born St. Louis fighter, his name appeared frequently in headlines. His rise to the world title is well known.

Henry's sisters here in St. Louis like to talk about his singing ability—his tenor voice and all that. Some of the wags are probably saying today that as a singer, Armstrong makes a good boxer. Just a world champion—that's all.

When Armstrong stopped Sarron in six rounds at Madison Square Garden to win the feather title, it marked his twenty-second knockout in his last 23 fights.

ALABAMA ROLLS OVER KENTUCKY, 41 TO 0

By the Associated Press.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Oct. 30.—Alabama's Crimson Tide, visioning a fifth Rose Bowl bid, swept over Kentucky, 41-0, here this afternoon in a homecoming day game. A crowd of 13,000 watched the contest.

After a slow first period Alabama's attack reached its crest with three touchdowns in the second quarter.

Coach Thomas sent in his pony backs shortly after the half and they procured a touchdown in a series of uninterrupted rushes.

Reserves played throughout the second half, pushing over two touchdowns.

HUSKERS SCORE ON PASS, BEAT INDIANA, 7-0

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 30.—Biff Jones' hitless wonders still are at it.

In a dizzy, daffy football game, crammed with contradictions, his Nebraska Cornhuskers slashed out a lone touchdown on the first scrimmage play of the game to defeat the potent Hoosiers of Indiana, 7 to 0, and continue in the list of the nation's unbeaten elevens.

Almost before the 37,000 fans, second largest home crowd in Cornhusker history, had settled themselves, they were on their feet roaring. Little Jack Dodd took a short shovel pass from Johnny Howell behind the Nebraska 35-yard line where the Huskers had put the ball in play after an out-of-bounds kickoff, and started eating up the yards around his left end.

His teammates came to his aid with superb downfield blocking and he crossed the goal standing up. Lowell English placed-kicked the goal as the hand on the big clock registered just 17 seconds.

Then came the maze of statistical contradictions which sent fans home groggy.

The Huskers failed to register a first down until midway in the final period, and wound up with two, one on a penalty. They gained a net 25 yards from rushing, and on the two forward passes attempted they gained a total of 88 yards. The backs were smothered before they reached the line of scrimmage, starting like they were pulling their feet out of tar.

Meanwhile the sturdy Hoosiers surged up and down the field like a big black wave and registered 14 first downs. They gained a net 136 yards by land and 132 yards by air.

Yet in the clutches the Nebraska line smothered every touchdown threat before it reached pay dirt. Six times the Hoosiers started what appeared to be touchdown marches. Twice Jack Dodd intercepted passes in the end zone, and after it was all over the impression was the teams could play all night and at dawn the Huskers still would be leading, 7 to 0.

AMERICAN POLO TEAM WINS IN ARGENTINA

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 30.—Seymour Knox's Aurora polo team, which will compete in the Argentine open championship, yesterday defeated a pickup quartet, led by Roberto Cavanagh, 8 to 6, in a practice match at the Hurlingham Club.

The invaders used their regular lineup of Knox, Skiddy von Stade, Capt. Pat Roark and Lindsay Howard. Riding with Cananagh were three low-ranking players—N. W. Leaf, Ramon Santa Marina and Jorge Fanshawe.

OKLAHOMA IN 19-0 WIN OVER KANSAS STATE

By the Associated Press.

MANHATTAN, Kan., Oct. 30.—A substitute back, Otis Rogers, grabbed the third-period kick-off and hurried 90 yards for the touchdown which started Oklahoma off toward its 19-to-0 victory over Kansas State in a Big Six football game here today.

After a scoreless first half, Oklahoma completely bottled up Howard Cleveland, Kansas State's triple threat quarterback, and sent Jack Baer and Woody Huddleston crashing through the Wildcat line for big gains.

In the final period the Sooners displayed an effective aerial attack, connecting 10 times in 19 attempts for a total of 114 yards. Both of their final touchdowns were the results of aerial maneuvering. Baer tossed to End Frank Ivy for 16 yards to place the ball on the five-yard for the first. Baer then crashed over. The final tally came when Hugh McCullough saw Ivy in the end zone and pitched a perfect strike.

SIX MAJOR ELEVENS UNDEFEATED, UNTIED

Six major collegiate football teams remained undefeated and untied after yesterday's upsets. They are California, Alabama, Baylor, Montana, Santa Clara and University of Colorado.

The more prominent schools which have not been defeated but which have been tied are Dartmouth, Yale, Nebraska, Holy Cross, Temple, Villanova, Pittsburgh, Fordham and Duke.

Cornell Defeats Columbia, 14-0

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 30.—Two touchdowns in the third period, both via the air, gave Cornell its first victory since 1931 over Columbia, 14—0, on Schoellkopf Field today. Twelve thousand spectators saw Peck score on a 27-yard pass play and Eichler on a 60-yard run after a pass interception. Rose converted both points.

The Yankees declare they will sincerely oppose all efforts to deaden the present baseball.—Exchange.

And here we have been thinking all the time that their one and only aim in life was to knock that old pellet deader than a last year's smelt! You never can tell.

TO knock 'em over fence or wall
Is just a Yankee habit;
And they're determined that the

Nobody shall derabbit.

According to the point of view,
From which the players view it,
The batters don't, the pitchers do,
And that's all there is to it.

VANDERBILT IS UPSET, 14-0, BY GEORGIA TECH

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Oct. 30.—In a dazzling exhibition of football alertness, the like of which few fans had ever seen on Grant Field, the Engineers of Georgia Tech rose from the doldrums of defeat today to crush the hitherto undefeated and untied Commodores of Vanderbilt, 14 to 0, before 20,000 spectators.

Humbled on successive Saturdays by Duke and Auburn, and taking the field an underdog, the golden-shirted gridders substituted alertness for power and their famed razzle-dazzle to humiliate the Commodores with touchdown thrusts in the second period—both coming within four minutes.

After a scoreless first quarter, Sims, the Engineer quarterback, booted one out of bounds on the Vanderbilt 13-yard line. Little Jimmy Huggins, the Commodore quarterback, cut through tackle for five but fumbled and Tech recovered on the 22-yard mark.

Line plays netted three, and on third down Sims tossed a long pass to Bill Jordan, Tech's flashy end, who caught it on the goal line for a score. Sims placekicked the extra point. A few moments later Huggins momentarily fumbled a low pass from center, picked it up and tried to pass to Carlton Perry.

Tech's Junius Page raced in to intercept the pass on Vanderbilt's 21-yard line and ran easily to the goal. Sims again placekicked the extra point.

ESPOSA DEFEATS HE DID IN $5000 SCARSDALE HANDICAP

MARE WINS BY LENGTH AT 10-1; WOODBURY GETS SHOW POSITION

Infantry, Backed Into 7-2 Favoritism, Finishes Fifth in Empire Closing Day Feature.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Esposa, game five-year-old mare in the silks of William Ziegler Jr., proved the heroine of the eighteenth Scarsdale Handicap as New York's most successful season since the advent of open betting reached the end of the trail at Empire City this afternoon.

Quoted at 10 to 1 in the field of 11, the daughter of Espino triumphed by a length to capture a purse of $5750. She ran the mile and 70 yards in 1:45, not menacing the track mark.

Trainer J. T. Taylor saddled the second and third horses, respectively. Arnold Hanger's He Did was closest to the winner, a length clear of L. B. Combs' Woodberry. Caballero II was fourth.

M. L. Emerich's Infantry was backed into 7 to 2 favoritism. He was placed well enough in the intermediate stages to come on and win, but lacked the ability and wound up fifth.

Thorson, a two-time winner here, was knocked back at the break in a bad start and never reached a contending position after his tardy getaway.

Sixth 1937 Victory.

Esposa, which had not won a race since the Saratoga session in August (she was fourth in Thorson's recent Yorktown Handicap), turned in one of the most impressive efforts of her busy career. This, her sixth score in 19 starts this year, was gained only after a long, hard pull from back among the trailers. Fair Knightess, a more highly regarded mare according to the betting, and He Did vied for the lead to the stretch. Esposa began her victory drive rounding the final bend. Nick Wall, the tiny lightweight veteran, pumped for all he was worth through the short stretch and Esposa forged on, taking the lead from He Did after Fair Knightess had surrendered. He Did held on well but was outfinished. Woodberry, starting slowly as usual, held Caballero II safe through the last furlong.

Miyako Is Winner.

Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Merry Lassie, generally conceded the two-year-old filly championship, received a rude setback with the fifteenth running of the Autumn Day stakes, in which 10 lassies traveled about six furlongs.

The Stimulus Miss went into the race with a record of seven victories in eight starts but she was unable to cope with the stretch challenge of A. H. Waterman's little gray gamester, Miyako, which beat the 1 to 2 favorite by two lengths to capture the $3000 winner's share of the purse.

Merry Lassie, carrying 119 pounds or six more than the winner, saved the place by another two lengths from Paul Codd's Devil's Mate. The time was 1:10.

Miyako, ridden by Frank Kopel, who excels at winning with long shots, was a 7 to 1 shot. She has started 19 times and, despite her size, seems to thrive on racing. This was her fifth success.

Jimmy Stout, thrown by Pine Frills at the post in the first race, was sent to the hospital for an X-ray to determine if he had injured a rib. He cancelled his remaining mounts after his mishap.

Johnny Gilbert was fined $200 for failing to keep his riding engagements today.

ST. VIATOR EASILY BEATS McKENDREE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANKAKEE, Ill., Oct. 30. — St. Viator College capitalized on one scoring opportunity in each of the first three quarters to beat a game McKendree College eleven, 19-0, in a Little Nineteen Conference football game played here today.

Blazevich scored the first Irish touchdown on an end-around play early in the first quarter after he had caught Gleason's long pass to put the ball deep in McKendree territory. Flack counted the second marker on a line plunge after a bad McKendree kick had given the Saints the ball on the Methodists' 21-yard stripe. Sacco added the third touchdown after catching Blazevich's lateral and Cusack place-kicked the extra point.

Pass interceptions and penalties nullified a brilliant McKendree aerial offensive.

YALE AND DARTMOUTH PLAY TO 9 TO 9 TIE

hind his own goal line for a safety by Johnny Miller, Yale end.

This slender margin, gained early in the second period and preserved until the final quarter, was wiped out when MacLeod intercepted one of Frank's long passes on Dartmouth's 10-yard mark, near the side lines, and raced 90 yards to a touchdown. Harrington Gates, Dartmouth quarterback, missed his placement try for the extra point.

Another pass interception, on which Hutchinson raced 54 yards to Yale's 22-yard line, set up Dartmouth's second big scoring chance. In a half dozen plays MacLeod and Hutchinson drove off tackle to within a foot of the Blue goal. Hutchinson bolted across center on the second of two line plunges for what looked like the payoff touchdown, only to have an offside violation detected. Dartmouth was set back five yards, then 10 more on two penalties for delaying the game.

Dostal Kicks Field Goal.

Dostal's 40-yard field goal, booted from the Eli 30-yard stripe on fourth down, was salvaged from the situation. It still looked as though Dartmouth had complete control, with scarcely two minutes to play as Yale took the next kickoff on its own 35.

Frank's passes had produced such boomerangs that there was nothing more than a forlorn hope for the blue at this point. Rushed and harassed on nearly every attempt to pass, the Eli captain let most of his tosses go without a chance to take good aim. There was only a half minute to play when he completed a low throw to Hessberg, who made a great catch on Dartmouth's 35. Two more pitches went wild, then Hessberg raced wide to grab the next throw and fight his way to a touchdown.

TEXAS TECH DEFEATS OKLAHOMA AGGIES

By the Associated Press.

STILLWATER, Ok., Oct. 30.—Texas Tech's Red Raiders caught the Oklahoma Aggies by surprise, whipped across a couple of touchdowns and then staved off a last period aerial attack to take home a 14-to-6 football victory here today.

Charles Calhoun, 175-pound sophomore halfback, scored both touchdowns for the Texans, but it was Bob Holmes, a junior from Miami, Ok. who stood out offensively for the victors with his fine exhibitions of ball-toting.

RICE HANDS AUBURN FIRST 1937 LOSS, 13-7

HOUSTON, Tex., Oct. 30.—Big Ernie Lain, a pass-slinging sophomore, tossed two touchdown heaves today to give Rice Institute a 13-7 triumph over previously undefeated Auburn. The victory was the second of the season for the Rice team.

PITT DRIVES TO 25-14 TRIUMPH OVER CARNEGIE

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 30. — The Panthers of Pitt, minus two of their big stars, rumbled their way to a 25 to 14 triumph today in their twenty-fourth annual "back yard" tussle with Carnegie Tech.

Carnegie, however, had its share of glory, crossing the hitherto unpassed Pitt goal line twice, while holding the Rose Bowl champions to three touchdowns. A crowd of 37,500 attended.

Al Lezouski, Pitt's big left guard, blocked a kick in the first period and Fabian Hoffman recovered on Carnegie's 3-yard stripe to set up the first touchdown. Frank Patrick crashed over left tackle for the score. His placement was wide.

But Harold Stebbins fumbled on his own 20 late in the period and on the first play of the second chapter Pete Moroz and Bob Howarth, Carnegie substitutes, executed a looping pass into the end zone for a touchdown. Coleman Kopcsak booted the point.

With a minute and a half to play Pitt started from its own 26 and quickly reached the Tartans' 15. There Frank Souchak dropped back to the 25 and place kicked a field goal.

Pitt was never headed. Patrick, Cassiano and Stebbins switched on the power for a 96-yard march at the start of the third period, with Patrick scoring from less than a yard. A safety gave the Panthers two more points in this period.

Finally, in a whirlwind last chapter, Pitt took a commanding advantage with Johnny Urban throwing a 27-yard pass to Ed Spotovich in the end zone. Souchak place-kicked points after each of Pitt's last two touchdowns.

In the last two minutes Tech took the aerial route to their second touchdown, Rosenthal scoring with Merlyn Condit place-kicking the extra point.

FAVORITE OUT OF MONEY; LOST FRIEND WINS AT ROCKINGHAM

By the Associated Press.

SALEM, N. H., Oct. 20.—A. C. Bostwick's Lost Friend today won the mile and a sixteenth Continental Handicap at Rockingham Park as Hope Eternal, a 4-5 favorite, ran out of the money.

Turning in a beautiful race before 12,000 spectators, Lost Friend moved into the lead on reaching the stretch and stayed out front.

A neck behind was Joe M. Brooks' Boston Mary, early pacesetter. Mrs. Paul A. Shaw's Holluschickie, which held the show position, outstepped Hope Eternal by two lengths.

Lost Friend returned $10, $4.50 and $3.60 in the mutuels. Boston Mary $7.40 and $4.50 ano Holluschickie, $4.50.

1938 DERBY TO BE RUN MAY 7

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 30.—The 1938 Kentucky Derby date was fixed today for Saturday, May 7, by Col. Matt J. Winn, president of Churchill Downs.

The date for the $50,000 added race is subject to confirmation by the Kentucky State Racing Commission which usually approves the day chosen by Winn.

WAR ADMIRAL WINS 7TH STRAIGHT RACE; SEABISCUIT SCRATCHED

horses among his six rivals threatened.

The son of Man O' War lugged 126 pounds, gave seven pounds in weight to Heelfly and eight to Burning Star and beat them handily. All doubt as to his complete recovery from the cracked hoof he suffered in winning the Belmont, last of his triple victory last June, was dispelled as he bounced down the stretch in easy stride without special urging from Jockey Kurtsinger.

Heelfly broke first but Kurtsinger had War Admiral on top before they covered a hundred yards. On the first turn he seemed to lose his stride for a moment but quickly picked up and held his length advantage.

For the first three quarters of a mile it was Shandon Farms' Burning Star which trailed just behind War Admiral. But he couldn't stand the pace and Heelfly, coming up strong, improved his position and was the only one within reach of the winner.

The Admiral met the challenge easily. Without seeming to press, he just kept striding along and Heelfly couldn't make up the ground.

Burning Star finished two and a half lengths behind Heelfly, with W. M. Jefford's Firethorn another length back. Aneroid, Chanceview, and Calumet Dick brought up the rear in that order.

The winner paid his backers $3.30, $2.60 and $2.40. Heelfly returned $3.70 to place and $3.10 to show. A show ticket on Burning Star was worth $3.20.

Heelfly won $2000, with $1000 going to Burning Star and $750 to Firethorn.

More than 22,000 fans crowded the stands under a warm sun. The track was good. The withdrawal of Seabiscuit, along with Callephen and Eagle Pass, reduced the field to seven.

Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Alexandria won a photo finish from Ral Parr's Legal Light, a field horse, in the one-mile Spalding Lowe Jenkins' Handicap for two-year-olds paying $89.50. Alvin Untermyer's Chaps was third, with the Valdina Farm's Teddy's Comet, the favorite, fourth.

PENN UPSETS NAVY, 14 TO 7; MIDDIES LACK SCORING PUNCH

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—Pennsylvania's twice-beaten football team found its strength today to emerge triumphant over Navy by a 14-to-7 score in a hard-fought game before a crowd of 63,000.

The Quakers, underdogs before the game, three times turned back Navy scoring threats in the first quarter and then struck with startling suddenness to build up a two-touchdown lead that Navy was unable to overcome. The Midshipmen scored their lone touchdown in the third quarter.

Navy rolled up 18 first downs to five for Penn and 165 yards from scrimmage to 54 for the Quakers.

The Quakers showed their real power in the first touchdown drive—a march of 80 yards. Two passes, one from Koepsell to Dresher good for 36 yards, and effective line plays took them to the four-yard line, where Walt Daly, sophomore fullback, plunged over for the score.

Gustafson, Penn end, blocked Ingram's attempted kick a few moments later and Mischo, his running mate, picked up the ball and lugged it 43 yards for the second Penn touchdown. Shinn placekicked both extra points.

Dresher's fumble midway through the third quarter paved the way for Navy's touchdown. The Penn back attempted to kick and fumbled, Dougherty recovering for Penn on the two, where Dresher kicked out to his 47, Cooke returning the ball 18 yards.

Cooke and Wood then put on a display of sheer power, ripping through Penn's line or around its ends until Wood finally carted the ball over from the one-yard line.

for the better part of the game, while crushing Vic Bottari, Sam Chapman, Dave Anderson and John Meek lugged the ball up and down the field.

Bottari scored two of the Bear touchdowns, Anderson another and a brilliant reserve back, Wilbur Ingram, added the fourth when Bottari went ou the game injured.

The Uclans covered themselves with glory, even in defeat, and a tremendous cheer went to lanky Kenny Washington, Negro halfback, who engineered both Bruin scores and accounted for one himself.

By Reno Hahn.

Cleveland was toppled from its co-leadership of the City High School League football race when it was upset by Roosevelt, 12 to 7 in the second game of yesterday's doubleheader at the Public Schools Stadium. Beaumont won the opener before a 5000 crowd by defeating Soldan, 14 to 12.

Cleveland's loss was its first of the season after five victories and left McKinley, which drew a bye in sole possession of first place in the league campaign.

You have heard of the elusive bob white from hunters who have walked the fields searching for them, but their complaint is nothing compared to that of Cleveland players who spent an afternoon with Roosevelt's Bob White in full sight but he ran through them for one touchdown and plunged over them for another to give the Rough Riders their victory.

White Scores Early.

The game was only two minutes old when White intercepted a pass by Ray Mills and ran 62 yards for a touchdown. Cleveland had been advancing steadily through ground plays up to that time and it was the first pass attempt.

Cleveland stuck to the ground fairly consistently after that and in the second quarter it smashed through Roosevelt for a touchdown. Gualdoni ended the 42-yard advance with a six-yard plunge through his right tackle. Dickson added the extra point on a line plunge.

Roosevelt surprised everyone with its playing in the second half. Outweighed many pounds per player, it nevertheless was able to stop the running attack of Cleveland, and was able to make its own work. But the Rough Riders used passes for their principal gains. It was a pass that put it in position for the final and winning touchdown.

Frank Brown tossed an 18-yard pass to Kunnecke and on the play Cleveland was penalized 15 yards for roughness. With White carrying the ball on nearly every play, the Rough Riders rode through Cleveland's team to the 15-yard line. White then slipped into the open for an 11-yard pass from Brown to put the ball on the four-yard line.

White was stopped on his first try at the line, but carried it to the one-foot line on the next. As Cleveland braced itself to stop White as he drove into the line, he leaped over the line and fell in scoring territory for the winning points.

The disappointment of the game was Cleveland's heavy line that was unable to hold White and the other hard-running Roosevelt backs. One reason was that Cleveland was using a five-man line in an effort to break up the Rough Riders' passing attack. But when the five-man line was used, Roosevelt would use running plays, and when six men were on the line, Roosevelt would pass and usually gained by both methods.

Beaumont Comes Back.

In the first game, Beaumont put on a comeback in the second half to overcome Soldan's two-touchdown lead.

Lombardo scored both touchdowns for Soldan and both were made on the same play, a reverse off tackle with Dick Smith handing the ball to Lombardo. Both scores came after line plays carried the ball into scoring position. Both extra points were missed.

Beaumont came to life in the second half. Kuelker punted out of bounds on Soldan's four-yard line. After Swistowiscz had kicked to his 48-yard line, Beaumont needed only

PENN UPSETS NAVY, 14 TO 7; MIDDIES LACK SCORING PUNCH

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—Pennsylvania's twice-beaten football team found its strength today to emerge triumphant over Navy by a 14-to-7 score in a hard-fought game before a crowd of 63,000.

The Quakers, underdogs before the game, three times turned back Navy scoring threats in the first quarter and then struck with startling suddenness to build up a two-touchdown lead that Navy was unable to overcome. The Midshipmen scored their lone touchdown in the third quarter.

Navy rolled up 18 first downs to five for Penn and 165 yards from scrimmage to 54 for the Quakers.

The Quakers showed their real power in the first touchdown drive—a march of 80 yards. Two passes, one from Koepsell to Dresher good for 36 yards, and effective line plays took them to the four-yard line, where Walt Daly, sophomore fullback, plunged over for the score.

Gustafson, Penn end, blocked Ingram's attempted kick a few moments later and Mischo, his running mate, picked up the ball and lugged it 43 yards for the second Penn touchdown. Shinn place-kicked both extra points.

Dresher's fumble midway through the third quarter paved the way for Navy's touchdown. The Penn back attempted to kick and fumbled, Dougherty recovering for Penn on the two, where Dresher kicked out to his 47, Cooke returning the ball 18 yards.

Cooke and Wood then put on a display of sheer power, ripping through Penn's line or around its ends until Wood finally carted the ball over from the one-yard line.

The Uclans covered themselves with glory, even in defeat, and a tremendous cheer went to lanky Kenny Washington, Negro halfback, who engineered both Bruin scores and accounted for one himself.

A pass also scored the final touchdown, Roehlk passing to Butcher in the end zone, 16 yards away. Roehlk then added the extra point on a place kick.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 30.

CARNEGIE Institute of Technology, broadening its previously announced policy of encouraging scholarships for athletes, invited alumni today to aid Tech's football players.

President Robert E. Doherty, on the eve of the annual game with Pitt, said that the strength of Tech teams would be "determined by the extent to which alumni—not business concerns—contribute."

Asserting that the college had no desire to "police amateurism" he said that Tech wanted a football team "as good as we can have within the limits of our pocketbook."

JUNIOR BILLS WIN, 12-7, FROM M'KINLEY HIGH

The St. Louis U. High eleven defeated McKinley High, 12-7, last night at Walsh Stadium. It was the Junior Billikens' fourth straight triumph, having dropped two early season games.

Bob Roemerman was responsible for both St. Louis U. High touchdowns. He took Saey's 25-yard pass and ran the remaining 8 yards for the first score in the opening quarter. The Goldbugs, however, came back immediately thereafter to score. Lange, Goldbugs' left halfback, went around right end 15 yards to make the touchdown. He also place-kicked for the extra point.

In the fourth quarter, three passes, Saey to Roemerman, advanced the ball to McKinley's 6-yard line when Kekeris regained possession of the ball after a Junior Billiken fumble. McKinley worked the ball to its own 30-yard mark. A Goldbug pass was then intercepted by Cummings. After several line plays Roemerman went over the goal line from the 11-yard line for the winning touchdown.

Chicago Panthers to Meet Gunners Here This Afternoon

Dick Frahm's St. Louis Gunners of the Midwest Pro Football League and the Chicago Panthers, an independent team, will meet this afternoon at Walsh Stadium.

The Chicagoans have lost but one game in five starts, that to the Chicago Bears of the National League, 21 to 6. The Panthers held the Cincinnati entry in the Midwest League to a scoreless tie.

The visitors' chief scoring threat is Paul Ben Franklin, former Chicago Bear end, who has scored six touchdowns in five games. St. Louis fans got a glimpse of Franklin several years ago when the Bears played the Gunners at Public Schools Stadium.

Other players with the Panthers are Chester Sutton, former Northwestern U. star; Willie Karr, leading scorer for Indiana U. in Big Ten Conference in 1936; Jim Angelich, Alabama U.'s Rose Bowl quarterback in 1936, and Ben Wattenberg, a triple threat back from Chicago U.

Frank Padgen, Panther center, is the same gridder who formerly played with St. Louis U. He held down both a tackle and center berth for the Billikens.

Opposing Padgen will be three of his old teammates, Ends Tom Mitchell and Dick Fitzgerald, and Tackle Don Philpot.

Frahm has juggled his lineup and believes he has finally hit upon a winning combination. Al Londe will play quarterback. Frahm has been calling the signals but has decided to move over to halfback.

In the starting lineup will be Halfbacks Booker and Luke Riley, Fullback Heine Groth and Lond. As play progresses such ball-luggers as Cy Casper, Joe Spudich and Frahm will be called upon.

Game time is 2:30 o'clock.

Mack Gladden, end, who played with Gunner teams in other seasons, joined the squad late yesterday and will see action today.

On the St. Louis bench this afternoon will be Swede Johnston, Gunner backfield star of a few seasons ago, who is now a member of the Green Bay Packers of the National League. Johnston is on the suspended list because of injuries, but expects to rejoin the Packers next week.

Kemper Military Academy Beats Principia, 26-0

The Kemper Military Yellow Jackets from Boonville, Mo., defeated the Principia College eleven, 26 to 0, on the Principia field at Elsah, Ill., yesterday afternoon. Coach Bert Clark's team held the visitors to a lone touchdown until the final quarter, when the Kemper machine piled up three more touchdowns to gain the decisive victory.

The feature of yesterday's contest was the brilliant playing of Fred Brinkop Jr., a St. Louis boy who plays right halfback for Kemper. He scored two of the winning team's touchdowns, kicked one goal in addition to carrying the ball for long gains.

Early in the second quarter, Herbert Ewing, Kemper halfback, broke through and raced 57 yards before Jack Gordon, Principia halfback, stopped him with a diving tackle. Following this run, Fred Brinkop, halfback, caught a pass from Dale Buchanan, quarterback, and ran to the Principia one-yard line. Byron Potter went through for the first touchdown and again hit the line for the extra point.

Principia opened an offensive attack in the remainder of the second quarter and through passes and line plays carried the ball to the Kemper six-yard line. A fumble, however, prevented a possible score.

The Yellow Jackets scored their second touchdown early in the fourth quarter when Potter caught a pass from Brinkop and ran 17 yards. A fumble deprived Kemper of the extra point. Later Brinkop intercepted a Principia pass and ran 42 yards for another touchdown. His place kick for the extra point was good. Kemper scored again when Jones caught a pass from Potter, who stepped over the line. Brinkop's place kick was wide.

Dayton Ends Western Reserve's Winning Streak at 28 Games

DAYTON O., Oct. 30.—A blond, 161-pound sophomore halfback from Philadelphia, speedy Jack Padley, pushed Western Reserve off the peak of football fame here today as Dayton University beat the Red Cats, 18 to 6, to end the Cleveland club's unbeaten streak at 28.

The victory ran Dayton's string of victories to eight, six of them being scored this year

A crowd of 12,000, the largest ever to witness a game in Dayton, sat spellbound as the Flyers tossed caution to the winds and opened a first-period barrage which netted two touchdowns both by Padley.

Reserve, despite its long winning streak which included victories over such teams as Cornell and West Virginia, had no excuses today. The Dayton club, geared to a high pitch, overpowered the Red Cats in every department of play.

Coach William (Bill) Edwards of Reserve, disappointed at losing his first college game, said:

"Well, I'm glad it's over. The strain on my boys had been terrific trying to keep up that winning streak. It's impossible to keep a bunch of the boys at the peak game after game. That's not an alibi, for Dayton has a great ball club, and in Padley and Marre has two of the finest backs I've ever seen. Now we'll try to take a fall out of Syracuse next Saturday, and start another winning streak."

FORDHAM BEATS NORTH CAROLINA ELEVEN, 14 TO 0

By the Associated Press.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Oct. 30.—Fordham showed its power and razzle-dazzle today to turn back a hard-fighting University of North Carolina eleven, 14 to 0, and continue its undefeated season.

The Rams turned on the heat for an 88-yard scoring march in the first quarter, and a 56-yard advance in the third.

The old "Statue of Liberty" play gave the invaders their first touchdown, Steve Kazlo taking the ball out of Joe Granski's hand as Granski faked a pass, and sweeping 26 yards around right end to score.

Captain John Druze converted from placement for the extra point and also made his kick good after the second touchdown.

Butch Fortunato, a relief Fordham back, drove one yard through center for the second tally after Mike Kochel, Ram guard, partly blocked a punt by Tom Burnette at mid-field to set the stage. A pass failed, then one, Granski to Druze to Alex Wojciechowicz, got six. Granski plowed the line but fumbled.

The Rams, who grabbed fumbles all afternoon, got a first down on North Carolina's 5 when Fortunato covered the pigskin there. Principe gained 4 yards in two tries, and then Fortunato scored.

Arkansas Beats Texas A. and M.

By the Associated Press.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Oct. 30.—The University of Arkansas Razorbacks recovered all of their passing magic today to decisively defeat Texas A. and M. College, 26 to 13, before 8000 homecoming day fans.

The Aggies, boasting a hard-running attack and a variation of the already famous trick played used a week ago by Vanderbilt to defeat Louisiana State, gave the Porkers plenty of trouble in the first half. But when the Razorbacks got their overhead attack working, the Cadets were never again in the running.

Arkansas drew first blood in the wide open Southwest Conference battle. The Aggies quickly tied up the count and went ahead by one point at the half. Arkansas floated its two winning touchdowns through the unseasonably hot afternoon air in the third period and spent the final quarter freezing the ball.

WEBSTER HIGH SCORES ON PASSES TO DEFEAT GRANITE CITY, 12-0

Webster Groves High School's football team turned in its first 1937 victory yesterday at the expense of the Granite City Wildcats at the Webster field. The score was 12 to 0.

The Statesmen started their first touchdown drive from their own 30-yard line, Pacy's 12-yard toss to Higgins climaxing the push. Two passes after a recovered fumble on the Granite City 42-yard line led to the second touchdown.

The Eastern Missouri P. G. A. organization selected two delegates, Johnny Manion of Sunset Hill Golf Club and Eddie Duwe of Forest Park, as its representatives to the National Professional Golfers' Association convention, scheduled to take place in Chicago, starting Nov. 9.

Waterfowl Season Opens.

MISSOURI nimrods planned to retire early this evening in order to get a good night's rest before the season on waterfowl opens tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock for a 30-day period. Although heavy flights of ducks have not been reported, it is expected that flocks will be larger than in former years.

Harry Barmeir, United States game inspector for Missouri, who makes his headquarters in St. Louis, warns all hunters that authorities will strictly enforce the regulations on wildfowl shooting. There must be absolutely no shooting over baited areas whether the baiting was done before or after the opening day; neither must live decoys be used. Guns with a capacity of three shells or less of no larger than 10-gauge may be used. Weapons must be fired from the shoulder. Hunting from sailboats or motor launches is prohibited. There is no open season on canvasbacks, redhead, woody, ruddy, bufflehead ducks and Ross' geese and swans. The daily bag limit on ducks remains at 10. For geese and brant the limit has been raised to 5 and, for coot, to 25. Shooting must be done between the hours of 7 a. m. and 4 p. m. Only one day's limit may be in the possession of a hunter.

Duck hunters must purchase a Federal migratory wildfowl stamp which may be obtained at any postoffice for $1; this is in addition to the State hunting license which costs residents $2.50 and non-residents $10.

Missouri hunters again have the privilege of shooting from islands in the Mississippi so long as the island or sandbar is not connected with the mainland of Illinois. The season for Missouri extends through Nov. 1; Illinois and Kentucky have seasons coinciding, while Arkansas and Tennessee will not have legal shooting until Nov. 27.

Beagle Futurity This Week.

When fanciers of beagles get together next week-end at the Von Hoffman resort near Bourbon, Mo., for the annual contests for the short legged hounds, some of the best rabbit dogs in the country will be exhibited. Among them will be five from the kennels of John Chrisman, Affton, Mo.

In the special class, which is only for honors of "best in show" will be Ch. Incinvible, Ch. Sherry and Ch. Eberles Elaine. Ch. Sherry completed her championship last year at the Morris-Essex show, Madison, N. J., which is considered the largest of its kind in the United States and second only to the English exhibitions. It is sponsored by Mrs. Hartley Dodge at a reputed cost of $60,000. At this contest Ch. Sherry was adjudged best of all beagles.

In the open classes, two other Chrisman entries, Smokey Joe and Bugle Ann, will be shown. At present these beagles are on a tour of the Southern circuit, including Dallas, Fort Worth and Clarksdale, Miss.

In the field trials, which will be held in conjunction with the bench show, Ch. Kingfish will compete against other high-class black and tans. This dog has won many prizes for his owner since he was obtained in 1934 at the age of four years. He, as well as the other Chrisman entries will be handled by John Banks, professional handler from Australia.

Sturgeon Trials Open Thursday.

The Missouri field trials will be held at Sturgeon beginning Thursday. The meet, which is under the direction of Dr. E. B. Riley, secretary of the association, will show some of the finest bred pointers and setters in the Middle West. Two out-of-state entries, Shortstop, male pointer champion of last years' "open derby" event, from Kansas and an Oklahoma setter, Tim Nugem, which won the 1936 "all-age" stake, will be defending their honors.

Victors in each event of each trial held this season will meet on the game preserve near Sturgeon in December to determine the "winner's stake" which will settle a lot of questions as to which dog is best.

DETROIT BEATEN FIRST TIME BY VILLANOVA, 7-0

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Oct. 30.—Unbeaten but tied Villanova knocked University of Detroit from the ranks of the nation's undefeated football teams with a 7-to-0 victory here today before 25,000.

A blocked Detroit kick placed Villanova in position to score in the first period and Ray Stoviak passed to Arthur Raimo for the touchdown.

CASCABELITO WITHIN SECOND OF A WORLD MARK AT BAY MEADOWS

By the Associated Press.

SAN MATEO, Cal., Oct. 30.—Cascabelito, the Argentine thoroughbred owned by A. E. Silver, Windsor, Conn., won the $5000 added Marin Handicap at Bay Meadows today, defeating Sallys Booter by a length.

Cascabelito traveled the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:43, a second over the world record for the distance established here in 1934 by Top Row. The race was on a dead track.

Cascabelito paid $9.60, $5.20 and $4.20, Sallys Booter $5.80 and $4.40 and King Saxon $5.20.

DEER SEASON ENDS; 32 TAGS ARE RETURNED

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 30.—The 1937 quest for four-point buck deer ended at dusk tonight with Missouri huntsmen apparently far more successful than last year.

Thirty-two of the fleet-footed animals were reported killed in the three-day season to the State Conservation Commission here late today, just twice the kills recorded at the same time in 1936.

Sportsmen in the State can now turn their attention to the season on duck and geese, which opens Monday and continues throughout November.

Although the deer season ended one-half hour after sunset tonight, full extent of the success of stalkers will not be known until next Tuesday.

The huntsmen have three days in which to report their kills to the commission. Last year 82 of the animals were bagged.

Dent County proved the best hunting grounds this year on the basis of reports received so far. Eight kills were made there, six in Franklin County, four each in Gasconade, Taney and Ste. Genevieve counties, two each in Shannon and Carter counties, and one each in Reynolds and Crawford counties.

The best shooting was found in the vicinity of State game refuges, commission officials pointed out.

Greenleaf and Diehl Win in Billiard Event

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—Ralph Greenleaf of New York City, defending champion, defeated George Kelly of Philadelphia, national champion, 125 to a minus 6 in 11 innings in the second match today of the world pocket billiards championship tournament.

In the first match Joe Diehl of Rockford, Ill., won over Charles Seaback of Boston, 125 to 46, in 16 innings.

Irving Crane, young Livonia, N. Y., star, won his second match in the tournament tonight by defeating Jimmy Caras, of Wilmington, Del., former titleholder, 125 to 27, in ten innings.

Onofrio Lauri, of Brooklyn, upset Willie Mosconi, of Philadelphia, 125 to 120, in 40 innings tonight.

ST. PATRICKS OPPOSE SOUTH SIDE IN OPENING SOCCER GAME

STATUS OF 4 STAR PLAYERS NOT SETTLED BY U. S. F. A.

Gonsalves, McNab, Watson and Egan "Jumped" Shamrocks — St. Matthews to Face Burkes.

Although their dispute with officials of the Shamrock Club over the services of four players has not yet been definitely settled, four clubs of the St. Louis Soccer League will open their schedule at West Side Park this afternoon with a doubleheader. The St. Patrick club, managed by Andy Fredrick, signed Alec McNab, Bill Watson, Billy Gonsalves and Ray Egan of the Shamrocks two weeks ago, but Fredrick has been warned by the United States Football Association not to use the players until their status has been definitely established. With so many of their regulars thus temporarily out of action, the Shamrocks canceled last Sunday's scheduled game with a Cleveland club and have not booked a game for this afternoon. The dispute over players is now before the National Commission of the U. S. F. A.

In the event of a favorable ruling before game time, Fredrick plans to use the four Shamrock players, but even if he is not awarded their services, he will put a strong team in the field against the South Side club, managed by Oscar Mossmann. This will be the first game of the doubleheader, starting at 2 p. m. In the second match, the Burkes, largely the same team that performed so well last season for Manager Emil Cueto, will oppose John Marre's St. Matthews.

Two former professional league stars, Sam Dueker and "Dutch" Gockel, will referee the games. The admission charge at gate for all league games will be 40 cents. Advance tickets are sold for 25 cents.

Isidro Gastanaga, heavyweight boxer, hero of the local Spanish colony which supports the Burke club, will kick off for the start.

Two of the league clubs are new in both management and personnel. Oscar Mossmann, former referee, has recruited his team from South St. Louis. He expects to have Joe Dumas in goal. Mossmann had hoped to land a couple of the better members of the Shamrock club if the latter were declared free agents. He was prepared to offer jobs to one or two of the outstanding stars but Manager Fredrick of the St. Patricks beat him to the punch. The other new club is the St. Patricks. Only John Marre and Emil Cueto remain of last season's staff of club managers, Phil Kavanaugh and Eddie Hart having dropped out.

Play will start at 2 p. m. West Side Park is a block north of the intersection of Delmar and Skinker boulevards.

St. Philip Neri League schedule for this afternoon: Holy Name vs. Sunrise, McNamara vs. Dohle Club. The latter clubs are tied for the league lead with four points. Games are played at Penrose Park on North Kingshighway.

Walnut Park Soccer League schedule: Northwestern vs. Outlaws, Airdales vs. Lions. Games are played at Riverview and Stratford avenue, starting at 2 p. m.

University City Municipal League games today: Weber Wagner Club vs. German Sport Club, Zeltman vs. Schmidts. Games are played at Heman Park on Olive Street road, start 2 p. m.

BURROUGHS BEATS PRINCIPIA A, 12 TO 0

Burroughs eleven won its fourth game in as many starts when it defeated Principia "A" football team yesterday afternoon at Taylor Field, 12 to 0.

At the beginning of the second quarter Burroughs took a Principia punt on Burroughs' 45-yard line. A pass from Burnett Peden to Dick Sisler and a series of line bucks placed the ball on the Principia 20-yard line. A lateral pass from Sisler to Dick Hume moved the ball up to the Principia five-yard line. Two line plays put the ball on the foot line and a delayed end run by Hume brought the score. The place kick for extra point was blocked.

Burroughs scored its second tally in the fourth quarter when it recovered a Principia fumble on the Principia 20-yard line. An end run by Hume and two line bucks by Sisler placed the ball on the one-yard line from where Roy Sante plunged over.

The lineup:

PRINCIPIA	Pos.	BURROUGHS
Kilgore	R. E.	Smith

95 Tennis Tournaments Here In 1937 Set a New Record

Season Marked by Greater Number of Contestants and Higher Standard of Play; Frank Keaney Won Eight Doubles Titles With Four Different Partners.

By Davison Obear

Tennis players residing within the territory of the St. Louis District Tennis' Association participated in a total of 95 tournaments during the 1937 season. The number of events establishes a new record, surpassing that of 1932, when 86 tournaments were played.

Of the grand total there were 54 major tournaments and 37 individual club tournaments. There were four interclub championships held during the season. The 1937 total shows a gain of 37 per cent over last year, when only 69 events were played.

The reason for the increase in tournament activity over last season is two-fold. In the first place interest in the game has grown and secondly, there were only four days during the season when rain or wet courts prevented play.

Monroe C. Lewis, president of the District tennis organization, made the following comment on the 1937 season: "It was one of the best we have had in many years. The entry lists in the various events were not only larger but the general caliber of play showed marked improvement. The junior players were particularly outstanding in tournament competition."

No national championships were played here during the season but there were two important sectional events. One of these was the Missouri Valley College Conference, while the other was the Triple A. Club Open championship.

Gerin Cameron of Tulsa U. won the valley conference singles title while the St. Louis University team of Frank Keaney and Larry Mullen captured the doubles. Arthur Hendrix of Lakeland, Fla., and Joe Hunt, Los Angeles, two players ranked in the national first 10 list, captured the Triple A open titles. Hendrix won the singles and paired with Hunt to capture the doubles.

Among the local players the record made by Frank Keaney during the 1937 season is outstanding. He won three men's singles events and was the runner-up in two others. Keaney also won eight doubles titles with four different partners. Keaney paired with Ward Parker to capture four of the eight events, establishing a new team record for any one season.

Merceina Weiss tops the field in the women's division. She won both the District and St. Louis Municipal singles titles. Lois Keene, Frances Jacobson and Mrs. Bert Thompson also shared in the season's honors by winning important singles events. Miss Weiss and Mrs. Jean Dalstrom head the list in the women's doubles, winning both the St. Louis Municipal and the St. Louis County titles.

Jane Dierberger won three tournaments to lead in the girls' division, while Ethan Shepley Jr. and Bill Schock each won two titles in the boys' class. The honors in the junior division were pretty well divided with Bud Blattner, Henry Teiber, and George Hendry winning the most important tournaments.

NEIGHBORHOOD RING CARD COMPLETED

The four feature bouts of the Neighborhood Association boxing show to be held Tuesday night, were completed with the signing of Al Dorlac of the Tower A. C. to meet Meyer Katzman of Neighborhood Association.

Dorlac, an experienced amateur, has been training under the direction of Barney McCarthy for several years and has an excellent record. However, he will find real competition against Katzman who reached the semifinals of the National Junior A. A. U., tournament last year.

The show will be held at Polish American hall.

The four feature bouts will bring together Joe Surrisi, Neighborhood Association vs. Joe DiMartina, Italian-American A. C., 126 pounds; Tony Moretta, South Broadway A. C. vs. Al Hoffman, Italian-American A. C., 135 pounds; Al Dorlac, Tower A. C. vs. Meyer Katzman, Neighborhood Association, 135 pounds; Al Balkenbush, Neighborhood Association vs. Lou Wallace, Italian-American A. C., 175 pounds.

Four other bouts will be on the card and will be chosen from over 20 entries from the following clubs: South Broadway A. C., Neighborhood Association, Tower A. C., Italian-American A. C., Boys' Cluband West End Gym.

COLLINSVILLE TO GIVE ART FLETCHER BANQUET

Art Fletcher, coach of the world champion New York Yankees, will be tendered a banquet in his home town at Collinsville Thursday night at 6:30 o'clock.

Robert Finch, assistant to Branch Rickey of the Cardinals, will be the principal speaker of the evening.

MUNY BASKETBALL MANAGERS TO MEET

Plans have been begun at the City Recreation Department for the annual season in the men's and girls' divisions of the Municipal Basketball Association. Superintendent Robert D. Turner has announced two preliminary meetings; the first, for men's team managers, will be held on Thursday night; the other, for girls' team managers, is scheduled for Monday night, Nov. 8. Both meetings, to start at 8 o'clock, will be at the Sherman Park Community Center, Kingshighway boulevard and Easton avenue.

It is contemplated to open both seasons in the first week in December. In previous years the girls' schedule did not begin until the first week in January.

The season will be the twenty-fourth for the men's league; the twenty-third for the girls. Last year's champions were the Food Center Stores' men and the Irish Village girls.

Amateur Boxing Shows to Return To the Armory

After an absence of 10 years, amateur boxing will return to the 138th Infantry Armory in the immediate future, according to Coach Arthur "Babe" Davis, boxing instructor of the military organization. Shows will be held at the Armory, located at the corner of Market and Grand, featuring not only fighters from regular army posts and reserve units, but from amateur boxing clubs.

Besides Coach Davis, an advisory committee headed by Col. Lawrence C. Kingsland and Captain Tom C. Thompson will supervise the shows. All contests will be held under the auspices of the Ozark A. A. U., and full co-operation of that body has been assured the infantry by Charles J. Gevecker, chairman of boxing, and Marvin Plake, registration chairman.

Coach Davis began his amateur career in 1929 and stepped into his first championship in the heavyweight division of the Mississippi Valley A. A. in 1931. The following year he gained similar laurels in the Western A. A. U. and went on to the Olympic try-outs in New York.

After the '32 matches, Babe gave up the amateur ranks and fought professonally under the management of George Wilsman. During his life as a pro, Babe fought such ring notables as Max and Buddy Baer, Johnny Miles, John Henry Lewis and Pete Rocorri. Unlike many who step through the ropes to the money ranks, Babe retired with no injuries and sufficient money to take over a dry-cleaning plant which he now operates.

Corkball Games Today.

Three games are scheduled this morning in the United States championship tournament of the National Corkball Association at North Side Park, Grand and Florissant avenues. The Werners play the Five Points in the first game, starting at 9:30 o'clock, and the 905s, defending champions, play the first of their two games with the Pheasants at 11 o'clock, and then meet the Pevelys in the feature at 1:30 p. m.

LENNEMANN'S FOOD CENTERS, IN TITLE GAME

Undefeated scoring leaders, the Food Centers and the Lennemanns oppose each other in the opening game of this afternoon's weekly Municipal Football Association double-header. The contest will determine the champion of the first half of the season.

This game, scheduled to begin at 1 o'clock at the Drill Grounds in Forest Park, will be followed by a contest between the Sentinel De Molay Chapter and the Stockham American Legion Post No. 245, two teams which have failed to gain a victory this year.

Since both the Lennemanns and the Foods have excellent lines and flashy, fast-stepping backs, the title struggle is expected to develop into an open game, featuring lateral and forward passes.

The Lennemanns' 33-point scoring total has been rather equally divided by Halfback Carl Wood, former St. Louis University star; and three former high school stars, Carl Gordon, Cleveland fullback; Joe Szuch, halfback, and Quarterback Ed Dickinson, both of Roosevelt High. Wood also is a Roosevelt "grad." The Lennemann goal line is uncrossed.

Les Herman will start almost an entirely new Lennemann forward wall, however, in Bob Alexander, Ed Kunz, Marvin Knaus, Vic Wildfong (if his twisted knee permits), Jack Weber, Neal Grant and Joe Gerescher.

wo of the Food's leugue leading scorers will open in the backfield, Bob Grenia who ripped off several long runs against the Webers including the winning spriht of 64 yards; and Larry Schottel, fullback, who is leading all Muny scorers. Teamed with these are Quarterback Francis Bittner of St. Louis U. and Charley Burgess of Missouri U.

Next Sunday night the Muny teams will play a benefit double-header at Walsh Memorial Stadium to pay expenses of injured players.

The probable starting lineups:

CLASSIC TRAVELING LEAGUE TO BOWL AT GRAVOIS TONIGHT

The Classic Bowling League will start its second series in the Traveling League tonight at the Gravois Recreation with the Silver Seals and Hermanns, who are tied for the league lead with 13 games won, opposing the Witeks and the Allhoffs. In the other matches, the Say It With Flowers meet the Club Plantations and the Mystery Men oppose the Budweisers.

Only two games separate the first five teams in the Traveling League, the Witeks holding fifth position with a record of 11 games won and 10 lost. The Budweisers and Plantations are tied for third place with 12 and 9.

GOODMAN ADVANCES IN MEXICAN GOLF

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO, D. F., Oct. 30.—Johnny Goodman of Omaha, United States amateur champion, opened his defense of the amateur golf championship of Mexico today by routing Morris Norton of Wichita Falls, Tex., 6 and 5 in a first-round match.

With one exception, other favorites followed Goodman into the second round. Percy J. Clifford of Mexico City, five-time national champion, finalist last year and coholder with O'Hara Watts of Dallas, Tex., of the low qualifying score of 72 this year, was hard pressed, but won on the second extra hole over H. O. Young of Houston, Tex. John Dawson of Chicago eliminated C. J. Pani, Mexico City, 8 and 6.

MRS. CHANDLER WINS MEDAL IN GOLF EVENT

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 30. — Mrs. Peggy Chandler of Dallas, Tex., twice champion of Mexico, justified her position as favorite to win the women's national golf championship today by scoring an 83 from the men's tees on the rain-soaked Chapultepec course to win the qualifying medal.

Par for the layout from the women's tees is 74.

Black to Oppose Rankin.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 30.—George Black, local middleweight, has signed articles for a 10-round bout with Oscar Rankin, as a build-up for a match later on with Billy Conn of Pittsburgh. The date is Nov. 12.

Flyers at Present Are Far Below Old Scoring Strength

By Harold Flachsbart.

Unless the St. Louis Flyers soon obtain that veteran forward they have been seeking for at least two weeks, it looks as if they will take the ice in their opening game with Minneapolis at the Arena a week from Tuesday with a lineup that is noticeably weaker in scoring punch than the one they showed at the start of the 1936-37 campaign.

Four players who faced the Kansas City Greyhounds in the Flyers' opener last Nov. 12, and now missing from the ranks of Manager Johnny MacKinnon's team, scored a total of 69 goals and 92 assists, or 161 points, last season, and in place of them are only Harold Jackson, who scored 8 points with the Chicago Blackhawks in the National League last season, and Frank Daley, who came here from Cleveland after better seasons from 1934 until the end of 1936.

Slated for regular duty, according to present plans, are Don Olson and Walter Harnott, bench-warmers through most of the Flyers' 1936-37 season. The official American Association records show that Harnott and Olson each scored only one goal through all of last season, and Olson didn't play enough to even get a penalty called against him.

Four Regulars Missing.

In the Flyers' lineup last fall but now missing were Oscar Hansen, who set a league record of 62 points by scoring 33 goals and 29 assists; Pete Mitchell, who caged 20 goals and was credited with 34 assists; Frankie Ingram, who made four goals but helped with 17 others, and Pete Palangio, who had 12 goals and as many assists before going to the Blackhawks late in December.

Hansen now, too, is with Chicago, Ingram has been traded to Kansas City, and Mitchell retired from hockey because he says he has a better job selling beer in the state of Oklahoma. But even if he hadn't retired from the game, there were rumors floating around that he didn't exactly fit into the scheme of things with the management anyway.

With those four gone, the Flyers still have their four defensemen from last season—MacKinnon, Joe Matte, Leo Carbol and Louis Swenson—and a mighty good goalie in Hub Nelson, but then Nelson was only third in efficiency among the circuit's net-guardians last year.

Rookies Due to Report.

Forwards retained are Ollie Mulvihill, Bobby Burns, Cliff Purpur, Duke MacDonald and, of course, Olson and Harnott. Two rookies secured from Kansas City—Paul Lord and Tom Rothwell, who are due to report today, will probably prove to be of little help, and the same holds true of Harold Johnson, a young amateur from Gore Bay, Ont., who has been due to report for several days.

Jackson, of course, may be a big help, but he will probably alternate with the veteran four defensemen and thus can't be counted upon to score many of the 161 points the "missing four" compiled last year.

Daley, a high International League scorer two years ago, was bothered with illness last year, and whether he will come back to score the 50 points a season he was credited with at one time remains to be seen.

Daily scrimmages are scheduled at the Arena from now until the opening game, Nov. 9.

Emil Hansen, veteran player-manager of the St. Paul Saints for the past three seasons, has been traded to Wichita for Perk Galbraith, and it has been reported in St. Paul that Galbraith will manage the Saints this season. He, too, is an experienced veteran who had several fine seasons in the National League with the Boston Bruins.

Intercepted Pass And 50-Yard Run Beat Kirkwood

Bob Abernathey intercepted a pass and ran 50 yards for the only score of the game yesterday afternoon as Crystal City High defeated Kirkwood High, 6-0, at Kirkwood.

The score came after five minutes of the fourth quarter had elapsed. Kirkwood was on Crystal City's 45-yard line for a first down. Jimmy Johnson took the ball from center and started into the line. Halting midway he lateraled to Hitching, who faded back and attempted a forward to Beers. But Abernathey leaped into the air, snared the pigskin and raced over the goal line.

In the second quarter Kirkwood had the ball on the Crystal City 11-yard line and had a punt blocked as Quarterback Nixon elected to kick.

In the third quarter the Red and White was again deep in Hornet territory, having the ball on the Crystal City 10-yard line and first down. The down-staters held on the half-yard line.

Several times Crystal had the ball deep in the Kirkwood half of the field, but fumbles or intercepted passes robbed them of each chance.

The lineups:

KIRKWOOD.	Pos.	CRYSTAL CITY.
Goeggel	L. E.	Leiterman
Farrow	L. T.	Rheecht
Bux	L. G.	Yokerest
Hill	C.	Alamy
Vogelsang	R. G.	Linder

VINES AND PERRY TO BEGIN TOUR JAN. 11

By the Associated Press.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 30.—Ellsworth Vines and Fred Perry announced a tennis tour of approximately 75 matches starting in Hollywood Jan. 11.

They will go into the Northwest, swing through Montana and Utah, then head to the Southwest and South before reaching the East and Middle West.

Berkeley Bell, former Davis Cup star from Chicago, and an unnamed amateur who assertedly plans to turn professional, will accompany the pair.

UNDEFEATED BAYLOR BEATS T. C. U., 6-0

By the Associated Press.

WACO, Tex., Oct. 30. — Undefeated Baylor beat Texas Christian, 6—0, today in a hair-raising gridiron classic. Bill Patterson passed Baylor to a first period touchdown but little Davey O'Brien had his Christians on the four-yard line when the final gun sounded.

Michigan State Rallies To Beat Kansas U., 16-0

By the Associated Press.

EAST LANSING, Mich., Oct. 30.—A Michigan State College second team succeeded where the first team couldn't today and started the Spartans to a 16-to-0 victory over the University of Kansas before 8000 spectators here.

The Kansas Jayhawkers, more powerful than in the past three years when they have been whipped successively by Michigan State, held the Spartans scoreless for three periods but an inspired State second string squad turned on the heat in the last quarter.

Gene Ciolek, husky halfback from Michigan City, Ind., was the sparkplug of the rally. He started with a 37-yard sprint late in the third period but was robbed of a score when his own interference blocked him off from a clear path to the goal. After an exchange of punts, Ciolek shot a 28-yard pass to Jack Coolidge, and another to Mike Kinek of Whiting, Ind., for 11 yards.

Three line plays took the ball to the two-yard line and Ciolek carried it over himself. Les Bruckner, substitute quarterback, kicked the extra point.

Fired by the example, the first string came back and Ole Nelson, the big Chicago end who never played before he entered college, broke through and blocked Cadwalader's kick. The ball bounced over the goal from the 10-yard line and State gained a safety.

On the first play after the subsequent kick-off, Dave Diehl dashed 27 yards on an end around to Kansas' 16. There Pingel, State's triple-threat man, passed to Nelson standing unguarded in the end zone. Bruckner again converted.

Tulane Beats Ole Miss.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 30.—Tulane had a superior ground attack today and defeated the University of Mississippi, 14 to 7, in their Southeastern conference game. Buddy Banker, brother of Bill Banker, Tulane hero of several years ago, scored both Tulane touchdowns.

MUNY SOCCER LEAGUE OPENS SEASON WITH EIGHT GAMES

Considerably reduced in number of teams, the Municipal Soccer League opens its twenty-sixth season in the public parks this afternoon with a schedule of eight games. Twelve senior clubs open the five-months' quest for the championship won for the first time back in the season 1912-13 by he Aldines and held now by the Stag Club, last season's champions.

The Stags return to competition under a new banner, playing this season in group two, Fairground Park as the St. John's Smoke Shop team. Their opponents this afternoon are the Falcon A. C. Unless there are unexpected developments, Carondelet Park's group of four clubs promise to furnish the best balanced race with the Schumachers and Parks-Norge holding an edge over the younger Nebcos and Carondelet A. C. The Nebcos, advancing season by season through junior and intermediate divisions, are making their bow as a senior club under the direction of Chick Fernandez who has added the more experienced Fullback Joe Garcia and Goaltender Mil Valdez to his team of young Spaniards. This is the dark horse club of the entire league.

Four clubs make up the Intermediate Division which will play at Fairground Park.

The schedule:

SENIOR DIVISION.

At Carondelet Park—Schumacher Undertakers vs. Parks Norge; referee, B. Wall. Nebco Soda vs. Carondelet A. C.; referee, D. Barnard.

At Sherman Park—St. Edwards vs. St. Marks; referee, P. Garcia. Beltmar Drug vs. North End Sport Club; referee, J. Wiesler.

At Fairground Park, Grounds 2—St. John's Smoke Shop vs. Falcon A. C.; referee, W. Giesler. Moloney Electric vs. 18th Ward Democratic Club; referee, J. Begley.

INTERMEDIATE DIVISION.

Fairground Park, Grounds 3—Chas. DeWitt Club vs. Two Mile House; referee, J. Keenoy. Plaza A. C. vs. Irish Village; referee, J. Keenoy.

FURNITURE CO. LEASES BUILDING AT 1126-30 OLIVE

Fredman Bros. Acquires Long Term Lease on Structure on South Side of Thoroughfare.

Fredman Bros.' Furniture Co., a chain concern, has acquired a long-term lease on the five-story building at 1126-30 Olive street, owned by D. K. and T. E. Catlin and others, for a retail store on a comprehensive scale. While the concern operates a chain of stores in Southern Illinois cities, this marks its first venture in St. Louis.

Arthur S. Martin & Son represented the lessee in the negotiations, while Cornet & Zeibig, Inc., acted for the Catlin interests. Rental involved was not disclosed.

The building has a frontage of 77 feet on the south side of Olive, by a depth of 109 feet. It contains approximately 50,000 square feet of usable floor space. Equipment includes passenger and freight elevators, a steam heating plant and a sprinkler system.

The furniture concern will occupy the building as its main store and as headquarters for the five other stores of its chain. These stores are located in Collinsville, Belleville, Peoria, Vandalia and La Salle, Ill.

The Olive street store, with large warehouse facilities to be established, will be a source of supply for the Illinois stores, with the heavy shipments to be billed direct to St. Louis. It will be devoted entirely to the sale of furniture. The Olive street building has been occupied as a furniture store for 35 years or more. With one exception, the entire south side of this block is occupied by furniture stores.

Fredman Bros.' Furniture Co. was established in Collinsville 25 years ago.

SURVEY FORESEES CONSOLIDATION OF BUILDING GAINS

Estimate That More Than 210,000 Family Dwellings Will Be Built in Forthcoming Year.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Next year will likely see the building industry "consolidating and stabilizing recovery gains," Thomas S. Holden, vice-president of F. W. Dodge Corporation, predicted in a survey of the outlook.

Private dollars will flow into building and engineering work in 1938 in about the same amount as this year, but less public money will probably be spent.

It is indicated from 210,000 to 220,000 new family dwellings may be built next year. This would compare with the current estimate of between 185,000 to 195,000 for the full year 1937. On the other hand, a declining volume of factory, public, institutional and heavy engineering building is indicated. Up to now, the downturn in building has been moderate, resulting mainly from declines in publicly financed work.

In the first nine months of this year, all kinds of private building struck a total of $1,436,994,500, about 46 per cent ahead of the like period last year. Meanwhile public construction in this period has fallen about 18 per cent from a year ago. These figures cover the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains.

Early this year business circles had high hopes of a boom in home building. From this source, it was hoped, would come much fuel for further recovery. The motor industry started business uphill. Next, steel makers and heavy goods producers gave general business a big lift.

Hopes of aid from a residential building spurt are now seen to have overshot the mark. At this point, the analysis said, there is no solid reason to believe home construction will rise spectacularly next year, it added.

For some time there have been estimates housing requirements call for 500,000 to 1,000,000 new units. These calculations, it was stressed, reflect "social needs" not actual demand at the current level of business. Furthermore, rapidly rising costs will likely prevent the "need" from being translated into a comparable brick-and mortar activity, it was stated.

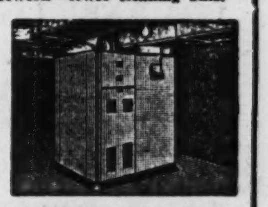
Can You Afford a Hand Fired Furnace?

Estimate the value of automatic oil heating in added comfort and convenience. No furnace tending—no ash removal — no temperature watching — no cold rooms—no dirt in the basement. Less housework—lower cleaning bills.



—and Check Fuel Cost

Owners of "AFCO" Air Stream Units enjoy all these advantages and yet the fuel cost is comparable with less efficient hand-fired systems. Your estimated value of the added comfort and convenience is an extra dividend you'll receive every year.

CONSTRUCTION IN SEPTEMBER OFF 8 PER CENT

Only 0.1 Per Cent Above That of Corresponding 1936 Period, Labor Department Reports.

"Building activity in September, measured by the value of permits issued, was below the level of the previous month, but slightly greater than in the corresponding month of last year," Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins announced today (Saturday). "Reports received from 1521 cities with a population of 2500 or over indicate that the total value of permits issued during the month was 8.5 per cent less than in August and 0.1 per cent higher than in September, 1936. The increase over a year ago was due to substantial gains in the value of permits issued for new non-residential construction and for additions, alterations, and repairs to existing structures. The value of new residential construction was 14 per cent less than in September, 1936. However, private residential construction in September shows a decrease of only 4 per cent in comparison with the same month of last year. In September, 1936, the value of contracts awarded for P W A housing projects amounted to more than $6,600,000. During September, 1937, no contracts were awarded for P W A housing projects.

"Compared with August, the total value of buildings for which permits were issued in September showed a decrease of 9 per cent. The value of residential buildings for which permits were issued during the month was only 1 per cent below the August level. Considerably greater decreases are indicated by permits issued for new non-residential buildings and for additions, alterations and repairs to existing structures.

Nine Months' Total.

"During the first nine months of 1937, the aggregate value of all classes of building construction for which permits were issued in the cities having a population of 2500 or over which reported to the Bureau of Labor Statistics amounted to $1,270,870,000, an increase of 14 per cent over the corresponding period of 1936. All types of construction show gains comparing the first nine months of the current year with the corresponding period of the past year. During the first three quarters of 1937, dwelling units were provided in these cities for 140,557 families, a gain of 12 per cent over the like period of 1936."

The data collected by the Bureau of Labor Statistics show, in addition to private construction, the number and value of buildings for which contracts were awarded by Federal and state governments in the cities included in the report. For September, 1937, the value of these public buildings amounted to $11,400,000; for August, 1937, to $8,455,000; and for September, 1936, to $12,998,000.

Important Building Projects.

Permits were issued during September for the following important building projects: In Boston, Mass., for a school building to cost $500,000; in Glen Falls, N. Y., for an institutional building to cost $500,000; in New York City—in the Borough of the Bronx, for apartment houses to cost over $1,150,000; in the Borough of Brooklyn, for apartment houses to cost nearly $1,900,000; in the Borough of Manhattan, for churches to cost $740,000 and for apartment houses to cost over $1,300,000; in the Borough of Queens, for apartment houses to cost nearly $600,000; in Chicago, Ill., for factory buildings to cost over $1,200,000 and for store and mercantile buildings to cost over $400,000; in Toledo, Ohio, for factory buildings to cost over $200,000; in West Allis, Wis., for factory buildings to cost over $600,000; in Wheeling, W. Va., for an office building to cost $300,000; in Lexington, Ky., for a school building to cost $300,000; and in Denver, Colo., for a hotel to cost over $500,000.

Contracts were awarded by the Procurement Division of the Federal Government for a courthouse in Philadelphia to cost nearly $3,500,000; for a marine hospital in Kirkwood, Mo., to cost over $1,100,000; and for a postoffice in Miami Beach, Fla., to cost nearly $200,000.

OLD MAHLER ACADEMY TO BE FUNERAL PARLOR

Charles J. Kron Acquires Building of Late Dancing Master at 4911 Washington.

The former dancing academy and residence of the late Jacob Mahler, at 4911 Washington avenue, has been purchased by Charles J. Kron, undertaker. It occupies a lot 90 by 130 feet.

The building, a commodious three-story structure, will be remodeled and converted into a funeral parlor. There will be a chapel, with organ, two funeral parlors and the general offices on the first floor. now occupied as a large ball room, with dressing rooms. The display rooms for caskets and private offices will be on the second floor. An air-conditioning system is also to be installed.

The interior of the bulding will be tastefully decorated and appointed, while the exterior will be refurbished. An attractive feature of the building is a prote-cochere, with side drive.

The property was owned by Mrs. S. H. Puffles, daughter of the dancing master, who occupied a unique place in the community.

Kron also acquired the three-story, nine-room residence, at 4917 Washington avenue, adjoining on the west, owned by William Levy, architect. This building, occupying a lot 25 by 180 feet, will be converted into apartments for employes of the undertaking establishment. There is a two-story garage in the rear of the premises.

The Volo Voerster Realty Co. handled negotiations on behalf of Kron. Levy & Co. represented the sellers in the transactions. The amounts involved were not disclosed.

SKYSCRAPER IS SEEN AS A CONVENIENCE

From Economical Viewpoint Business Center Is Logical Location for Offices, Building Manager Believes.

While there are many reasons from an economic standpoint for the location of the offices in a skyscraper in the central business district of a city, the most logical is that of convenience. This was emphasized recently by Claude B. Ricketts, president of the Railway Exchange Building in St. Louis in a radio address in which he stressed the fact that orders are often lost because of the ability to contact potential purchasers. His remarks on "servicing the public" have been quoted in the current issue of Skyscraper Management, official publication of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers.

"The buyer buys where it is handiest to buy, and that is usually at the main cross-roads, just where the leading sykscrapers are located," Mr. Ricketts stated in part. "Because the buyer buys where he can do so the most conveniently, the wise business man locates himself in the well-located skyscraper so buyers can contact him without difficulty."

A firm puts little value on its executives' time, Mr. Ricketts pointed out, when it requires that they spend several hours of each day traveling long distances to see people who, if the firm were located in a skyscraper office building, centrally located, could be visited in a few minutes each day.

"Then there is the matter of employes," he continued. "Any experienced personnel man or woman will tell you that it is easier to get competent office and technical employes in skyscraper offices than in outlying plant locations. From downtown all transportation facilities radiate direct. From outside plant locations transportation facilities are usually inadequate, and in any event one or more transfers are required by employes going to and from their homes."

No matter what the conditions may be that lead a firm to maintain its offices at an outlying plant, Mr. Ricketts stated in conclusion, most firms will find it a profitable investment to have at least a small office in a downtown skyscraper as a contact point.

SITES PURCHASED IN WARSON ROAD TRACT

Buyers to Erect Residence in Development at Southeast Corner of Woodlawn Road.

Edward L. Bakewell reports the sale of several sites in a development of 34 acres at the southeast corner of Warson and Woodlawn roads, in the city of Ladue.

These include five acres acquired by Edmund T. Allen, three and one-half acres by Raymond P. Kinsella, two acres by Francis Roth, and three and one-fourth acres by Howard J. Denny. The purchasers have plans for handsome residences, with construction scheduled to start in the near future.

The development is owned by Festus J. Wade Jr., whose residence stands in the center of the tract, one of the most attractively situated in this section of St. Louis County.

SEPTEMBER BUILDING OFF 8.5 PER CENT FROM AUGUST

Only 0.1 Per Cent Above That of September, 1936, Labor Department Reports.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—September building activity, measured by the value of building permits issued in 1521 cities, dropped 8.5 per cent below that of August, the Labor Department announced today.

General building activity last month was only 0.1 per cent above September, 1936. New residential construction was 14 per cent lower than a year ago, largely because P W A financed no new housing projects last month. In September, 1936, P W A started $6,600,000 in housing projects.

In the first nine months of 1937 building activity has run 14 per cent ahead of the comparable period for 1936.

TO BUILD MORTUARY IN UNIVERSITY CITY

Lupton Gets Permit for Erection of Two-Story Structure at 7233 Delmar.

C. R. Lupton & Son, Inc., has taken out a permit for the erection of a two-story mortuary building with garage at 7233 Delmar boulevard, University City, to cost $50,000. The ultimate cost is expected to greatly exceed that figure.

The building will be 84 by 70 feet in dimensions and will be of brick construction with concrete foundation. Conservative in design, it will stan on a lot 150 by 112 feet. Bonsack & Pierce, Inc., architects, have drawn the plans for the building. The Robert Paulus Construction Co. has been awarded the contract. The Edward K. Love Realty Co. is advancing funds for the construction of the building.

The site is between Midland boulevard and Purdue avenue, opposite University Hills, a residential development of University City.

The Lupton Mortuary is now at 4449 Olive street.

KIRKWOOD SPECIAL ELECTION ON ISSUING SEWER BONDS

Vote to Be Taken Saturday on $150,000 Expenditure for Extension of System.

Kirkwood will hold a special election Saturday on a proposed bond issue of $150,000 for construction of sewers. Polls will be open from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m. A two-thirds vote will be required for passage of the proposition. For this election voters need not be registered, but they must be qualified otherwise.

It is proposed by the city to obtain a $317,000 W P A allotment for the sewers, making a total expenditure of $467,000. The plan provides for extending sanitary sewers, including trunks and laterals, to nearly all portions of the city not now sewered. The system would be connected on the north with the proposed lines of the Two-Mile Creek and Ladue-Deer Creek sanitary sewer districts.

100-YEAR-OLD FRAME HOUSE IN CITY BEING TORN DOWN

Structure at 4763 Ashland Avenue Has Been in Danger of Collapsing.

A one and a half story frame house at 4763 Ashland avenue, built as a farm house more than 100 years ago, is being torn down for kindling wood because it has been in danger of collapsing.

When the house was built it stood in a pasture which extended from Euclid to Shreve avenues, and from Ashland to Lexington avenues. About 60 years ago two quarries, now abandoned, were opened in a field behind the house and it became the living quarters of the quarry foreman.

The last occupant, William H. Ketts, a carpenter, is assisting a neighbor in wrecking the three-room structure. The property is owned by Shelby Heman, president of the Trinidad Asphalt Co.

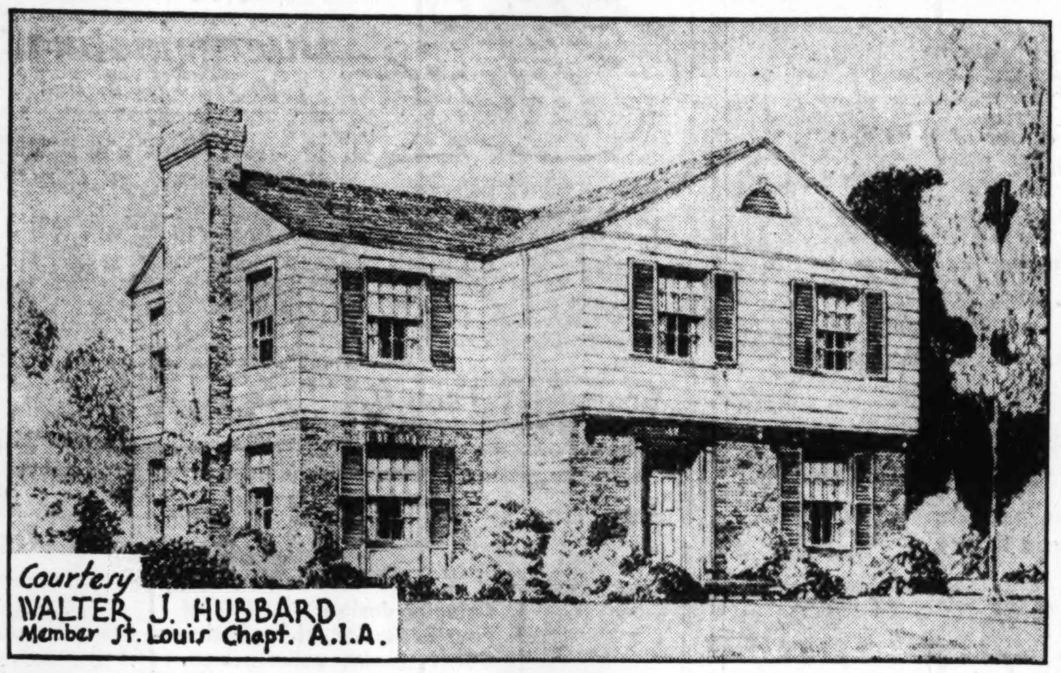
A Colonial Type House of Brick and Frame

Planned for a 50-Foot Lot, This House Has Number of Features, Among Them Ample Closet Space.



THE combination of brick and frame construction for Colonial houses of the less imposing type is growing more and more popular. There is much to be said for this particular combination. The second floor of a house of this type usually has an airy quality which adds much to the attractiveness of a small house. In addition, the use of frame makes possible a slight cut in the building cost.

The house shown here was planned for a 50-foot lot and is therefore planned broadly and with minimum depth. Living room and dining room and two bedrooms have the coveted southern exposure which is best for this climate. Entrance to the house is through a deeply recessed colonial doorway on an entry with two closets. There is thought back of these closets. One is a guest closet, while the other is to be used for storage of cleaning equipment such as vacuum cleaner, carper sweeper, etc., in daily use to keep the first floor presentable.

The living room is a long, well-proportioned room with openings on three sides. A long, unbroken wall space makes possible furniture grouping to balance the fireplace group. French doors open on a paved terrace, an adjunct to any living room in war weather. The mantel is of cast stone with harmonizing brick hearth.

The dining room is across the stair hall. Here the judicious placing of windows allows enough wall space for the larger pieces of furniture without crowding either it or the diners. The lavatory has been placed between the kitchen and dining room in a small hall which also gives access to the basement.

A SMALL breakfast room opens off the kitchen. A good-sized shallow pantry is an important part of this kitchen as are the cabinets near the sink and the ventilating fan near the stove. A back entry leads to the one-car garage which is not attached, as well as to the basement.

Upstairs are three large bedrooms and a good-sized bath with recessed tub. Each bedroom has ample closet space and in addition there are two hall closets for bedding or storage. The addition of a disappearing stairway would make the attic available for storage space.

The specifications call for a poured concrete foundation, with 12-inch brick walls and an insulated second floor of frame. The house is to be heated with a gas-fired, winter air-conditioned furnace. Sandmold brick is suggested because it comes in mellow red colors. All exterior wood work and second floor should be painted a light gray. This includes the panels below the first floor windows. A roof of gray green composition shingles and copper-green shutters complete the exterior color scheme.

The interior has many possibilities. With off white wood work and clear red oak floors a tinted plaster is used to avoid a glare. The kitchen which faces north should use of combination of yellow, black or brown, with the color accent of red. French provincial or Spanish kitchens are popular just now and a great deal of interest can be created by the judicious use of copper or pinkish earthenware pans and cooking utensils.

Cost of the house according to bids taken recently is $9400. This includes architect's fee and one-car garage. The house was planned by Walter J. Hubbard, member of the St. Louis Chapter, American Institute of Architects.

·SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

Closets no Longer Dark and Unlovely

In the newly-built home, there's no excuse for closets being dark, unlovely holes-in-the-wall. A little care in design, and a little work, will make them more useful and charming adjuncts to a well-appointed home.

A small set of drawers and triangular corner shelves can be easily built into the average closet by a husband handy with tools. Painted in bright colors, or constructed of "blonde" walnut or inexpensive Philippine mahogany, they add much to any home, and complete the guest room with that air of charm and taste held ultimately desirable.

Compartments designed to hold smaller items, such as shoes, hatboxes, linens and the like save space and obviate the need for cluttered shelves and keep small articles from "junking up" on closet floors.

The brightest colors can be used to brighten dark closets, and indirect lighting fixtures are another touch to lighten storage space. Transparent composition boxes, bound at the edges in gay colors, are also effective.

Safety in Home

Care should be taken to avoid causes of accidents in homes. A report of the National Safety Council shows that in 1935, 30 per cent of the 31,500 accidental deaths occurred at home, with a large number of permanently disabling injuries also occurring there.

Modern wiring will prevent fires, and proper outlets will remove the necessity for long, dangling wires that cause falls. Stairs and steps should be protected with a handrailing, and stoves, water heaters, and other such equipment must be properly insulated to avoid fires.

Brightly Painted Doors.

A brightly painted doorway makes the entrance to a stained shingle home inviting and adds a touch of beauty that is desirable to the complete color picture.

FOR BETTER LIVING

When the breakfast nook is crowded for space, install a shelf on the wall above the electric outlet and paint or enamel it to harmonize or contrast with your breakfast nook furniture. Such a shelf will give you a place to set the toaster during breakfast and will hold bright accessories between meals.

Attic rooms are frequently awkward in shape and have a poor window arrangement. For this reason care should be given to their color scheme. Shades that reflect light well are advisable. Color accent can be gained through brilliant treatment of doors or woodwork

* * *

A modern apartment had a mirror over a fireplace. There was no mantel. Bookshelves formed a frame around the mirror, and the glass backing reflected the colors of the books and art objects placed there.

* * *

Saddles, or sills, should not be used between two rooms except when the floors are of different materials, as they are dust catchers and might cause falls.

For those women who like to carry first-aid cosmetics in their purses there is now a small lined envelope on the market for the express purpose of keeping lipstick and powder in one place. The envelope fastens with a neat slide fastener and fits any purse.

Lamps have come out in a hundred new designs this fall—formal, gay, amusing, of glass, of pottery, of metal. All perform a useful function in brightening the home and lending a smart note when judiciously chosen. Shades of swirl-shape ivory taffeta used on a crystal cut glass base are widely favored. Architectural glass in severe modern design has made its appearance, according to Modern Home Institute. The diffused light through the opaque architectural glass gives an interesting, subdued note.

There are many types of garage doors. Some open in the usual way, some fold back like a screen, some can be pushed around to the side on tracks, and others roll up overhead and lie along the ceiling. Select the type for your garage by determining ease of operation, tightness of fit, resistance to elements, and the space in which they are to be operated.

* * *

Radiators should be placed with regard to where the heat will do the most good and where they will interfere the least with the furniture. Generally heat losses are greatest around the windows, and they should be placed in this area. Wall space should not be broken up with a radiator whenever it is possible to avoid such placement.

Locks that will hold a sash at any desired opening are on the market and are a boon to the owners of one-story houses. The window may be opened from top or bottom or both and locked in place.

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Q. Is there a type of paste wax sold that does not contain gasoline for drying? I want such a wax for newly stained furniture also for stained floors. Each paste wax I have used, no matter what make, removes so much of the stain that it is necessary to restain them. On the furniture I want a rubbed down finish, not a varnished finish. The floors are stained, varnished, and then waxed. Is there a certain type varnish for furniture that gives this effect?

MRS. L.

A. Since you can find no wax on the market that suits your purpose we suggest that you mix your own. Melt one-fourth pound beeswax in a double boiler. Cool slightly and add one pint turpentine and stir until mixed thoroughly. Add a small quantity of linseed oil and place in a jar. If you want an especially fine wax you might use spirits of turpentine instead of the turpentine. Color the wax with artists oil color to match the wood on which it is to be used. Burnt umber is a good basic color for light woods and Van Dyke brown is good for darker woods. Keep the mixture away from flame as turpentine is highly imflammable.

The best way to achieve a dull finish for furniture is to apply thin coats of shellac made by mixing a good grade of shellac with half the quantity of alcohol. Two or three coats are applied and each is rubbed down with steel wool. The wax is applied after the last coat has been rubbed down.

Q. Our house is equipped with brass door knobs, lighting fixtures, etc. Is there any preparation which can be used to keep them from tarnishing?

G. C.

A. There is none that is satisfactory. We suggest that you make a polishing cloth by mixing four ounces castile soap in 20 ounces of water, with five ounces jeweler's rouge powder or finely powdered rottenstone. Soak thick flannel in this solution and hang up to dry. Going over the knobs, etc., with this cloth should keep them fairly bright.

Q. What is the best way to clean a paint bursh after using? H. F.

A. Rinse with turpentine, then rinse well in two or three changes of gasoline. Wash with strong soap and water, rinse and hang up to dry.

Q. The party that lived in the house before we did kept a dog in the basement and there is always an odor that is offensive. What can we do to rid the basement of this odor?

MRS. B. J. T.

A. Scatter moth crystals, paradichloro-benzine, in the corners and over the floor. The fumes are quite strong and should kill the odor.

* * *

Q. We have a baywindow in our dining room which has a copper roof. Rain causes the surrounding area to become discolored. Someone suggested painting it but we would like to keep the copper finish. Is there anything that we can do instead?

CHAS. W.

A. Go over the copper lightly with steel wool to remove any dirt or deposits and then give two coats of good spar varnish. This should prevent any stains in the future.

* * *

Q. Is it more economical to build a five-room house on one floor or on two?

MONA N.

A. If there is to be a cellar, the two-story house will be considerably cheaper. If there is no cellar, the two-story house should be cheaper, depending upon the construction to be used. Generally speaking, a house with more than four rooms is more economical in a two-story structure than in one.

A Few Brush Tips

WHEN preparing to repaint a window sash, all loose putty should be first removed. The priming coat should then be applied, followed by the reputtying process. Last comes the application of the finish coats.

The appearance of old corroded plumbing fixtures, sinks, tubs, etc., can be considerably brightened by the application of a little paint. Two coats of white enamel make a good finish for the outside of a sink or basin, while aluminum or bronze paint may be used for the faucets.

* * *

When painting a ceiling or high point, the dripping of paint down the brush handle can be halted by a hollow rubber ball cut in half, punctured with a hole through the center and applied to form a cup on the handle of the brush.

New Colors for Walls Are Seen This Season

Soft Grayed Effect Called "Muted" Is in Favor and Harmonizes With Season's Fabrics.

A host of fascinating new colors for walls are to be seen. They run the gamut of the whole spectrum and harmonize closely with the season's new fabrics.

One thing to be noted in the new wall colors is the soft, grayed effect. The decorators call them "muted" colors. They are not the clear, decided blues, reds and yellows we have had in the past. In the case of blue, for example, a trace of red is added which makes the color tend toward lavender. Yellows may have a greenish cast, as in chartreuse, mustard yellow or sulphur yellow. Reds are given a little blue, so that they suggest purple or may even go over the line to periwinkle blue. When yellow is added to red, the orange-reds, such as tangerine or coral, result. All these new colors, don't forget, are slightly grayed, so that they are softer and more easily harmonized with each other than formerly.

Surprisingly enough, brown walls are popular this season—light tints of coffee brown, chocolate brown and a very pleasant version known as sun tan brown, first inspired by cosmetics and later featured in stockings and decorative fabrics. The browns for walls today are not dull and heavy but possess a new vibrant quality due to judicious additions of blue and red.

Blue, too, has become fashionable for walls. If the householder wants something quite individual—for a dining room, say—a deep, rich blue may be used. Less startling and not so liable to make the room seem dark are medium tones of blue, muted with a touch of red.

For the all-white room, still popular and versatile, there has been added to oyster white, parchment white and other off-white hues, a new "dead" white. It is appropriate as a background for the new peasant, California and other painted furniture which is appearing this season in the shops. White trim, whether dead white or one of the off-white effects, is used with any wall color, although for a unified background which shows off the furnishings to good advantage, it is quite the thing to paint the trim the same color as the wall.

Rooms with either white walls or trim make effective settings for some of the favorite styles of furniture, especially American Federal. Walls of blue, brown or light terra cotta are very much the mode with English Regency or early Empire pieces.

Wall Paper Blends With Furniture

Particular care should be given to selecting wall papers to "blend" with the furiture chosen for a room.

Modern furniture, especially in the blond shades so popular just now, calls for plain wall paper, or dramatic, wide-striped papers. The absence of figures on the paper carries out the simple, utilitarian lines of modern furniture. Many interior decorators are recommending wood paneling as background for nearly any furniture suite.

Colonial design wall paper, particularly those designs delineating old meeting houses and churches, is effective with Early American suites. Plum-color background is finding favor, brightened by the lighter design. Eighteenth century English furniture is "brought out" by floral designs in the new technique, resembling hand-blocked paper. Formal lattice-work designs are charming with Georgian rooms.

Gay colors and amusing fancies in design seem best fitted in combination with French provincial furniture. Paper lined in squares, with formal floral designs, also is frequently used in conjunction with French provincial. Baroque furniture, product of that romantic period after the Renaissance, can make use of brightly colored backgrounds and heavy scroll designs in lighter colors.

Copper Roofing for Small Home

Copper roofing that is practical for even the small home is now available. This has been made possible by narrowing the sheets to a width of 16 inches, which reduces seam spacing to a point in keeping with smaller roofs and makes possible the use of thinner metal without sacrificing the strength, rigidity, and wind resistance obtained from thicker sheets with wider seam spacing. These sheets, which weigh only 10 ounces per square foot, are more easily and quickly formed and assembled by experienced workers and thus reduce installation expense.

Some of the advantages of this type of roofing are a low maintenance cost, a minimum of danger of leaks at flashings because snow and ice do not adhere readily to the smooth surface of copper, and a lowered insurance rate because the flying-spark hazard is eliminated.

Wall Bracket.

Many times when a convenience outlet is inserted in a room a wall bracket can be put above it at slight extra cost while the opening is made.

SIXTY-ONE FAIRFAX GUARANTEED HOMES SOLD THIS YEAR

Public of St. Louis Places Stamp of Approval on Fairfax Homes.

Summit Park.

Forty-eight families have taken advantage of the outstanding value offered in five and six room brick Colonial homes in Summit Park. There are no special assessments, all improvements are in and paid for. The property is served by a central sewer system. Summit Park is one block from a new Grade School and adjoins the Kirkwood-Ferguson Car (one fare to any part of the City).

Five-Room Brick Homes; insulated throughout; spacious closets; attached garage and overhead doors; silentite prefit windows; all painted washable walls; Briggs beautyware fixtures; poured concrete foundations; clear oak floors; fully restricted; lots 50x147'6"; priced from $5950.00; $43.63 monthly on F. H. A. Plan.

Take North and South Road, between Clayton and Manchester to Eulalie Avenue, then one block east.

Geyer Terrace.

Seven purchasers in one month. Just three homes unsold. All of the conveniences of a home in the city with lots 276 feet deep. Fronting on one of the counties most exclusive residential roads. Close to schools and transportation. Within the City Limits of Kirkwood with both fire and police protection.

Four and six rooms; frame completely; insulated walls and ceilings; waterproofed foundations; attached garages; Silentite Prefit windows; clear oak floors; lots 50x 70x276; priced from $4500.00; $32.50 per month on F. H. A. Plan.

County Side.

De luxe 5-room-brick Colonial Homes, custom designed and custom built. Identical in every detail of construction with homes ranging from $20,000 to $30,000. Each home selected on a site that will insure maximum livability. 20-foot living room, bedrooms up to 14 feet in length. Country Side Homes are extra-large, commodious residences for small families.

Convenient to Schools and Transportation, yet really out in the country.

Take Geyer south from Manchester to Essex, then one block west to: 466 Wilcox, 651 Schiller, 633 Schiller.

Priced at $8950. Monthly payments on Prudential 20-Year Plan, $50.60.

SPECIAL ATTENTION

This is the LAST OPPORTUNITY you will have TO BUY A HOME IN COLONIAL VILLAGE at the previous PRICES ADVERTISED.

Effective Nov. 15, all prices go up. We have made comparisons and found that our standards of construction will not permit the prices we have offered and WE WILL NOT CHANGE OUR CONSTRUCTION.

The future policy of Colonial Village is to be, "INDIVIDUAL HOMES BUILT TO YOUR IDEAS; BRICK OR FRAME PLANNED TO YOUR REQUIREMENTS."

All buildings will be carried out under personal direction of trained architects, builders of long experience and competent interior decorators.

If you are discriminating in your living, consult us! If you are the type that will buy Just Shelter or the Stock Home, Colonial Village is not the place you are looking for.

I want to meet the salesman that can back up this statement:
"PAY ME ENOUGH AND I CAN SELL ANY CAR"
I have a varied selection of more than 150 cars and will take trades, finance my own paper, at minimum down payment and easy terms. My cars are by far not overpriced, in fact, most are the lowest prices in St. Louis.
"I WILL PAY 10% (TEN PER CENT) COMMISSION"
Upon inquiry will give further details and will mail complete list of cars with prices and required down payments, if you request same. In answering, give age, experience, references. Box F-273, Post-Dispatch.

INTERIOR OF ST. PIUS CHURCH REDECORATED

Mosaics, New Windows, Bronze Lighting Fixtures, Murals, at Cost of $50,000.

Work of redecorating the interior of St. Pius Catholic Church, 3304 South Grand boulevard, began nearly a year ago, has been completed with installation of mosaics in the sanctuary apse and proscenium, made in Italy at a cost of more than $50,000.

The mosaic in the apse represents Christ receiving homage from the kings of all nations, and symbols in the proscenium represent the Holy Trinity. They are executed in the rough-surfaced Byzantine style, with rich Byzantine ornamentation in the proscenium.

Completing the new interior are new stained glass windows and bronze lighting fixtures, as well as refinished walls and ornamentation. Soffits in the side aisle arches are decorated in colors on a background of gold, and side aisle ceilings with stars in colors and gold on a blue background. The organ balcony proscenium is ornamented in Byzantine manner, with five murals of angels representing the Heavenly Choir.

A photograph of the interior of the church, showing the mosaics in the sanctuary apse and proscenium, is published in the rotogravure section of today's Post-Dispatch.

30 DEER KILLED IN TWO DAYS BY HUNTERS IN MISSOURI

19-Point Buck Shot in Carter County; Season to Close Tonight.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 30.—Reports to the State Conservation Commission, as the second day of the three-day deer season closed yesterday, showed 30 deer had been killed.

E. C. Backman of Winona shot a 19-point buck weighing 204 pounds in Carter County. A. V. Williams of Eminence shot a pure white 200-pound deer in Dent County.

The best season since the sport was legalized in 1931 after a five-year closed period, was 1932, when 149 kills were made. There were 82 in 1936. Hunters have three days in which to report their kills to the commission.

Dent County, with eight kills, led all other counties in the reports so far this year. Indian Trail State Park and Game Refuge is in that county. Sportsmen who bagged the limit of one animal in Dent County included Dr. L. H. Hunt, Harvey Lay, Peter Dent and Tom McGuire, all of Salem, and Lawrence Rutledge of Maplewood. Paul Koenig, St. Louis, shot one in Franklin County.

Warden George Long phoned the commission that he confiscated a three-point buck in Dent County. Hunters are restricted by State law to bucks with four or more points to the antler.

The open season ends one-half hour after sunset today.

CONVICT ON 150-FOOT TOWER SAYS HE'LL STAY TILL FREED

Ohio Prisoner for Second Time Tries Catwalk Stunt to Obtain Release.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 30.—Undaunted by failure of a similar attempt Oct. 10, James Mason, Ohio Penitentiary convict, paced the catwalk of the 150-foot prison yard structure again today, demanding freedom.

"I want out of here," Mason shouted. "Set me free and I'll come down."

"He'll come down when he gets cold and hungry," Warden James C. Woodward declared. "He can't go anywhere, and when he decides to come down we'll be waiting."

Mason broke from line while marching to breakfast this morning. A similar break three weeks ago ended after Mason had been atop the tower 12 hours. A drizzling rain, coupled with offers of hot food and promises that he would not be made to suffer for his act, brought him down.

Mason is serving a one to 20 year sentence for driving an automobile without the owner's consent.

EXECUTIVES OF COTTON BELT

Upthegrove and Green Named to Act for Trustee.

Appointment of Daniel Upthegrove, president of the Cotton Belt Railroad, as chief executive officer for the trustee, and F. W. Green, vice-president, as chief operating officer was announced yesterday by Trustee Berryman Henwood.

The appointments were made pursuant to an order by United States District Judge Charles B. Davis authorizing the trustee to operate the railroad in his name instead of that of the corporation. The railroad filed a petition for reorganization in December, 1935.

Investment Bankers' Meeting.

St. Louis investment bankers will leave Union Station at noon Tuesday on a special train for White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., to attend the annual convention of the Investment Bankers' Association. NEW JOB FUND NOTICES TO STATE EMPLOYERS

Unemployment Compensation Board to Give Them 10 Days to Reply.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 30.—Andrew J. Murphy, chairman of the State Unemployment Compensation Commission, said today that second notices would be mailed early next week to 70,000 Missouri employers who have not reported whether they come under the law.

The employers will be given ten days in which to reply, Murphy said. After that, investigators will be sent to check the employers still not heard from.

Answers from 34,263 of the 105,000 employers to whom first notices were mailed six weeks ago have been received by the Commission. Of these, 7441 had eight or more employes and were thus subject to the law. The 7441 employers reported 532,377 workers in their business.

Commission officials think that the large employers who are certain the law applies to them have nearly all filed reports and that those who are delaying are border line cases.

The officials estimate that about 750,000 workers will come under the law.

Murphy said the Commission had abandoned a plan to collect contributions for the first nine months of 1937 in a lump sum and then on a monthly basis for the last three months. Instead, he explained, the contributions for the entire year will be collected in January, 1938. With the start of the new year, the collections will be made each month.

The contributions, paid only by employers, are 1.8 per cent of the payroll for 1937. Next year they jump to 2.7 per cent. Benefits will not start until 1939.

Murphy and the other members of the Commission—W. L. Patterson of St. Louis and J. L. Rogers of Kansas City—have returned from a five-day conference in Washington of unemploymnt compensation commissioners from all states. A permanent interstate organization was set up.

Harry G. Waltner Jr., chief counsel for the Missouri Commission, and Will S. Denham, director of the State Re-employment Service, also attended the conference.

3 MONTHS FOR TRUCK DRIVER WITH 5 TRAFFIC CONVICTIONS

Judge Nangle Sentences a Motorist to 30 Days and Suspends His License.

Ralph Moreno, truck driver whose traffic record since 1932 includes 17 arrests and five convictions, four of them for speeding, was sentenced to the Workhouse for three months and fined $35 by Police Judge James F. Nangle today on a charge of driving at a rate of 35 miles an hour in a truck.

Moreno was arrested Oct. 12 on North Broadway. Judge Nangle commented that Moreno's traffic record was the worst he had ever heard of, adding that the three months in the Workhouse would give Moreno "time to cool off." The defendant gave his address as 1805 Delmar boulevard.

Edward Gerber, automobile supply salesman, 7191 Forsythe boulevard, University City, was sentenced to the Workhouse for 30 days, was fined $175 and his driver's license was suspended for a year by Judge Nangle on charges of driving when intoxicated and careless driving.

He was arrested Oct. 24 by a policeman who was off duty and driving in his own automobile. The policeman testified he drove 60 miles an hour on Vandeventer avenue in pursuit of Gerber, catching up with him in the 4400 block of Shaw boulevard.

City employes found guilty of traffic ordinance violations will be subject to a lay-off of one week without pay, Mayor Dickmann has announced.

50 PCT. PENALTY REMISSION ON TAXES TO END TONIGHT

City Collector to Accept Payments in Letters Postmarked Before Midnight.

Payments of delinquent general taxes subject to remission of 50 per cent of the penalties, forwarded to Collector William F. Baumann by mail, will be accepted by his office, if postmarked prior to midnight tonight. Beginning tomorrow and until the end of the year, the remission will be 25 per cent.

Yesterday's receipts have not been tabulated, but were comparatively small. From Sept. 1, when the 50 per cent period began, through Friday, the collections were $326,968. In July and August, with 75 per cent of the penalties waived, they were $808,119, while from June 10 to 30, when all penalties were set aside, they were $3,208,505. Up to yesterday there was still $10,318,531 in general taxes delinquent for 1936 and prior years.

For current or 1937 tax bills, the period of 1 per cent discount for early payment will expire Nov. 30. Unpaid bills will become delinquent after Dec. 31.

Nye to Speak in St. Louis.

United States Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota will speak Saturday night at the St. Louis University Auditorium. His topic will be "The Munitions Racket." The lecture will be open to the public.

TUBERCULOSIS UNIT IN COUNTY URGED

Health Officer Plans Hospital or Wing for 75 to 100 Patients.

Construction of a new building or a new wing at St. Louis County Hospital for tuberculosis and other communicable disease patients has been recommended by Dr. Theodore R. Meyer, health commissioner, to the County Court.

He said the recommendation for a unit that would accommodate 75 to 100 patients was favorably received, although he does not anticipate the calling of a bond issue election until next year. No improvements for the hospital could be considered until after the institution regained its Class A rating from the American College of Surgeons, which occurred this week, Dr. Meyer explained.

However, a bond issue proposal of $250,000 for an addition to the hospital was defeated in May, 1934. At the present time persons who have tuberculosis are sent to Mount Vernon State Sanitorium or to Mount St. Rose Sanitorium, a private institution. Only 43 county patients are being accommodated at those hospitals.

20 Awaiting Hospital Care.

There are 20 tuberculosis patients in the county waiting for hospital accommodations, Dr. Meyer said to a Post-Dispatch reporter. Most of them are Negroes. Only the Mount Vernon hospital can accommodate them and it is overcrowded.

Persons living in the county who contract communicable diseases are sent to Isolation Hospital. Cost of their care is paid for by the County to St. Louis.

About 500 persons are under surveillance by the County Health Department or by private physicians for tuberculosis, Dr. Meyer estimated. During the last year, 3500 visits were made by members of the health department staff to persons who either had the disease or had come in contact with patients.

The Health Department has recently obtained approval from the County Court to employ a full-time bacteriologist, who will be concerned chiefly with tuberculosis work and milk inspection. The position has not been filled yet. A bacteriologist, formerly on the County Hospital staff, has recently been transferred to the Health Department and a large share of his work is on tuberculosis.

Examinations on Monday.

Patients referred by the County Hospital clinic to the Health Department's tuberculosis clinic in the same building are examined each Monday by two specialists and an interne. In addition, 12 to 15 persons who have been treated at hospitals and need further care, usually collapse therapy, are treated at County Hospital on Fridays.

Dr. Meyer, grateful to the County Court for what he considers "utmost co-operation in improving health conditions," pointed out that there is nevertheless a shortage of public health nurses. There is only one visiting nurse for every 30,000 persons in the county, whereas the United States Public Health Service sets one nurse for 2000 persons as the necessary ratio.

The 10 public health nurses not only look after tuberculosis patients in their homes, but also visit persons suffering from communicable and venereal diseases and other serious ailments in their districts.

Traveling expenses of four of the nurses and part of the salary of the tuberculosis controller, Miss Erma Wolfort, a nurse, are paid by the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis, Dr. Meyer explained. Within the last year, the society's expenditures in the county have been increased about 300 per cent.

The United States Public Health Service pays part of the salary of Miss Wolfort and the $5000 salary of Dr. Meyer. He receives $1 a year from the county. Provided the County maintains certain health standards set by the Public Health Service, that office will continue to pay Dr. Meyer and several assistants. He was first appointed last year and reappointed for another year in February.

The County Health Department spends about 16 cents a person each year, whereas the Public Health Service recommends an expenditure of $2.13 a person annually, Dr. Meyer said.

NEW LEADER INAUGURATES NATIONAL GIRL SCOUT WEEK

Guard of Honor Receives Mrs. F. H. Brooke; Program to Symbolize Ideals.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—A girl scout guard of honor received Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke of Washington, newly elected national president, at the Girl Scout Little House here today in a ceremony inaugurating National Girl Scout week.

Mrs. Harry Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, received a similar welcome when she arrived to see a display of arts and crafts arranged in Mrs. Brooke's honor.

Mrs. Brooke, who succeeded Mrs. Herbert Hoover as the organization's head, said 440,000 members would observe girl scout week Sunday through Saturday by special programs symbolizing ideals and aims.

TUBERCULOSIS UNIT IN COUNTY URGED

Health Officer Plans Hospital or Wing for 75 to 100 Patients.

Construction of a new building or a new wing at St. Louis County Hospital for tuberculosis and other communicable disease patients has been recommended by Dr. Theodore R. Meyer, health commissioner, to the County Court.

He said the recommendation for a unit that would accommodate 75 to 100 patients was favorably received, although he does not anticipate the calling of a bond issue election until next year. No improvements for the hospital could be considered until after the institution regained its Class A rating from the American College of Surgeons, which occurred this week, Dr. Meyer explained.

However, a bond issue proposal of $250,000 for an addition to the hospital was defeated in May, 1934. At the present time persons who have tuberculosis are sent to Mount Vernon State Sanitorium or to Mount St. Rose Sanitorium, a private institution. Only 43 county patients are being accommodated at those hospitals.

20 Awaiting Hospital Care.

There are 20 tuberculosis patients in the county waiting for hospital accommodations, Dr. Meyer said to a Post-Dispatch reporter. Most of them are Negroes. Only the Mount Vernon hospital can accommodate them and it is overcrowded.

Persons living in the county who contract communicable diseases are sent to Isolation Hospital. Cost of their care is paid for by the County to St. Louis.

About 500 persons are under surveillance by the County Health Department or by private physicians for tuberculosis, Dr. Meyer estimated. During the last year, 3500 visits were made by members of the health department staff to persons who either had the disease or had come in contact with patients.

The Health Department has recently obtained approval from the County Court to employ a full-time bacteriologist, who will be concerned chiefly with tuberculosis work and milk inspection. The position has not been filled yet. A bacteriologist, formerly on the County Hospital staff, has recently been transferred to the Health Department and a large share of his work is on tuberculosis.

Examinations on Monday.

Patients referred by the County Hospital clinic to the Health Department's tuberculosis clinic in the same building are examined each Monday by two specialists and an interne. In addition, 12 to 15 persons who have been treated at hospitals and need further care, usually collapse therapy, are treated at County Hospital on Fridays.

Dr. Meyer, grateful to the County Court for what he considers "utmost co-operation in improving health conditions," pointed out that there is nevertheless a shortage of public health nurses. There is only one visiting nurse for every 30,000 persons in the county, whereas the United States Public Health Service sets one nurse for 2000 persons as the necessary ratio.

The 10 public health nurses not only look after tuberculosis patients in their homes, but also visit persons suffering from communicable and venereal diseases and other serious ailments in their districts.

Traveling expenses of four of the nurses and part of the salary of the tuberculosis controller, Miss Erma Wolfort, a nurse, are paid by the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis, Dr. Meyer explained. Within the last year, the society's expenditures in the county have been increased about 300 per cent.

The United States Public Health Service pays part of the salary of Miss Wolfort and the $5000 salary of Dr. Meyer. He receives $1 a year from the county. Provided the County maintains certain health standards set by the Public Health Service, that office will continue to pay Dr. Meyer and several assistants. He was first appointed last year and reappointed for another year in February.

The County Health Department spends about 16 cents a person each year, whereas the Public Health Service recommends an expenditure of $2.13 a person annually, Dr. Meyer said.

NEW LEADER INAUGURATES NATIONAL GIRL SCOUT WEEK

Guard of Honor Receives Mrs. F. H. Brooke; Program to Symbolize Ideals.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—A girl scout guard of honor received Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke of Washington, newly elected national president, at the Girl Scout Little House here today in a ceremony inaugurating National Girl Scout week.

Mrs. Harry Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, received a similar welcome when she arrived to see a display of arts and crafts arranged in Mrs. Brooke's honor.

Mrs. Brooke, who succeeded Mrs. Herbert Hoover as the organization's head, said 440,000 members would observe girl scout week Sunday through Saturday by special programs symbolizing ideals and aims.

IN MEMORIAM

DAVENPORT, LESTER E.—In loving memory of my dear huband, who died Oct. 27, 1935.
Sadly missed by his WIFE and many who knew him.

IN MEMORIAM

DIEBLING, ANDREW—Departed this life Oct. 29, 1936.

Your gentle face and patient smile
With sadness we recall,
You had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.

You are not forgotten, loved one,
Nor will you ever be
As long as life and memory last
We will remember thee.
Sadly missed by his WIFE, CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

FAUTH, GEORGE J.—In fondest remembrance of our dear son and brother, First-Class Private George J. Fauth, Co. D, 89th Infantry, who made the supreme sacrifice Nov. 1, 1918.

Many heartaches and many tears
As the months have grown to years;
Ever lonely but trusting still
To meet in heaven God's will.
Sadly missed by PARENTS, SISTER and all who loved him.

FEIST, CHRISTINA—In remembrance of our mother, who died Nov. 2, 1936.
HUSBAND AND DAUGHTERS.

HEIDORN, THEO—Died Nov. 1, 1935.

A year of sorrow, lonely and blue,
Life is so empty, dear son, without you.
It was sad, indeed, the way you died,
Without a chance to say good-bye.
Sadly missed by
PARENTS, WIFE, DAUGHTER AND BROTHERS.

MEYERS, CATHERINE—In memory of our dear sweet mother, who passed away Nov. 2, 1926.

Days of sadness oft come o'er us,
Tears in silence often flow;
Love shall always keep you near us,
Though you left 11 years ago.
Sadly missed by her
CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

PESCHKE, EMIL B. SR.—In loving memory of our dear father who departed this life Nov. 2, 1929.

Years may go but memories stay.
Sadly missed by
SONS AND DAUGHTERS.

SCHICKER, JOHANNAH—In loving memory of Johannah Schicker, who died Oct. 31, 1935.

Surrounded by friends, we are lonesome,
In the midst of our joys we are blue;
With a smile on our face we've a heart ache
Longing, dear mother, for you.
Sadly missed by HUSBAND, CHILDREN and GRANDCHILDREN.

WEITKAMP, F. HENRY—In loving memory of my dear husband and father, who departed this life two years ago, Oct. 28, 1935.

The face I loved is now laid low,
His loving voice is still;
The hand so often clasped in mine,
Lies now in death's cold chill.
I often sit and think of him
When I am all alone;
For memory is the only thing
That grief can call its own.
Sadly missed by his WIFE, MARGARET, and DAUGHTER, HILDA.

WIELAND, ELIZABETH HEFTI—In memory, who died Nov. 3, 1934.

Although you have gone three years ago today,
We still love you in the same sweet way;
But we know that God knew what was best
When He took you to your eternal rest.
Sadly missed by your son,
THEODORE AND FAMILY.

CARD OF THANKS

WE wish to express our sincere appreciation for the kind sympathy and beautiful floral offerings of friends, neighbors and relatives, of our dear wife and mother, Gertrude E. McDonough; we wish to especially thank Rev. Sidney Stringham for his comforting words, Mr. Herbert Harvey, Mr. Howard Kessly, for the beautiful music.
MR. CLYDE, HALLETT AND HOWARD McDONOUGH.

I WISH to extend sincere thanks to relatives and friends for their kind expressions of sympathy shown at the loss of my beloved husband.
MRS. H. P. ROY NELSEN.

ANNOUNCES

The Opening of Their New Northside Branch on Palm and 23rd (S. E. Corner)

Recently we quoted—"When a thing deserves to live, it lives." And so modestly, yet proudly, we point out that not only have we LIVED, but we have GROWN proportionately. During the past we have served the public from our South Side headquarters, but the time has come when expansion is necessary. Necessary in order to insure that personalized and individual service which we have always given. It is impossible for us to BETTER serve the public because we have always maintained the highest standards in the field of Radio Sales and Service, but we do know that a branch office will facilitate a more rapid and "neighborly" service to and for you. With this convenience in mind, we are pleased to formally announce the opening of our new location at PALM and 23RD, where we will continue to offer

"Service That Satisfies"

OUR CREED

To do each task a little better than it has ever been done before.
To be prompt, courteous, and respectful in all our contacts.
To be thorough rather than hurried.
Never to be satisfied with things as we find them, ever striving to set new standards, content only with perfection.
To put our hearts as well as our minds and hands, into each job as we discharge it.

OUR SERVICE

SALESMEN WANTED

MEN—STEADY WORK

We will hire six men at once who live in St. Louis and vicinity, train them thoroughly at our factory branch at our expense, and employ them immediately in permanent positions, full time.

Married men preferred, as these positions are responsible and we require no investment or deposit—but you must be reputable and able to learn this work as taught. This is steady, profitable sales work, but our method of putting the prospect into the market for our invention is so unusual that you must be trained in it. While learning, new men must be satisfied on earnings of $35 to $45 per week, but later can increase this substantially. Previous experience not important because our method is so unusual, but applicants must be willing to work hard and study to qualify for the higher incomes. Apply Monday morning, between 9 and 12, at Room 512, Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Olive sts.

Additional Products

We need several neat appearing men not over 55 years of age, living in Metropolitan St. Louis.

A steady income assured.

We give complete training and help.

OUR ORGANIZATION MUST BE ENLARGED TO HANDLE ADDITIONAL PRODUCTS.

See C. M. Marshall, 10 a. m. Monday for interview.

SALESMEN WANTED

$50-$150 Per Week

Over a year ago, after several years of constant laboratory experiments, a former official of Standard Oil actually perfected and patented a small compact miniature oil refinery, capable of constantly refining from six to twelve quarts of oil, and as a result of its instant success and great demand for it, he is now personally devoting all of his time to one of the most phenomenally fast growing manufacturing plants in the entire country. The basic principle, even including the chemicals used is much the same as big commercial refineries, with the exception that either stationary or automotive engine heat creates the heat necessary instead of steam boilers. This project started in Los Angeles little more than a year ago, and almost without advertising, the call for these miniature refineries has jumped at such an enormous rate that more than 40 men are now required just to assemble and ship these refineries. Sales have been so great in California that today they are fast becoming common equipment on boats, stationary power plants, caterpillar tractors, big trucks, buses and passenger cars.

Now the company is ready to branch out throughout the United States just as quickly as the assembly and shipping plant and manufacturing facilities can be increased which will require two men now in St. Louis, two in Kansas City and two men to travel the State. Sale of these compact individual miniature refineries, which are fully enclosed in high pressure tamperproof steel cylinders has been phenomenal in California and very probably will be in Missouri. They are easily fitted under truck or passenger car hoods in less than two hours. It actually practically doubles the life of truck and passenger car motors, saving costly repairs and motor overhauls, oil is always in perfect condition and no changing of oil. The Luber-finer makes that unnecessary as it constantly refines motor oil, removing not only lint but acid, water, gasoline, sand, cuttings and slush. When shown, most truck fleet owners immediately want it installed on each truck, and personal cars. Sells for $15 and $20 complete. Installation cost averages $1.50 to $2.50. We believe and predict that within two years this miniature refinery will become common equipment on most pleasure cars in Missouri, due to the small cost and great saving on oil changes and motor overhaul bills. Demonstrate right in front of truck fleet owner, stationary engine owner, garage owner or passenger car owner using black worn-out oil from his own car or engine—refine it in front of him—and they buy. Every garage and truck fleet owner is an excellent prospect for from 10 to 50 refineries.

If you can handle a job of this kind, which, from past experience, we believe will pay from $50 to $150 per week, with very many repeat orders from friends of users, come see it yourself, using black worn-out oil out of your own car, or write and we will give details, including sending you circular, prices, territory, trade discounts, etc., and all information necessary for you to make up your mind whether you want to join this extraordinary fast-growing organization. Write, call or telephone. We realize that big producers must make big money, and we have a miniature refinery that we firmly believe will be on every fleet owner's trucks just as fast as fleet owners and garage men can be contacted.

TO THE WIFE OF AN UNDERPAID SALESMAN.

Are you sure that your husband cannot become an important factor in an organization which will appreciate his qualifications and assure him of a bigger, broader, and more successful business career?

Our organization may give him the basic essentials which go to make up a happy and sound working mind and thereby enlarge upon his life and the lives of those dependent upon him.

We do not mean to offer him a job or anything like it. Life does not have to give handouts to worth-while men. With the right amount of backbone and stamina he can take from one to two thousand dollars and go into an exclusive wholesale automotive products business and build it into some real cash profits.

This presents one of the best opportunities for salesmen ever presented in this country and you incur no obligation by asking about it.

I. C. Hardin, Secretary, Sales Department, Bowes "Seal-Fast" Corp., Indianapolis, Ind.

Miss Virginia Holland, daughter of Mrs. Robert Holland, was guest of honor at the largest party — a dinner dance for the debutante set —given by Miss Holland's uncles and aunts, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Stoner and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis M. Rumsey Jr. Sitting with the honor guest at her table in the private dining room were Miss Eleanor Lee Carter, Miss Katherine Cushman, Miss Alice Egan, Miss Eunice Holderness, Miss Nancy Houser, Miss Nancy Morrill, Miss Frances McPheeters, Miss Frances Moore, Miss Katharine Randolph, Miss Mildred Bakewell, Miss Maude Overall, Miss Ann Stickney, Miss Jane Scudder, Miss Anne and Miss Mary Sullivan, Miss Mary Lee Smidt, Miss Georgia Simmons, Miss Donne and Miss Elizabeth Stevens and their escorts, numbering about 80 in all.

At a smaller table the hosts and hostesses entertained 16 of their own friends, with Joseph E. Stevens of New York and Tuxedo Park, N. Y., as guest of honor. Others were Mrs. Holland; Mr. Stevens' host and hostess, Maj. and Mrs. Albert Bond Lambert, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Denvir Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Steedman, Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Edmunds, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Morrill and Dr. and Mrs. Borden S. Veeder.

Mr. Stevens is with the Lamberts for the week-end, and was honored at a dinner at their home Friday night. He will depart today for the East. He is the father of Ludlow Stevens, who married Barbara, a daughter of the late Jay Gould of New York.

Katherine Arnstein Engaged to M. D. May

MR. AND MRS. HERBERT N. ARNSTEIN, 14 Hillvale drive, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Katherine Arnstein, and Morton D. May, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morton J. May, 11 Brentmoor Park.

The bride-elect, a sophomore at Connecticut College, New London, Conn., told classmates of her engagement several days ago. She is expected in St. Louis late next month to spend the Thanksgiving holidays with her family. Mrs. Arnstein returned Friday after a visit with her daughter.

Mr. May is a graduate of Country Day School and Dartmouth College.

Louise Monheimer Becomes Bride of J. J. Benjamin Jr.

STONE arches at one end of the main lounge at Westwood Country Club, were solidly filled with white chrysanthemums and greenery to form a background for the marriage last night of Miss Louise Monheimer and Jerome J. Benjamin Jr. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis M. Monheimer of the Park Plaza, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Phillip Taxman of Chicago, who came here for the wedding.

The pair stood on an elevated platform beneath a bridal canopy of white crysanthemums, while Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman performed the ceremony at 7 o'clock. On each side of the platform large white wicker horns of plenty, reaching almost to the ceiling, spilled flowers out four feet on the white covered floor. Tall seven-branched candelabra stood between each arch, and in the corners of the room. On the south side of the lounge smilax was twined around stone arches, while on the north end it climbed over cathedral doors, built for the occasion.

The bridal party walked down an aisle made of tall white standards, from which white chrysanthemums dropped almost to the floor. More than 200 guests were seated in white-covered chairs arranged in pews on each side of the aisle, and seated, too, in the south lounge, facing the wedding setting.

The bride wore satin that changed from silver to white in different lights and shadows. Fashioned with a cowl neckline and sleeves puffed at the shoulder and elbow, it buttoned to the hips, where the skirt was gathered and full. Her long tulle veil extended beyond the circular train of the dress, and both it and her short face veil fell from a coronet of old lace, which had been used in her mother's wedding veil. A band of orange blossoms fastened the veil across the back of her head. The bride carried a shower of lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Harryett Taxman, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, and bridesmaids included Miss Emily Ackerman, Miss Suzanne Fox, Miss Edith Salomon and Miss Beryl Weisman. All were gowned in sea foam green grosgrain silk, made princesse style, with stand-up collars. Sleeves were short and puffed and skirts full. They wore matching green-off-the-face tulle bonnets with long green and gold satin ribbons falling beyond the edge of their skirts. Bridesmaids carried large bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums, and Miss Taxman's flowers were the same blossoms in white. The only difference in her costume was her hat streamers, which were of velvet in two shades of green.

Mrs. Monheimer was gowned in gold metal cloth, and Mrs. Taxman, mother of the bridegroom, wore black crepe trimmed with rhinestones. Each wore three purple orchids.

University Club Gives Halloween Dance

ON Halloween eve, last night, the University Club entertained at a dinner dance at the club, where guests came in costume, either overalls and aprons, dressed as members of the witch's coterie —or simply in old clothes.

The dining room, where guests assembled for dinner at 8 o'clock, was turned into an autumn setting with colored leaves around the windows, and cornstalks at intervals about the walls. The library of the club, on the twelfth floor, was also decorated for the evening. Dancing was in the dining room, where an orchestra at one end played during dinner and late into the night.

Austin P. Leland, Henry H. Rand and Hugh Adair Logan comprised

Special Events On Junior League Fall Program

WITHIN the next 10 days three major events on the fall program of the Junior League will be given at its clubroom, 4932 Maryland avenue. Tomorrow the opening lecture of the 1937-38 Monday morning course will be given by Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, whose topic is "The New Diplomacy." During her stay here the speaker will be the guest of Mrs. Edith Clifford Saxton, 4644 Maryland avenue. Immediately after her talk she will be entertained at luncheon at the clubrooms by Mrs. Marion Clifford Blossom.

Mrs. Rohde is the wife of Capt. Boerge Rohde of the Danish King's Guards. Material for her speeches was gathered during political campaigns with her father, William Jennings Bryan, and during her life in Denmark as the United States' first woman Ambassador to a foreign court.

Tuesday there will be a special luncheon and fashion show similar to those held the last two Tuesdays except for the display, which will be limited to furs instead of gowns. Models will include Mrs. Alanson C. Brown Jr., Miss Jane Johnson, Miss Judith Gamble and Mrs. Edward H. Miller. Miss Adelaide Mahaffey will be head waitress, in charge of the following group: Mrs. William Lee Polk, Mrs. Richard Shewmaker, Mrs. Creighton Calfee, Miss Louise McCluney, Mrs. Joseph Renard, Mrs. Arthur S. Bland Jr., Miss Lola Stinde, Mrs. William H. Armstrong, Mrs. Henry Lake Meier, Mrs. Frank Thompson, Miss Sally Bridge and Miss Jane Armistead.

The clubroom committee of the league has arranged a tea and silver exhibit for Wednesday, Nov. 17, at 3:30 o'clock. The talk, called

Miss Hester Stocker Presented at Tea Dance

A TEA dance was given last evening from 5 to 7 o'clock in the Tower Room of the Congress Hotel for the debut of Miss Hester Stocker, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Charles Stocker, 350 North Woodlawn avenue, Kirkwood. Five hundred invitations were issued to debutantes, their escorts, second year girls and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Stocker.

The debutante's gift flowers placed before a background of greenery provided the simple setting for the receiving line in the reception room just off the dance floor. Standing with Miss Stocker and her parents was Miss Jean McNeely of St. Paul, Minn., her house guest and former classmate at the Bennett School, Millbrook, N. Y. The debutante wore her Veiled Prophet ball gown of white lame embroidered in pale green and silver, made with a long full skirt and train. Across the square neckline was a spray of pale lavender orchids. Mrs. Stocker was in wine-red velvet with gardenias and Miss McNeely chose dark blue net accented by a striped sequin girdle in high colors. She wore tiny russet and white chrysanthemums as a halo.

More of the gift flowers provided the only floral decorations in the ballroom. The buffet table, at the south end of the room, was covered by a long silver cloth and had

Josephine Fusz Bows at Ball at Woman's Club

Youngest Daughter of Eugene A. Fusz Presented at Elaborate Party in Green and White Floral Setting. Several Hundred Guests.

EUGENE A. FUSZ presented his fourth daughter, Miss Josephine Desloge Fusz, to St. Louis society Friday night at a green and white ball at the St. Louis Woman's Club. Four hundred guests—debutantes of this year and last, members of the younger married set, and contemporaries of Mr. and Mrs. Fusz—were received by the host and hostess, the debutante and her three sisters.

Each room of the club was elaborately decorated in varieties of white chrysanthemums—giant, button pompon and daisy—relieved by massed smilax, huckleberry foliage and woodwardia fern. From the broad hall and stairway, hung in woodland effect with greenery, guests stepped into the sitting room to the left. The dark mantel was lightened by two large vases of white flowers, and about the room stood many more bouquets of the same blossoms. In the softly lighted and flower-trimmed drawing room, guests greeted each other informally before joining others at the receiving line or going on to the second floor ballroom.

In the pink and blue lounge the receiving party formed before the wide bow windows which were concealed by palms and ferns dotted with more than 300 blossoms. Directly across the room, columns of green and many flowers, partially shielding the fireplace, balanced the decorative scheme. A string quartet hidden among boughs of smilax in the hall played during the early evening.

Mrs. Fusz wore a black velvet gown decorated with gold about the V neck, and an orchid corsage. The debutante carried a muff of white carnations with her costume—a bouffant frock of white tulle designed with a shirred halter neck. A touch of color was provided in a wide girdle of sapphire blue sequins, which also fashioned her tiny skull cap.

Mrs. Cabell Breckinridge, her sister from Lexington, Ky., was in gold lame, embroidered at the waist in purple flowers, and with which she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of violets and white roses. Mrs. John Brownrigg, also a sister, had a black gown, the bodice of velvet and the full, long skirt of moire. Her old-fashioned bouquet was of yellow and blue flowers. The third sister, Mrs. Roy Wilcox Jordan, chose black tulle, ornamented by pink sequins and made on bouffant lines. With it she wore a wrist bouquet of pink camellias.

Decorations reached their high note in the ballroom. Standards and vases of pompon and daisy chrysanthemums were combined with the larger blossoms around the specially constructed orchestra stand on which a 15-piece orchestra played. Gold mirrors, which set the formal character of the room, were outlined by branches of smilax and centered by large wall pockets of white flowers. A green-covered platform beneath one of these mirrows was provided for the stag line.

At midnight supper was served in the white-carpeted Colonial dining room. Across the south end stretched a long white table lavishly decorated with garlands of smilax and flowers and illuminated by candles in silver holders. A floral background duplicated that in the ballroom. Food was served to small tables set up around the edge of the room, and to informal groups in the halls.

Formality was forgotten after supper, and amateurs sang to music played by a strolling accordionist, or returned to the ballroom to take part in a big apple dance called by Joseph Thatcher. A guest conductor from Chicago alternated with Jimmy Downey in leading the orchestra in almost continuous dance music.

Out-of-town guests here for the party include Mrs. Breckinridge's husband, his brother, Ethelbert L. Breckinridge, and their cousin, John Bayne Breckinridge. Also from Lexington are Miss Elizabeth Zimmer, who has visited Miss Fusz before, and her brother, Charles.

Miss Fusc, who lives with Mr. and Mrs. Fusz at 6925 Delmar boulevard, is a graduate of John Burroughs School. Year before last she attended Trinity College in Washington and last spring traveled in Europe and was in England at coronation time.

She is the niece of Mrs. Thomas Hudson Thatcher, Mrs. Marie Reine Fusz de Penaloza and Miss Nancy Ring.

The debutante will be honored at other affairs during the season, including a box party at the Thanksgiving football game between Washington and St. Louis universities at which Miss Ring will be hostess. Mr. and Mrs. Jordan are planning a dinner later in the winter.

'The Circle' Starts Fall Activities Of Little Theater

FALL activities of the Little Theater of St. Louis, 812 North Union boulevard, began last week with the opening performance of "The Circle," by Somerset Maugham. The week also marked the close of the annual subscription campaign.

At the final campaign meeting Tuesday night, paintings donated by Fred E. Conway, Gustav Goetsch, Miss Martha Hoke, Bernard Peters and Charles F. Quest, were awarded to Mrs. Fred Litschel, Mrs. Harry Gleick, Miss Aurelia Sullivan, Miss Anne Friedman and Mrs. William Hammond as prizes for campaign work. A special award went to Miss Charity Grace, whose division brought in the most subscriptions. Mrs. Fred Carpenter was campaign chairman, and other division chairmen were Mrs. Samuel P. Goddard, Mrs. G. Alex Hope, Mrs. Scott MacNutt and Mrs. Clark McAdams.

After the opening performance of "The Circle" Thursday night, the Players Club, of which Ralph B. Campbell is president, gave a buffet supper in the crypt of the Artists' Guild for its members and their guests. Last night, before the performance, the Guild gave a crypt dinner. Special Fall Events For Junior League

"The Romance of Silver," is to be given by Miss E. Alberta Brenner of New York. It deals with the origin of motifs and designs, and will be illustrated by pieces from a display table. A set of Apostle spoons will also be shown, as will a museum piece, "The Unfinished Masterpiece." The tea and lecture are open to the public.

An exhibition of portraits by Fritz Werner, Viennese painter, will continue through Thursday, with Mrs. Henry Pflager and Mrs. Vadim Smirnoff in charge.

Two delegates of the local league will depart tomorrow for Milwaukee to attend the third technical conference on welfare conducted by the Association of Junior Leagues. The St. Louisans, Mrs. Francis M. Hufman of Litzsinger road, and Miss Louise Goddard, 21 Brentmoor Park, will be guests at the home of Mrs. Robert P. McCulloch, sister-in-law of Mrs. Whipple Van Ness Jones. The sessions open tomorrow and last through Friday.

These technical conferences, devoted alternately to welfare and the children's theater, are designed to provide professional guidance and technical information on various phases of work interesting to the delegates. The St. Louisans have been instructed to attend certain lectures and field trips, selected because of their relation to the League's local program, and on their return are to make reports.

Delegates from 145 Junior Leagues in the United States, Hawaii, Canada and Mexico will attend. The 300 delegates and members of the A. J. L. A. board of directors and professional staff in attendance will be guests of Milwaukee Junior League members and their friends.

The program will consist of a "Study of Public Welfare." The layman's responsibility toward maintainance of high standards in the community's public welfare work will be stressed by the speakers, according to Mrs. DeForst Van Slyck, executive secretary of the association.

Some of the speakers at the meetings will include Fred Hoehler, executive director of the American Public Welfare Association; Frank Bane, executive secretary of the Social Security Board; Miss Dorothy Kahn, executive director of the Philadelphia County Relief Board and a former president of the American Association of Social Workers; Fred Goldstone, executive secretary, Milwaukee Community Fund and Council of Social Agencies; Mrs. Chester Bowles, chairman, Welfare Committee, A. J. L. A., and Mrs. Harper Sibley, member of the New York Junior League.

Other features of the convention include a field trip to the Milwaukee Family Court, which studies family problems and has as its goal their conciliation and adjustment. Demonstration of the Puppet Theater as a new technique in therapeutic work with children will also be held. A second field trip will be made to the Milwaukee Vocational School and one afternoon will be devoted to a field trip and group meeting on "Occupational and Physio-Therapy," concerning the Junior League Curative Workshop. A meeting on "Community Organization" with a field trip to the Milwaukee Community Fund and Council of Social Agencies and two meetings and field trips on "Child Care" are also included.

Miss Virginia Howlett, secretary of the welfare department, will give a summation of the conference at the Friday morning meeting.

the entertainment committee, and were in charge of the party.

Among those who made reservations for the evening were Adolph B. Hill Jr., John Gordon, Joseph W. Folk, H. A. Baker, T. A. Standish Jr., Mr. Leland, Edward E. Haverstick Jr., Thomas B. Curtis and L. J. Holland.

Tonight the Suckers, an organization of young men who annually give a Halloween party, will entertain a group of the debutantes at a costume party at the Dean Sisters, Clayton and Lindbergh boulevard.

The orange and black invitation reveals the following details: "Their Royal Highnesses, the soon-forgotten Suckers, would not mind if you come to the Dean Sisters, Oct. 31 from 8:30 o'clock to Nov. 1." Debutantes sent their replies to The Suckers, 41 Washington terrace, which is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Blumeyer.

The following served: Miss Genevieve Mullins, Miss Dorothy Ann Mummert, Miss Elizabeth Hoerr, Miss Louise Steffens, Miss Alice Jane Meyer, Miss Sara Jane Avant, Miss Anne Reinholdt, debutantes; Miss Mary Virginia Stocker, sister of the honor guest, Miss Marjorie Morriss, Miss Sally Avery and Miss Margaret Thrower.

Older guests chatted on the balcony as they watched the dancing.

In addition to Miss McNeely, John Creigh of Highland Park, Ill., and James Johnson of St. Paul, were here for the party.

The debutante, after being graduated from Mary Institute, attended the Bennett Schol for two years, finishing last June.

After the tea dance Miss Mullins entertained Miss Stocker, Miss McNeely and a small group of friends at dinner at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Vester Mullins, 8045 Park drive, Hampton Park.

Mummers to Enroll Associate Members

INVITATIONS have been issued by the Mummers of St. Louis for the first of a series of reviews of current plays. The first program will be Thursday evening at the Mummer Studio, 4477 Olive street. Attendance is limited to persons who will form an associate membership, which is open to those interested in the current theater but do not have time for the complete Mummer program.

Willard H. Holland, director, will be in charge of the program Thursday and will review "Room Service" and "You Can't Take It With You." The second program, Nov. 18, will consist of reviews of "High Tor," which the Mummers will produce this season, and "Brother Rat."

Wellesley Head To Visit Here Nov. 15

MISS MILDRED E. McAFEE, now in her second year as president of Wellesley College, will be in St. Louis Nov. 15 and 16 on a tour of cities in which Wellesley Clubs are maintained. Monday, Nov. 15 she will speak briefly at Soldan High School and at Monticello College in Godfrey, Ill. At luncheon that day she will be the guest of Miss Eunice Smith at her home in Alton.

Monday night the Wellesley Club of St. Louis will give a formal dinner at Hotel Chase at 7 o'clock, after which Miss McAfee will speak on "The Modern College in the Modern World." Others on the program will be Mrs. Eugene Ross McCarthy, Vassar College representative; Dr. Robert J. Crossen, representing Oberlin College, and John B. Edwards. Mrs. Otway W. Rash III, president of the local club will preside. The dinner is open to those interested, and especially to college alumnae. Mrs. John B. Edwards is in charge of reservations.

Mrs. Rash is in cahrge of the dinner, with the following assistants: Miss Geneva Crumb, Mrs. Edwards, Miss Charlotte Gerhard, Mrs. Eugene Hecker, Mrs. Ernest Houx, Mrs. Clarence H. Howard Jr., Mrs. John A Lange, Mrs. Hartley Pollock Jr., Mrs. Norman B. Pitcairn, Mrs. Edith Clifford Saxton, Mrs. Edward K. Sanders, Dr. Abigail Smith, Mrs. Harry E. Sprague and Miss Eunice Smith.

Tuesday, Nov. 16, Miss McAfee will speak at Mary Institute and John Burroughs Schools. At 12:30 o'clock Mrs. Robert Crossen, a Wellesley classmate of the guest of honor, will give a "1920 luncheon for a 1920 president," at her home in Fair Oaks. Assisting hostesses, also classmates, will be Mrs. John Meston Holmes, Mrs. Clarence Howard, Miss Margaret Nettleship, Mrs. Lloyd L. Tower and Miss Edith Williams.

Tuesday afternoon the Wellesley College acquaintanceship committee will give a tea at the home of Mrs. Abraham Friedman, 6459 Wydown boulevard, for prospective students interested in Wellesley and their mothers. Guests are invited from 4 to 6. Miss Helen Koch, chairman of the committee, is in charge of the team. Assisting her will be Miss Marian Comfort, Miss Julia Randall, Mrs. Dalton K. Rose, Mrs. James A. Singmaster Jr., Miss Jane Stare, Miss Dorothy Stevens and Mrs. Sidney E. Sweet.

Lucie Fitz-William Becomes Bride of Bernard W. Nordmann

MISS LUCIE DELOR FITZ-WILLIAM, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Raoul Fitz-William, 3817 Castleman avenue, became the bride yesterday morning of Bernard William Nordmann. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. T. V. O'Reilly before the flower-banked chancel of St. Margaret's Church. Later a breakfast was served at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Robert E. M. Bain, 3801 Flora place, where Mr. and Mrs. Fitz-William were married.

Daisy chrysanthemums arranged in vases decorated the altar, on which white candles burned, and were interspersed in greenery in the chancel.

The bride was preceded by her cousin, Miss Barbara Furstenberg, as maid of honor, and by another cousin, Miss Lucie Furstenberg, and the bridegroom's sisters, Miss Mary, Miss Catherine and Miss Margaret Nordmann, as bridesmaids. The maid of honor wore bronze and the bridesmaids were in peach, made alike of moire and worn with gold ornaments, the gifts of the bride. Golden brown ribbon trimming the bodices matched their tulle-crowned velvet bonnets. They carried chrysanthemums in the fall shades.

Mr. Fitz-William escorted the bride to the altar. She wore white satin, designed with a soft round collar caught in front with a pearl pin, and buttoned to the waist in back with tiny satin-covered buttons. A tulle veil fell from a coronet of orange blossoms over her long satin train. Her flowers were gardenias and lilies of the valley.

The bridegroom, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard H. Nordmann, 3641 Flora place, was attended by his brother, William, as best man. Groomsmen were Howard Elting, Charles Fitz-William, Charles Picek of Lawton, Ok., and Alfred Banfield.

Mrs. Bain's home was decorated with sprays of bittersweet and white flowers for the breakfast. Easter lilies stood between lighted white candles on the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Nordmann have gone to California on their wedding trip, and will live at 4200 Watson road.

The bride is a graduate of the Academy of the Sacred Heart. Her husband attended St. Louis University, and is now associated with his father in the publication of neighborhood newspapers with South St. Louis circulation.

grandmother, Mrs. D. G. Braham of the Park Plaza, had his brother, David Braham Benjamin, as best man. Groomsmen were Theodore R. Samuels Jr., Richard Rosenthal, Morris Glaser and Richard Tuholske, while ushers included Hugo Marx Jr. of Birmingham, Ala., Arthur Schleffinger Jr. of Detroit, Louis Rothschild Jr., Harry B. Vogt Jr. and Fred Z. Salomon Jr.

After the wedding the bridal party and parents of the bride and bridegroom received guests in the bay-window inclosure of the ladies' lounge, which was banked with white chrysanthemum and greenery. Later a dinner was served in the dining room, where the west end was screened with a wall of smilax.

The bridal table, made with four long wings, was mounted on a platform in the middle of the room. As a centerpiece was a huge arrangement of lilies-of-the-valley, gardenias, sweetheart roses and bouvardia, built high and topped by two life-sized doves. Silver candelabra flanked the floral arrangment, and 12 others were used on the wings of the table, At intervals were placed silver cornucopias filled with lilies-of-the-valley and bouvardia. Near the bridal party, close relatives and members of the immediate families were seated at a large oval table, and at each end of the dining room was arranged a long crescent-shaped table. Other guests were seated throughout the room. Fall flowers decorated these tables.

After dinner, rooms were cleared for dancing and a long bar was set up.

Mr. Benjamin and his bride have left for a month's wedding trip to California, and on their return will live at 7545 Wellington Way.

ST. LOUIS - CHICAGO

Why not make your trip a party? It will be, on the Banner Blue! This famous train is a thing of exquisite beauty. Blue and gold outside; inside, a picture of luxury and comfort. Done in blue-green and cream, gray and rust, and pointed up with touch of dull chromium in the modern manner.

Here's the new parlor-lounge car . . . decorated and furnished, curtained and carpeted as a spacious living room.

Pull up those cushioned chairs into an intimate group around a table. The hours fly as you chat, or play bridge. Here comes the steward with the tea tray. One lump? Two? Lemon or cream? It's with the compliments of the Wabash, of course.

If you're plunging straight from the train into Chicago's gaieties, dine aboard. The dining car is quite as gracious as the lounge cars. Venetian blinds . . . the glisten of silver and damask . . . and the food? Everyone knows the Wabash tradition of perfect food, perfectly served!

ST. CHARLES ITEMS

HONORING Miss Mildred Clarke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen W. Clarke, Mrs. George E. Hestwood entertained at her country home, south of the city, with a tea and shower party at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Miss Clarke is to be the bride of Richard O. Denning, the wedding to be at the Jefferson Street Presbyterian Church at 4 o'clock next Saturday afternoon.

Miss Clarke also was honored at a dinner party, given for her intimate friends by Miss Florence Schnedler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Schnedler, at their home, 228 McDonough street, on Sunday evening, Oct. 24. There was a personal shower for the honoree.

Miss Vera Stoehner is to be another bride of the late fall season. She announced her engagement at a meeting of her two-table bridge club on the evening of Oct. 21 but withheld the date of marriage. She is to be married to Dr. L. E. Dudeck, 303 Clay street.

Miss Stoehner is the daughter of Mrs. Anna Stoehner, 612 South Second street. She is a graduate of St. Charles High School and is employed in St. Louis. Dr. Dudeck came here from St. Louis about six years ago and is established as a chiropractor.

A large group attended the benefit supper party given by the St. Charles chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution at the home of Mrs. Francis C. Becker, 1712 Watson street, from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The benefit was in behalf of the School of the Ozarks, which the local group have for several years assisted. The supper was under the direction of Mrs. Jonathan E. Clarke. On her various committees were: Mrs. C. C. Brown, serving; Mrs. Erich Schulz, menu; Mrs. Earl Gray, decorations; Mrs. T. B. Craighead, tickets; Mrs. Jo Clanton, white elephant sale.

The home was decorated with red and yellow chrysanthemums, autumn leaves and branches of the wahoo shrub. As dusk approached pumpkin jack-o-lanterns were lit. Young girls, daughters and nieces of the members, assisted in serving.

Members of the chapter concluded their evening by attending the closing feature of the Lindenwood College Founders' day program, renditions by Elda Vittori, soprano in Roemer Hall.

Hallowe'en was observed in St. Charles with many small parties. At the St. Charles Country Club there was a dance late last evening, with about 70 couples attending. Many entertained out-of-the-city guests for the occasion, with informal cocktail parties preceding. The dance floor of the country club was decorated with pumpkins, black cat and other Hallowe'en motifs. Baskets of chrysanthemums and bright leaves flanked the long mantel and were placed around the room. The guests arrived in costume and wore masks. A special dance preceding the unmasking, with prizes offered for costumes.

The St. Charles High School annual Hallowe'en party last night was an important event in the social calendar of that group of young people. The party was chaperoned by the faculty and was in costume. Hallowe'en games were played in the early evening, and dancing followed. The auditorium was gay with the orange and black crepe decorations befitting the season.

Mrs. William Waye Jr., 1620 Watson street, has sent out invitations for a luncheon and card party at 1 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hackman will entertain their bridge club, composed of 12 members, at buffet supper at 702 Jefferson street, at 7 o'clock on Wednesday evening.

Lindenwood College took part in a Hallowe'en dance, under auspices of the Y. W. C. A., of which Dr. Mary Terhune is sponsor, in Butler Hall gymnasium last night.

Leading the procession that formally opened the evening was the Hallowe'en queen, Miss Mary Jean Duhadway of Jerseyville, Ill. She was followed by her special maids of honor, Miss Johnny Lou Brown of Okmulgee, Ok., and Miss Imogene Stroh of Washington, and by others of her court of honor, composed of those girls taking part in the Freshman Style Show, who follow: Miss Joy Beranek, Miss Rosemary Miller, Miss Jeanne Considine, Miss Betty Augar, Miss Mary Ann Cox, Miss Jane Raber, Miss Vivian Patterson, Miss Jane Austin, Miss Elizabeth Johnston, Miss Martha Denious, Miss Lenore Stuart and Miss Ann Beard. When the queen reached the throne, she was crowned and the dance began. The gymnasium was transformed into the Hallowe'en spirit by use of cutouts of witches, black cats and pumpkins. Corn shocks were placed in corners, and everywhere the orange and black was used.

Among their escorts, 20 came from Kemper Military Academy at Boonville, Mo. On Saturday evening, Oct. 23, a group of 20 went from Lindenwood College to attend the opening fall dance at Kemper, held in Johnston Field House in Boonville.

The St. Charles Exchange Club held a dinner party at the Hotel St. Charles Thursday evening for 80 guests, composed of their wives, former members and friends of members. The Exchange, Rotary and Kiwanis clubs are sponsoring an inspection and fire prevention survey by State authorities on Dec. 3 and 4 for the entire city.

A group of 18 Lindenwood College representatives and their wives were here this week to form State clubs among the students of the college and to attend Founder's day exercises held Thursday. The visitors were Mr. and Mrs. F. G. McMurray, Oklahoma City, Ok.; Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Branstetter, Des Moines, Ia.; Mr. and Mrs. Glen Park, Kansas City, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. Carey Motley, Liberty, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Colson, Kirkwood, Mo.; Robert Dunlap, Chicago; James Lewis, Indianapolis, Ind.; Kieth Coverdale, Long Beach, Cal., and Miss Alma Hickman, Joplin, Mo.

Celebrating the approaching wedding of Miss Ruby Griffin and Elmer Hollander, which will be Nov. 16, Miss Hazel Tally entertained for 16 guests with a miscellaneous shower at her home, 406 North Third street.

Miss Griffin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Griffin of 307 North Fifth street. She is a graduate of St. Charles High School and employed here. The marriage will take place at the St. Peter's Catholic Church.

Miss Kurusz Wed to Dr. R. W. Osterkamp

THE marriage of Miss Lucille M. Kurusz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kurusz, 5322 Lansdowne avenue, and Dr. Roy W. Osterkamp took place Saturday night, Oct. 23, at 7:30 o'clock at Memorial Presbyterian Church. About 150 guests attended. Dr. Osterkamp is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Osterkamp, 4125 Holly Hills boulevard.

The bride was gowned in white slipper satin, made with long tight sleeves. White tulle edged the cuffs and also the square neckline. Her long tulle veil fell from a coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried orchids and lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Susan Hammel, Miss Loretto Navy and Miss Almira Kurusz were bridesmaids. They wore flesh-colored satin, made with square necklines, puffed sleeves and full skirts. They carried yellow chrysanthemums. Mrs. J. A. Voracek of Alton, matron of honor, wore a similar gown in nice green satin. Her flowers were dark red chrysanthemums.

Dr. Richard Wunderlich was best man and the groomsmen were John A. Voracek, Bernard Gutman and Henry Kurusz Jr. Harry Decker, Herbert Mudd Jr., Robert Guenther and Oliver Sandvoss were ushers.

Mrs. Kurusz, the bride's mother, chose cardinal velvet for her gown, and Mrs. Osterkamp, mother of the bridegroom, was in peach velvet. Both wore gardenias.

IVE AND REDEEM EAGLE STAMPS

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA WOMEN'S SUNDAY MAGAZINE RADIO

PART SIX ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 31, 1937. PAGES 1—10H

THIS NEW YORK

By LUCIUS BEEBE

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.

THE young man from Maine who within the fortnight contrived the murder of two persons in his career of "getting to be a big shot around those New York roof gardens" was only an emphatic and spectacular example of a vast number of youths who annually invade Manhattan, charged with an urgent compulsion to become known by waiter captains and flattered by Broadway paragraphers. With no social or economic warrant and with only their varying degrees of personableness and a ready-made dinner jacket, an astonishing number of bright lads manage to impress themselves on the Manhattan scene for a season or so through the sheer desperation of their endeavors to be somebody. Their ultimate ambition is to be seen at first nights with a dubious celebrity in slightly frayed ermine and to learn the name of two brands of champagne with which to try and impress the wine steward at Morocco, and, to achieve a shabby notoriety in the New York scene, they will forge, steal, swindle and four-flush beyond all measure of belief.

—o—o—

THE YOUNG MAN FROM MAINE, who went in for murder, was more extravagant in his gestures than most of them, but there is hardly any limit to what unknown lads from outland places will do in order to keep up an opera-hat front. Folk conversant with the night-club half-world are at the moment fascinated by the career through the plushier parlors of a bright young pickpocket who stems from a bellhop's job in a Los Angeles bagnio. Fortified by a brazen nerve and the loot from half a dozen week-ends in the country homes of unsuspecting California rich folk, he has fobbed himself off on a few of New York's glitter folk long enough to borrow money from each of them and, the town being what it is, can still find a victim type here and there to take him to the Stork and foot his hotel bills when the management puts the lock-out key in his door. And there are dozens like him. It used to be the girls who were ruined by contact with the sinful ways of the big city; now it's the boys.

—o—o—

Gertrude Lawrence is telling the story about the time she and Noel Coward went into a slightly frayed pub in London where the management was unaccustomed to the presence of celebrities. There was a great stir and bustle, and at length the manager himself, complete in slicked hair, waxed mustaches and Bow Bells accent, served their highballs. He poured their Scotch with a great flourish, and presently poised a seltzer syphon above Coward's glass and inquired, "And may I do the amiable?"

—o—o—

● IN A CITY WHERE there are already just three times as many taxicabs as the population requires (as was proved during the taxi strike, when one-third of the town's hacks adequately served every need), there has been evolved a new racket to snare the gullible. A municipal ordinance allows a charge of 50 cents for the carriage of a trunk, whether inside or on the driver's seat, and now drivers are claiming that anything over the size of a brief case is a trunk, and most victims prefer paying the four bits to participating in a street scene and calling a gendarme. It's a company racket rather than a driver's graft, as most pilots ring the fare up on their meter. And don't think you get a reputable hack just because you pick it up at Grand Central Terminal. The New York Central has no control over the cab rank there, and any cruising crate can drive in that gets past the officer at Forty-fourth and Madison.

Time was when reporters weren't news, but now that Margaret Case Harriman has eviscerated Maury Paul in "The New Yorker," nobody is safe . . . None of the town's fun soup parlors, not even the French Casino, which sends apes and canaries to the Broadway reporters for souvenirs, gets out more luxurious publicity than Carl Erbe, of Marden's Riviera . . . It's so complete that columnists don't have to go there in person to cover the show, which saves the house the price of their champagne . . . The finest dining-car wine list in the country is on the New Haven's Yankee Clipper and Merchant's Limited, and was made up by Charlie Codman, of Pierce's, in Boston.

—o—o—

● MADEIRA HOUSE, run by Fred Billingsley, brother of Sherman, is the only oasis that keeps a night news ticker working for the edification of patrons . . . "Life" magazine has already caught on to the existence of what Maury Paul calls cafe society and ran a picture spread on Morocco . . . Clifton Webb is suffering from a curious fixation that he will be robbed and is steering clear of night spots and old acquaintances as a result . . . The museum show at the moment is the exhibit at the Museum of the City of New York of Vandamm's theatrical photographs . . . The most eye-popping bracelet watch along the boulevards used to belong to Al de Liagre, the producer . . . Now Ed Fitzgerald, of W O R, has lapped him with a ruby and green gold fob my Marcus. . . . It's wedge-shaped, about as big as a small hatchet and set him back a cool $1850.

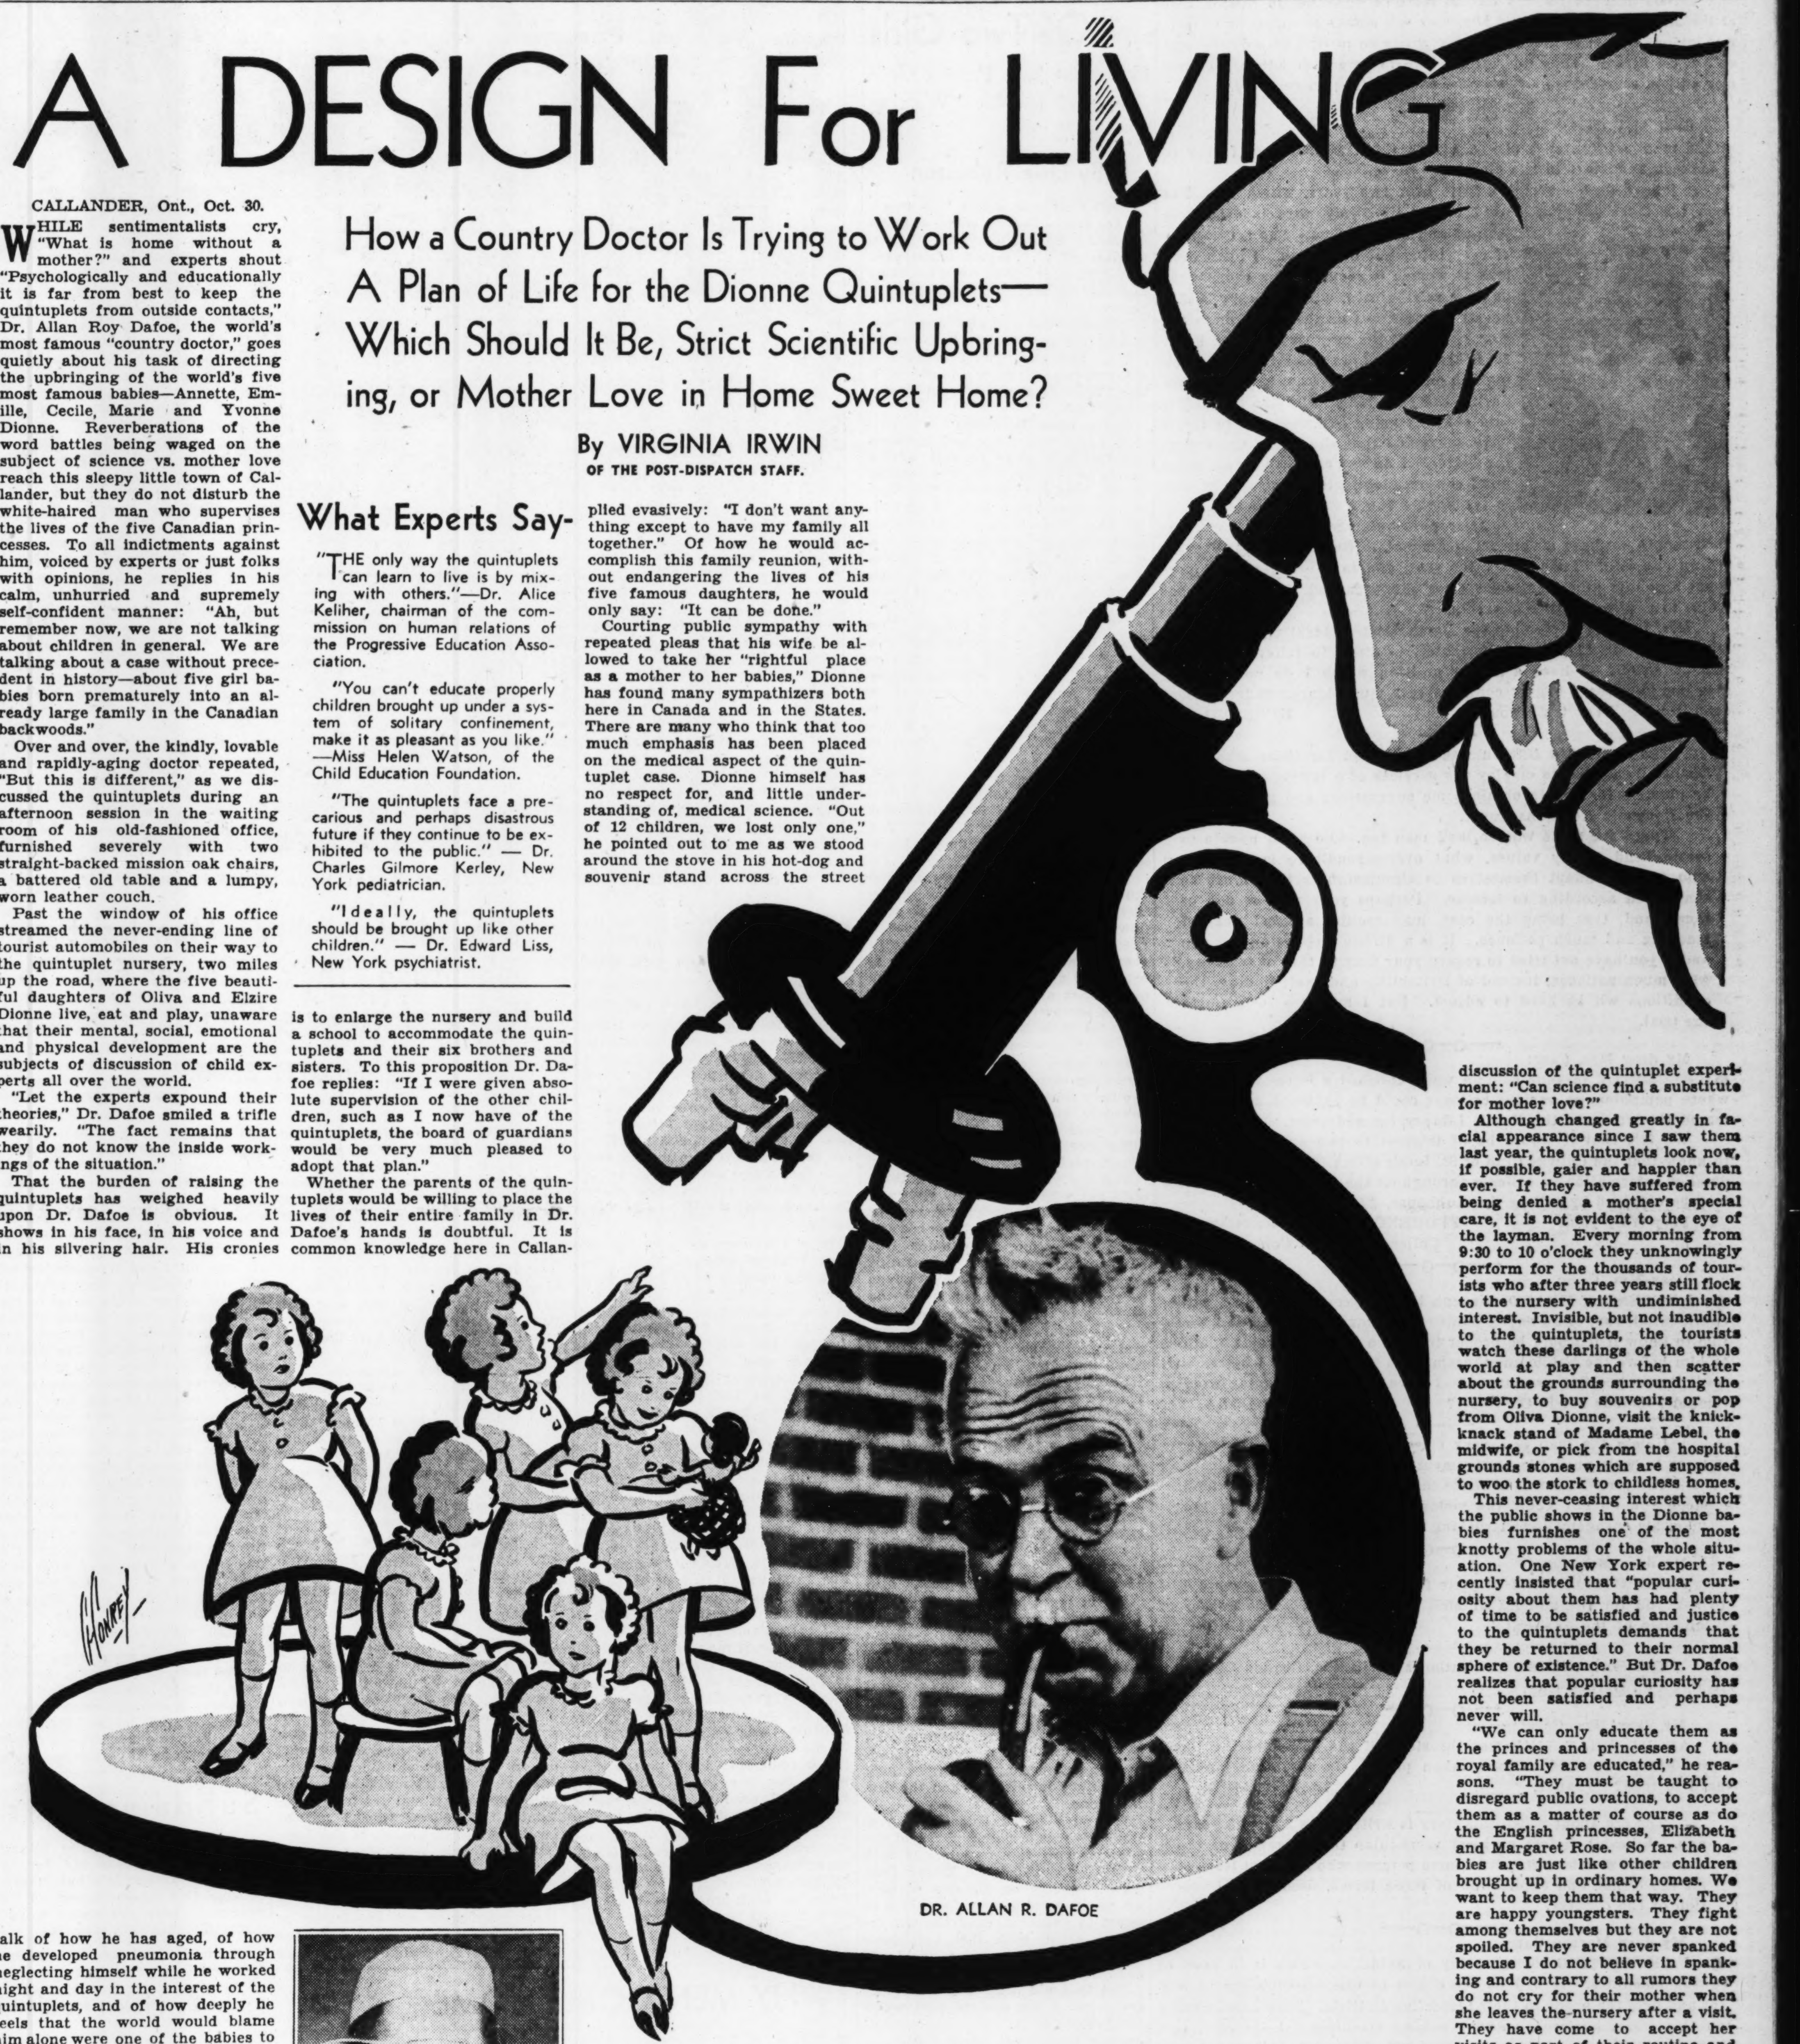
IN THE BRISK REVIVAL of Gene Fowler's anecdotes incidental to the publication of any book by The Old Master, and especially amidst the current blizzard of legends attendant upon the wonderful saga of Captain Trolley ("You're all scoundrels of the first water, damme!"), in "Salute to Yesterday," our favorite remains the epic incident of Fowler and Arthur Brisbane. It was when Fowler was on the city desk of "The American," and Brisbane, while hurrying between engagements, was accustomed to dictate his daily column into a gramophone arrangement which had been built into his car. Detecting the great man's auto, with chauffeur missing, outside "The American" office one afternoon, Fowler jumped into the tonneau, pocketed the disk then on the machine, and dictated a column that was a howling but not fantastic parody of the Brisbane style. It was full of apes, flying airplanes and the other favorite visions of Hearst's editorial seer, and, at first scanning, was in the best Brisbane manner. In due time it was transcribed, set in type for the next day's front page and a proof sent to Fowler, on the night desk. He called up Brisbane in great agitation and said, "Boss, there seems to be just a little something phoney about your tomorrow's copy. I thought I ougt to read it to you to be sure it is all O K. It just seems to lack the master touch!" Brisbane was aghast at what had been set up under his byline and warmly commended Fowler for detecting the hoax, which would have made no end of a goat of him if it had appeared. He went to his grave without knowing how Fowler caught on to the canard.

A DESIGN For LIVING

How a Country Doctor Is Trying to Work Out A Plan of Life for the Dionne Quintuplets—Which Should It Be, Strict Scientific Upbringing, or Mother Love in Home Sweet Home?

By VIRGINIA IRWIN

OF THE POST-DISPATCH STAFF.



DR. ALLAN R. DAFOE

What Experts Say-

"THE only way the quintuplets can learn to live is by mixing with others."—Dr. Alice Keliher, chairman of the commission on human relations of the Progressive Education Association.

"You can't educate properly children brought up under a system of solitary confinement, make it as pleasant as you like." —Miss Helen Watson, of the Child Education Foundation.

"The quintuplets face a precarious and perhaps disastrous future if they continue to be exhibited to the public." — Dr. Charles Gilmore Kerley, New York pediatrician.

"Ideally, the quintuplets should be brought up like other children." — Dr. Edward Liss, New York psychiatrist.

CALLANDER, Ont., Oct. 30.

WHILE sentimentalists cry, "What is home without a mother?" and experts shout "Psychologically and educationally it is far from best to keep the quintuplets from outside contacts," Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the world's most famous "country doctor," goes quietly about his task of directing the upbringing of the world's five most famous babies—Annette, Emille, Cecile, Marie and Yvonne Dionne. Reverberations of the word battles being waged on the subject of science vs. mother love reach this sleepy little town of Callander, but they do not disturb the white-haired man who supervises the lives of the five Canadian princesses. To all indictments against him, voiced by experts or just folks with opinions, he replies in his calm, unhurried and supremely self-confident manner: "Ah, but remember now, we are not talking about children in general. We are talking about a case without precedent in history—about five girl babies born prematurely into an already large family in the Canadian backwoods."

Over and over, the kindly, lovable and rapidly-aging doctor repeated, "But this is different," as we discussed the quintuplets during an afternoon session in the waiting room of his old-fashioned office, furnished severely with two straight-backed mission oak chairs, a battered old table and a lumpy, worn leather couch.

Past the window of his office streamed the never-ending line of tourist automobiles on their way to the quintuplet nursery, two miles up the road, where the five beautiful daughters of Oliva and Elzire Dionne live, eat and play, unaware that their mental, social, emotional and physical development are the subjects of discussion of child experts all over the world.

"Let the experts expound their theories," Dr. Dafoe smiled a trifle wearily. "The fact remains that they do not know the inside workings of the situation."

That the burden of raising the quintuplets has weighed heavily upon Dr. Dafoe is obvious. It shows in his face, in his voice and in his silvering hair. His cronies talk of how he has aged, of how he developed pneumonia through neglecting himself while he worked night and day in the interest of the quintuplets, and of how deeply he feels that the world would blame him alone were one of the babies to die.

And right now, Dr. Dafoe is faced with one of the biggest problems with which he has had to cope since he shouldered the responsibility of keeping alive those five premature babies born in a backwoods shack on May 28, 1934. The quintuplets must soon have contacts with other children. Dr. Dafoe realizes and admits this fact, which simple as it sounds, presents almost baffling complications.

"The babies are all right now, but they are not ready for a rough-and-tumble life," he explained. "They must be brought into contact with other children soon—but in the nursery. Removed from the nursery, they would have little chance. The thing that the public does not realize is that premature babies vary in hundreds of ways, physically and mentally, from ordinary children. They must play with other children soon, but whether their playmates will be the other children of their family or youngsters hand-picked to meet the situation, has not been decided."

There are many who feel that the only logical solution of the situation is to enlarge the nursery and build a school to accommodate the quintuplets and their six brothers and sisters. To this proposition Dr. Dafoe replies: "If I were given absolute supervision of the other children, such as I now have of the quintuplets, the board of guardians would be very much pleased to adopt that plan."

OLIVA DIONNE . . . "WANTS HIS FAMILY ALL TOGETHER."

Whether the parents of the quintuplets would be willing to place the lives of their entire family in Dr. Dafoe's hands is doubtful. It is common knowledge here in Callander that relations between the family and Dr. Dafoe have been strained almost from the start of the quintuplet experiment. Oliva Dionne, father of the babies, is uncommunicative on the subject. To my question of whether he would agree to placing his other children in the quintuplet nursery, he replied evasively: "I don't want anything except to have my family all together." Of how he would accomplish this family reunion, without endangering the lives of his five famous daughters, he would only say: "It can be done."

Courting public sympathy with repeated pleas that his wife be allowed to take her "rightful place as a mother to her babies," Dionne has found many sympathizers both here in Canada and in the States. There are many who think that too much emphasis has been placed on the medical aspect of the quintuplet case. Dionne himself has no respect for, and little understanding of, medical science. "Out of 12 children, we lost only one," he pointed out to me as we stood around the stove in his hot-dog and souvenir stand across the street from the nursery. "That baby died of pneumonia. It could happen to anyone." His inference was, of course, that he and his wife could have reared the quintuplets themselves without the help of Dr. Dafoe or a board of guardians.

The opinions of Dionne and his sympathizers have little effect upon the doctor.

"I have thought only of the welfare of the quintuplets," he insists. "Everything that has been done was done with but one thought in mind—is this the best thing to do, taken in every possible light, for their interests? If there is blame to be taken, I am willing to take it. If I am to have the responsibility, I must have absolute authority. When I set up the nursery, I took what seemed to me to be the best features from various nurseries all over the United States and Canada. I have followed no dictates but my own reasoning. Everybody is willing to take credit for having a hand in the success of this experiment, but nobody is willing to take any of the responsibility. This job has been imposed on me by Parliament and I am willing to take blame along with fame."

While United States and Canadian experts condemn or commend Dr. Dafoe's methods, and while the Dionne parents grumble about their daughters "being kept like monkeys in a cage," the five little girls, around whom the battle rages, live like princesses in their scientifically perfect nursery. Cared for by two carefully selected nurses, waited upon by three domestics, taught by their own teacher and guarded by three policemen, Annette, Emilie, Cecile, Marie and Yvonne live their scientifically-ordered existence.

At 6:30 a. m. they are awakened, and after saying their morning prayers, are given orange juice and cod-liver oil. Then they are bathed and dressed and given breakfast. This part of the day's routine consumes some three hours and at 9:30 the five famous youngsters are ready for outdoor play in their de luxe playground where they can be watched by the tourists. At 10 they return to their glass-enclosed nursery for songs, stories, and partially directed play with blocks, paint brushes, and toys. There is then a short rest on rugs spread on the nursery floor, faces and hands are washed and the quintuplets sit down to their noonday meal.

In the afternoon, there are outdoor naps, more outdoor play, a mid-afternoon snack of fruit and milk and baths again. Before supper there are quiet games, songs and rhythms, designed to calm little nerves excited by a hard day. Then comes supper, more face and hand washing, evening prayers and at 6:30 the world's most famous babies are put to bed, for the 12 hours sleep that keeps their eyes shining and their bodies sturdy.

Surrounded by barbed wire fencing and guarded heavily every minute of the day and night, the quintuplet nursery is equipped with furniture and playthings built to quintuplet size. Heating, air-conditioning and sanitation devices are the most modern science can offer and out of this most elaborate of laboratories for child training may come knowledge that will settle the question now paramount in any discussion of the quintuplet experiment: "Can science find a substitute for mother love?"

Although changed greatly in facial appearance since I saw them last year, the quintuplets look now, if possible, gaier and happier than ever. If they have suffered from being denied a mother's special care, it is not evident to the eye of the layman. Every morning from 9:30 to 10 o'clock they unknowingly perform for the thousands of tourists who after three years still flock to the nursery with undiminished interest. Invisible, but not inaudible to the quintuplets, the tourists watch these darlings of the whole world at play and then scatter about the grounds surrounding the nursery, to buy souvenirs or pop from Oliva Dionne, visit the knick-knack stand of Madame Lebel, the midwife, or pick from the hospital grounds stones which are supposed to woo the stork to childless homes.

This never-ceasing interest which the public shows in the Dionne babies furnishes one of the most knotty problems of the whole situation. One New York expert recently insisted that "popular curiosity about them has had plenty of time to be satisfied and justice to the quintuplets demands that they be returned to their normal sphere of existence." But Dr. Dafoe realizes that popular curiosity has not been satisfied and perhaps never will.

"We can only educate them as the princes and princesses of the royal family are educated," he reasons. "They must be taught to disregard public ovations, to accept them as a matter of course as do the English princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose. So far the babies are just like other children brought up in ordinary homes. We want to keep them that way. They are happy youngsters. They fight among themselves but they are not spoiled. They are never spanked because I do not believe in spanking and contrary to all rumors they do not cry for their mother when she leaves the nursery after a visit. They have come to accept her visits as part of their routine and they are not depressed when she leaves the nursery to return to her other children."

It should not be inferred from this statement that Dr. Dafoe advocates the removal of children in general from the family sphere. Ideally, he believes, every child should be brought up in the family, with a mother's love, care and devotion combined with a doctor's advice. If the quintuplet experiment is to provide a surprising answer to the question "What is home without a mother?", Dr. Dafoe cannot foresee it. But he does admit that out of the quintuplet nursery may come knowledge that will upset accepted theories of child rearing.

"Experts have already learned more from me and the babies than they ever dug up before," he smiled. "I can only say that the results speak for themselves."

Aside from the miracle that is Annette, Emilie, Marie, Cecile and Yvonne, alive, well and apparently happy, perhaps one of the most

MEN AND THEIR ETERNAL ADVICE -:- By MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL -:- TURN TO PAGE FIVE

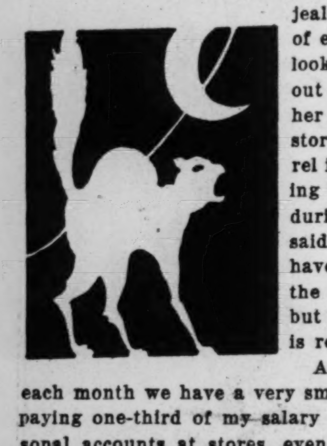
by

Martha Carr

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM in a position that makes a man think seriously of trying to make a new start in life alone elsewhere.



I have been married a little over two years, which time has been the most unhappy period of my life. My wife is extremely jealous and quarrelsome. She accuses me of everything but what I do. I can't even look at women to see if I know them without her raising cain, which doesn't bother her at all right out on the street or in the stores; in fact, the only way she can quarrel is at the top of her voice. Her quarreling has made us move from several places during the past year. She has repeatedly said she was going to leave, and in fact I have suggested that she leave, the sooner the better. I do not claim to be an angel but I can get along with most anyone who is reasonable and a square shooter.

After payments are made on our debts each month we have a very small amount to live on. She insists on paying one-third of my salary for rent, and in running up her personal accounts at stores, even after she promised she would economize to pay these other accounts..

Mrs. Carr, is it possible for me to get free legal aid at present, which I will be able to pay for later, in order to relieve myself of this condition? I have a steady position which I do not want to give up; however, I cannot continue very much longer under present conditions. Very truly yours, HUSBAND.

The Legal Aid Bureau was established for those who are financially unable to employ the services of a lawyer. It might be possible for you to obtain some suggestions and guidance in the Domestic Relations Court.

There are some women, and men too, who seem unable to comprehend money values, what over-expenditure means, and who can not adapt themselves to circumstances that must be considered according to income. Perhaps your wife is one of these, and, that being the case, may require a great deal of teaching and much patience. It is a difficult situation for you and if you have not tried to regard your duty as that of teaching, with much patience, instead of irritability and fault-finding, the conditions wll be hard to adjust. But I am sure it is worth the trial.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● RECENTLY in your column was published a letter which asked where pamphlets on various colleges could be obtained, and you referred the writer to the Public Library for addresses.

We felt that it would be of interest to you and your readers to know that the College Club of St. Louis offers to the public, gratis, detailed information on colleges throughout the country. This service may be obtained by calling the clubhouse, ROsedale 9188.

Very truly yours, FLORENCE BAKER, Secretary College Guidance Committee.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I RECENTLY HEARD, through business connections in a rather confidential way, of an engagement of a young man friend and would like to know if it would be proper to send a letter of congratulations to him before the public announcement is made, or had I better wait until it was publicly announced? I have not met the young woman. Should I include her in the letter? DUMB DORA.

Unless the man is a very close friend, it would be better taste to wait until the engagement has been announced.

The proper form is to write the young man, who is a friend, since you do not know the young woman, congratulating him upon his engagement and wishing both much happiness.

—o—o—

My dear Mrs. Carr:

SEEING EXAMPLES of your far-reaching work, I should like to ask you for the address of Mrs. Sugimento, Japanese author of "Daughter of the Samurai." VERY ANXIOUS.

You can write care the author's publishers, Garden City Publishing Co., Garden City, N. Y.

—o—o—

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● ABOUT WHAT TIME was the story of the "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" supposed to have taken place? Is mountain language hard to read? Thanks. A READER.

The era about which this story is written was 20 or 25 years ago. Like all dialect or local vernacular the language of the mountains may be difficult to some persons who have not learned all the terms, and application of those terms, used in that section of the country.

—o—o—

My dear Martha Carr:

● I AM WRITING for a worthy organization which is in need of sewing machines. It will be the object of this organization to sew for and help the needy in their respective districts. They cannot carry on this work, however, without sewing machines. I thought, perhaps, some of your readers may have old, discarded, foot-power sewing machines which they no longer care to use and which they would allow us to have. We coud call for the machines. This is a sewing class, sponsored by the F E R A and our work is to remodel old clothes. I'M A HELPER.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

PLEASE SUGGEST this answer to the young man "Inexperienced 19," asking how to go about getting experience. With a little money ahead go personally to an employer and say you will work a week or a month without pay (or merely enough for your meal ticket), just to prove to him that you can do the job. If you make good he will either hire you or give you a good recommendation on your record and experience, though brief. And his door will be open to you when he has a real vacancy.

JOHN PHAR.

Thank you for your helpful suggestion to this boy, which is one that all the boys, and girls, might make use of. I hope this may be read also by "A Willing Worker," "Mrs. R. B." and others who ask help in getting employment, although I have stated many times that it is out of my province to secure work for anyone.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

Some Comment To a Mother Of Two Girls

Columnist Says Present Generation Is Not "Wasting Itself."

By Elsie Robinson

ARE your youngsters "too much for you? Do you spend anxious hours wondering "what they're coming to" . . . trying to discover why your years of devoted sacrifice and service seem to have come to nothing?

If you're the average American parent, the chances are that you do . . . and that you'll breathe a sympathetic sigh—or snort—with this "Worried Mother" from Englewood, Colo.

"Dear Elsie Robinson:

"I know you have had children yourself and your general advice seems so sensible that I'm coming to you with our problem. We have two children—both girls, 18 and 21. We have given them everything we could—loving companionship, a comfortable home, a good education, plenty of fun, Sunday school influence. We ask nothing of them but good characters.

"One girl is still in college. The other has a fine position, her own car—is going ahead fast. Everyone says they are splendid young people. And yet, they seem to be drifting away from all our standards. They are never home a single night. Church influence is 'out.'

"When we remonstrate they say, 'Why should we take your advice, when our problem is so different from those of your youth? You love us—yes—but what do you know about us, really?'

"Everywhere it is the same, Miss Robinson. Young people racing like mad. How can we slow ours down? Reasoning doesn't reach them . . . punishment results in resentment . . . natural concern is regarded as meddling. Must we stand back and let them waste and wreck themselves?

"A WORRIED MOTHER."

—o-o—

BUT ARE THEY "wasting and wrecking themselves," my dear—or are they simply keeping step with a schedule you do not understand? Isn't your whole trouble simply a difference in your interpretation of "character?"

You say you want to "slow them up"—but why? Is there anything criminal in their incessant activity—their speed? Haven't we of the older generation, who made this Machine Age, actually forced this speed upon them? What will happen to these children unless they do conform to the tempo we have set?

Your letter-head shows that you and your husband own and run a small industry. That industry, undoubtedly, uses modern machinery. You do not try to slow that machinery up . . . you do not use slow hand methods . . . you would go bankrupt if you did. Can't you see that the same facts apply to your children's lives?

Their attitude toward their home and church shock you. You remember, with a homesick longing, the hours spent in your own family circle, your own church. Such sweet hours! I enjoyed them, too—I also think of them longingly.

—o-o—

BUT REMEMBER THIS—home and church meant something then which they cannot possibly mean today. They were our only social centers. We had no movies with their nightly allure . . . no automobiles, annihilating distance . . . no pent-up office hours which caused cramped muscles and minds to clamor for release when the day was done.

We were bored sometimes—yes. But ours was a slow and placid existence, with few outlets. It was thrilling to attend the Young People's Meetings on Sunday night—we might meet a new face. It was sweet to gather around the old table at night, with the neighbors dropping in—where else could we go?

But that old order has gone forever—and I, for one, suspect we're the better for it. We have incomparably more alert minds today . . . wider information . . . less bigotry and intolerance. Our young people may "whoop her up" a bit too loudly . . . but there's none of that secret dry rot, that hidden hate and futility which made many an old-fashioned home a place of horror.

I believe this present generation is the finest crop the old race has ever produced. I believe we will all have the happiest, healthiest lives and homes if we oldsters will give ourselves and our children a break. As for the homes and the churches—they'll still retain their hold if they'll flow with the times. And why shouldn't they flow with the times? Why should we expect the youngsters to make all the adjustments and let us sit tight?

Chenille Caps

Chenille caps are rivalling those of suede and contributing a dressier emphasis to youthful costumes. One that is made of crocheted chenille thread has a pompon at the peak, while another uses a fringe decoration that, at first glance, looks as though it were made of ostrich feathers. The caps are shown in a variety of winter hues as well as black.

FEMININE Kick Against FOOTBALL

SHE DOESN'T LIKE HER FOOTBALL FROM A HARD SEAT, HEMMED IN BY RABID "FANS," AND WITH A NORTH WIND BLOWING.

Why Must All Nice Men Insist on Submitting Their Women-Folk to Rigors of Viewing Gridiron Games?

By KITTY SHARP

IF you're wondering about that funny noise you hear at this moment, I might as well admit that my teeth are still chattering. I'm chilled to the bone, and while my woollies itch and irk me I can't say that they do much towards the impossible job of making me warm after I've been parked for hours on a seat of frozen concrete with the chill October breezes blowing. The only consolation I have right now is that the calendar informs me that we have one month down with just a few weeks to go on this year's football season. Maybe then I'll know what it's like to be warm again.

Why, I wonder, must all the nice men I know change their colors with the coming of fall and insist upon submitting their women-folk to the rigors of watching football games? From Thanksgiving on through the winter, spring and summer, most of them will be fairly considerate of the girl's comfort; but just let the old alma mater swing open her doors for the semester and every rah-rah boy who has grown fat and 40, and who has learned and forgotten lots of things since he left the campus, will feel a strong resurgence of the old varsity spirit and expect you to spend your Saturday afternoons with him following the teams. Unless you're a stronger woman than I've been up to this point there's nothing much for you to do but shiver and take it until the football season's over.

Of course, it may be all very well for young and romantic children to find a thrill in all this rah-rah business presumably inspired by two groups of huskies savagely fighting their respective ways towards the opposite goal posts; and I can remember back in the days when the newspapers and Scott Fitzgerald used to call us "flaming youth" that we used to get quite excited about the Big Game. But whether that was youth (flaming or frozen) or the hysteria caused by the single stiff shot of white mule, or high-proof gin that had been brewed in a dormitory bathtub ("just to keep you warm"), I'm not at all sure. I only know that today even romance and the finest spirits bottled in bond are insufficient to raise my enthusiasm for football in the face of the weather and a stadium full of grown-up freshmen, most of whom ought to be home with the wife and kiddies.

The boys know all about the weather conditions under which football must be played, too; but they get themselves so thoroughly "fortified" beforehand that they are incapable of sensing the arctic breezes that blow across the field, just as they are unable to follow the fine points of the play. But that doesn't seem to hamper their appreciation of the game much. They seem to be trained to follow the maneuvers on the gridiron with a sort of animal response to the crowd hysteria, so they have a swell time. In the meantime you, not having got "in tune" with the spirits, have to sit on your cold perch suffering your boredom and nursing your chillblains simultaneously.

EVEN if, in desperation, you try to awaken your old interest in the game it doesn't do much good. Because every time a crucial play is made (and frequently for much less reason) the whole stadium in front of you is not only on its feet but standing on the seats so you can't make out what's going on even if you are interested. That's the reason why I got at least one big laugh out of the football news this year when I read that the new regulations require players to wear their numbers on the front as well as the back of their jerseys to aid spectators in identifying them. Haw! If the boys want to plaster the numbers fore and aft on their civvies when they come off the gridiron, of course, we'll be pleased to meet 'em. But imagine a little thing like a number making much difference when there is a mob of high-jumping, bottle-waving fans between you and the field!

I am informed by some women that the hardships they are called upon to endure in the name of football make my chilled bones, chapped cheeks and frozen nose seem like something less than a slight cold. They are the Football Wives whose husbands (ardent football fans that they are) disappear completely over week-ends during the season. These boys, however, belong to the modern age of football fans, and at least their wives do not have to lie awake over Saturday night worrying about them catching cold. They cheer Dear Old Rutgers on to victory in the "football bars" of clubs and hotels which are equipped with steam heat, radios, direct wires and movable scoreboards. And of course the cup that cheers flows evenly through victory and defeat.

If the team wins, then they're on the town to celebrate. And if it loses they go out on the town just the same in order to wash away the bitter taste of defeat. When they arrive home on a late train on Sunday afternoon they simply explain that it was football. And the wife of every Football Husband understands. It was football, even if the old boy did remain mercifully untouched by the wintry breezes of a cold stadium.

But I think the boys have got something there. Just the germ of an idea, perhaps, or its mechanical outlines. Doesn't steam heat, radio, movable scoreboards suggest something to you? Football in the home! (Just the spectator part of it, I mean). Now there is something I might go for. A comfortable chair, a crackling fire, highballs and sandwiches, and Ted Husing, Graham McNamee or Eddie Dooley reporting the game. Bring on your football fans! I don't care how much college spirit the boys work up then, so long as they don't break up the furniture or trample the children underfoot.

I offer the idea as a solution not only of the girls like myself for whom football and frozen feet are a seasonal affliction, but to the Football Wives who can have their husbands back for October and November week-ends if they want them.

I'll gladly root for any team the boys are backing, so long as the room is comfortable, the food and drinks good, and the company congenial. I'll even agree to talk football, with any one who must talk football, on off evenings during the week and promise not to inject a single sour note into the conversation.

But football from a concrete seat, hemmed in by rabid "fans," with the north wind blowing, and probably a young blizzard obscuring not only the field but my vision of the wild men in the row ahead of me?

Take it away, Ted Husing!

Subduing Flashy Style Aspect

IF YOU want to keep up with the latest fashion fad for brilliant ornamentation but prefer to subdue this flashy aspect of your costume, there are many ways of accomplishing this style feat.

Try using jet beads or some good imitations of jet on a frock and a hat. A halo turban of antelope will look twice as expensive and alluring if it has its bandeau covered with the glistening back beads. Likewise a simple black crepe frock that is long of sleeve and high of neck, will become more handsome because of the row of jet beads trimming the high pockets and edging the tight bands at the bottom of the sleeves.

Since sequins are being accepted for daytime as well as for evening, there's much glamor to be supplied to a costume suit by the addition of these glistening circles. Neckline or pockets often are enhanced by them while a bolero or a simple little boxy coat uses them as its edging around the neckline, front and sleeves.

More elaborate in the application of brilliant trimming is a stunning afternoon dress of black crepe which has a wide, shaped girdle completely covered with black paillettes. The blouse has the same bright ornaments scattered all over it and there are others extending to the hip line of the skirt.

Sequin trimming which may be purchased at the trimming counter offers a suggestion to the woman who wants to apply her own costume accents. There are narrow bandings which suggest use as edging on jacket or collar and very wide insertions that may be employed for entire capes or jackets. Similar bands are available of net covered with varicolored bead motifs while many separate motifs suitable for applique work will appeal to those who wish to individualize their wardrobe.

WHY MEN COME HOME -:- -:- -:- By Helen Rowland

I HAVE never wondered "why men leave home." But what is it that keeps the average man moving like a shuttle from his home and his office desk—and back to his home?

Perhaps most of them come home just from force of habit. It becomes a purely mechanical process and relieves a man of the mental exertion of thinking of something else to do.

Lots of men come home because at the end of a hard day at the office they are too TIRED to go anywhere else. Home is the logical place in which to relax and "be your age." It is the only place where a man can take off his manners with his office coat and be as grouchy, as nervous or as irritable as he feels. It takes all a woman's tact and wheedling to persuade a really "tired business man" to take his mental and physical fatigue ANYWHERE but "home!"

Many husbands come home these days because they haven't the money to go anywhere else. All men come home when they are feeling low or "liverish." That is one time in every married man's life when home looks to him more like a goal than a gaol, and when he can't get there quickly enough.

When a man is sick, the only thing on earth he is interested in is his "symptoms," and hurrying to a place where he can stretch out under a soft quilt and have somebody stroke his head, take his temperature, and help him feel sorry for himself.

Or, a man may check in at the same old stand pretty regularly for self-protection. There is no safeguard like a wife, to defend a man against the importunities of other women. A bachelor has no excuse; but the man who can say, "There, there girlie! The wife is expecting me home," has a tear-proof ironclad alibi which keeps him from constantly being "misunderstood."

A great mystery to the average man is "what a woman does with her time all day." So some men come home out of curiosity — to see what the wife is doing. And if a man happens to be jealously inclined, his wife's daily problem is not to keep him coming home, but to keep him from hanging around the house all day!

Of course, there will be some cynical wives who will be amazed to learn that there ARE any husbands who DO come home every evening.

But, you'd be surprised! The world is full of patient, plodding, harness-broken husbands, who would as soon think of committing murder or going to business in their bare feet as of not going straight home from the office. It's just an old American custom which is very strong in every normal American male.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Dorothy Coleman

WELL, of all things! Just when you'd expect the darling little debbies to be concentrating on party dresses, orchids and the stag line, they turn up in a cooking class! Promoted, furthermore, by one of their own number, Miss Betty Hoerr, who succeeded in rounding up about 15 of her playmates, including the Veiled Prophet Queen herself, and three out of the four special maids, the Misses Nancy Houser, Eunice Holderness and Frances McPheeters. There were some other good names at the first lesson, too—Anne and Mary Sullivan, Anne Stickney, Georgia Simmons, Maude Overall, Mary Lee Smidt and Frances Reyburn, and one girl who put frivolous things behind her last season, Anne Fisse.

The class is to be a weekly affair in the subterranean kitchens of the Laclede Gas Light Co.

The little darlings all professed to be fed up at this early date with the butterfly existence and were "just dying" to find "something worthwhile to do." Maybe so. But it strikes us in our senility that it's a little early in the season to be getting blase about fun for fun's sake. Can it be that the home-making urge has snuck up unawares on the little ladies? They've met over the mixing bowls only twice at this writing, so it won't do to speculate too freely. Especially since the first meeting was on an afternoon on which, one of them grimaced, "There wasn't anything else to do anyway."

—o-o—

AT THE FIRST CLASS they looked more like a home economics class in a seaboard prep school than a gathering of the reigning belles of local society. The predominant costume was the too-big sweater, sleeves pushed above the elbow, worn with a tweed skirt, and flat-heeled brogues. The gas company provided stamp-sized organdy aprons to protect the debbies as they went about their business.

Class took up at 3 o'clock. The first event on the initial program was a drill in the lighting of the "automatic" stoves in the model kitchens. They had the place smelling like a lethal chamber before they mastered the knotty problem. Next they learned all about how many teaspoons make a tablespoon, and how to cut shortening into flour for biscuits, which they varied with cheese and tomato juice. By 4:30 or so the biscuits were "in." A proxy of the gas company, "floating" without her hat, had hot cocoa all poured by the time each cheflette drew from her oven her piping hot creation.

There was only one tragedy. Mary Lee Smidt's failed to pipe. In fact, when the minute minder sounded the alarm, her biscuits were still in status quo. Possibly because she had forgotten to light the oven. Well, heck, they said it was "automatic," didn't they?

—o-o—

WITH THE NEW MILLS blackening in our purse, we are reminded of a sight we saw on a summer cruise. On the long pier at a Nicaraguan banana port, skipped a native urchin, not too well clad. His most conspicuous article of wearing apparel was a Louisiana sales tax token strung on a dirty string around his neck. The only person we ever saw who had any use for the darn things.

And while we're on the subject, how long is it going to be before somebody sets up some kind of clearing house to simplify interstate commerce in mills? We, for one, have a fine collection of sales tax tokens from Oklahoma and Louisiana which we would gladly swap for the current Missouri model.

—o-o—

THE OTHER NOON we were relaxing over a plate of soup in a downtown restaurant, feeling for the moment a supreme confidence in our unseen host. Our table on the balcony commanded a panoramic view of the steam tables below. They were spotless, their metal gleaming. We noted with satisfaction that they were raised a few inches from the floor, to discourage prowling animal life, we supposed. The waitresses were trim in their starched ginghams. Even their hair was neat under nets. Altogether a happy scene, one to inspire confidence in the integrity of that unseen host, and in the unimpeachable qualities of his provender.

As we prepared to leave, in bustled a kitchen boy behind a stack of shiny-clean soup plates. He set them down on the floor before assigning them to their proper shelves, and stooped carefully over them. In the top bowl frisked a large black bug. The boy's predicament was obvious even from a distance. A hurried look around. No waste basket. No garbage can. No drain. He stuffed the bug into his chest pocket, buttoned it up, and went on about his work. Whistling.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Dorothy Coleman

WELL, of all things! Just when you'd expect the darling little debbies to be concentrating on party dresses, orchids and the stag line, they turn up in a cooking class! Promoted, furthermore, by one of their own number, Miss Betty Hoerr, who succeeded in rounding up about 15 of her playmates, including the Veiled Prophet Queen herself, and three out of the four special maids, the Misses Nancy Houser, Eunice Holderness and Frances McPheeters. There were some other good names at the first lesson, too—Anne and Mary Sullivan, Anne Stickney, Georgia Simmons, Maude Overall, Mary Lee Smidt and Frances Reyburn, and one girl who put frivolous things behind her last season, Anne Fisse.

The class is to be a weekly affair in the subterranean kitchens of the Laclede Gas Light Co.

The little darlings all professed to be fed up at this early date with the butterfly existence and were "just dying" to find "something worthwhile to do." Maybe so. But it strikes us in our senility that it's a little early in the season to be getting blase about fun for fun's sake. Can it be that the home-making urge has snuck up unawares on the little ladies? They've met over the mixing bowls only twice at this writing, so it won't do to speculate too freely. Especially since the first meeting was on an afternoon on which, one of them grimaced, "There wasn't anything else to do anyway."

—o-o—

AT THE FIRST CLASS they looked more like a home economics class in a seaboard prep school than a gathering of the reigning belles of local society. The predominant costume was the too-big sweater, sleeves pushed above the elbow, worn with a tweed skirt, and flat-heeled brogues. The gas company provided stamp-sized organdy aprons to protect the debbies as they went about their business.

Class took up at 3 o'clock. The first event on the initial program was a drill in the lighting of the "automatic" stoves in the model kitchens. They had the place smelling like a lethal chamber before they mastered the knotty problem. Next they learned all about how many teaspoons make a tablespoon, and how to cut shortening into flour for biscuits, which they varied with cheese and tomato juice. By 4:30 or so the biscuits were "in." A proxy of the gas company, "floating" without her hat, had hot cocoa all poured by the time each cheflette drew from her oven her piping hot creation.

There was only one tragedy. Mary Lee Smidt's failed to pipe. In fact, when the minute minder sounded the alarm, her biscuits were still in status quo. Possibly because she had forgotten to light the oven. Well, heck, they said it was "automatic," didn't they?

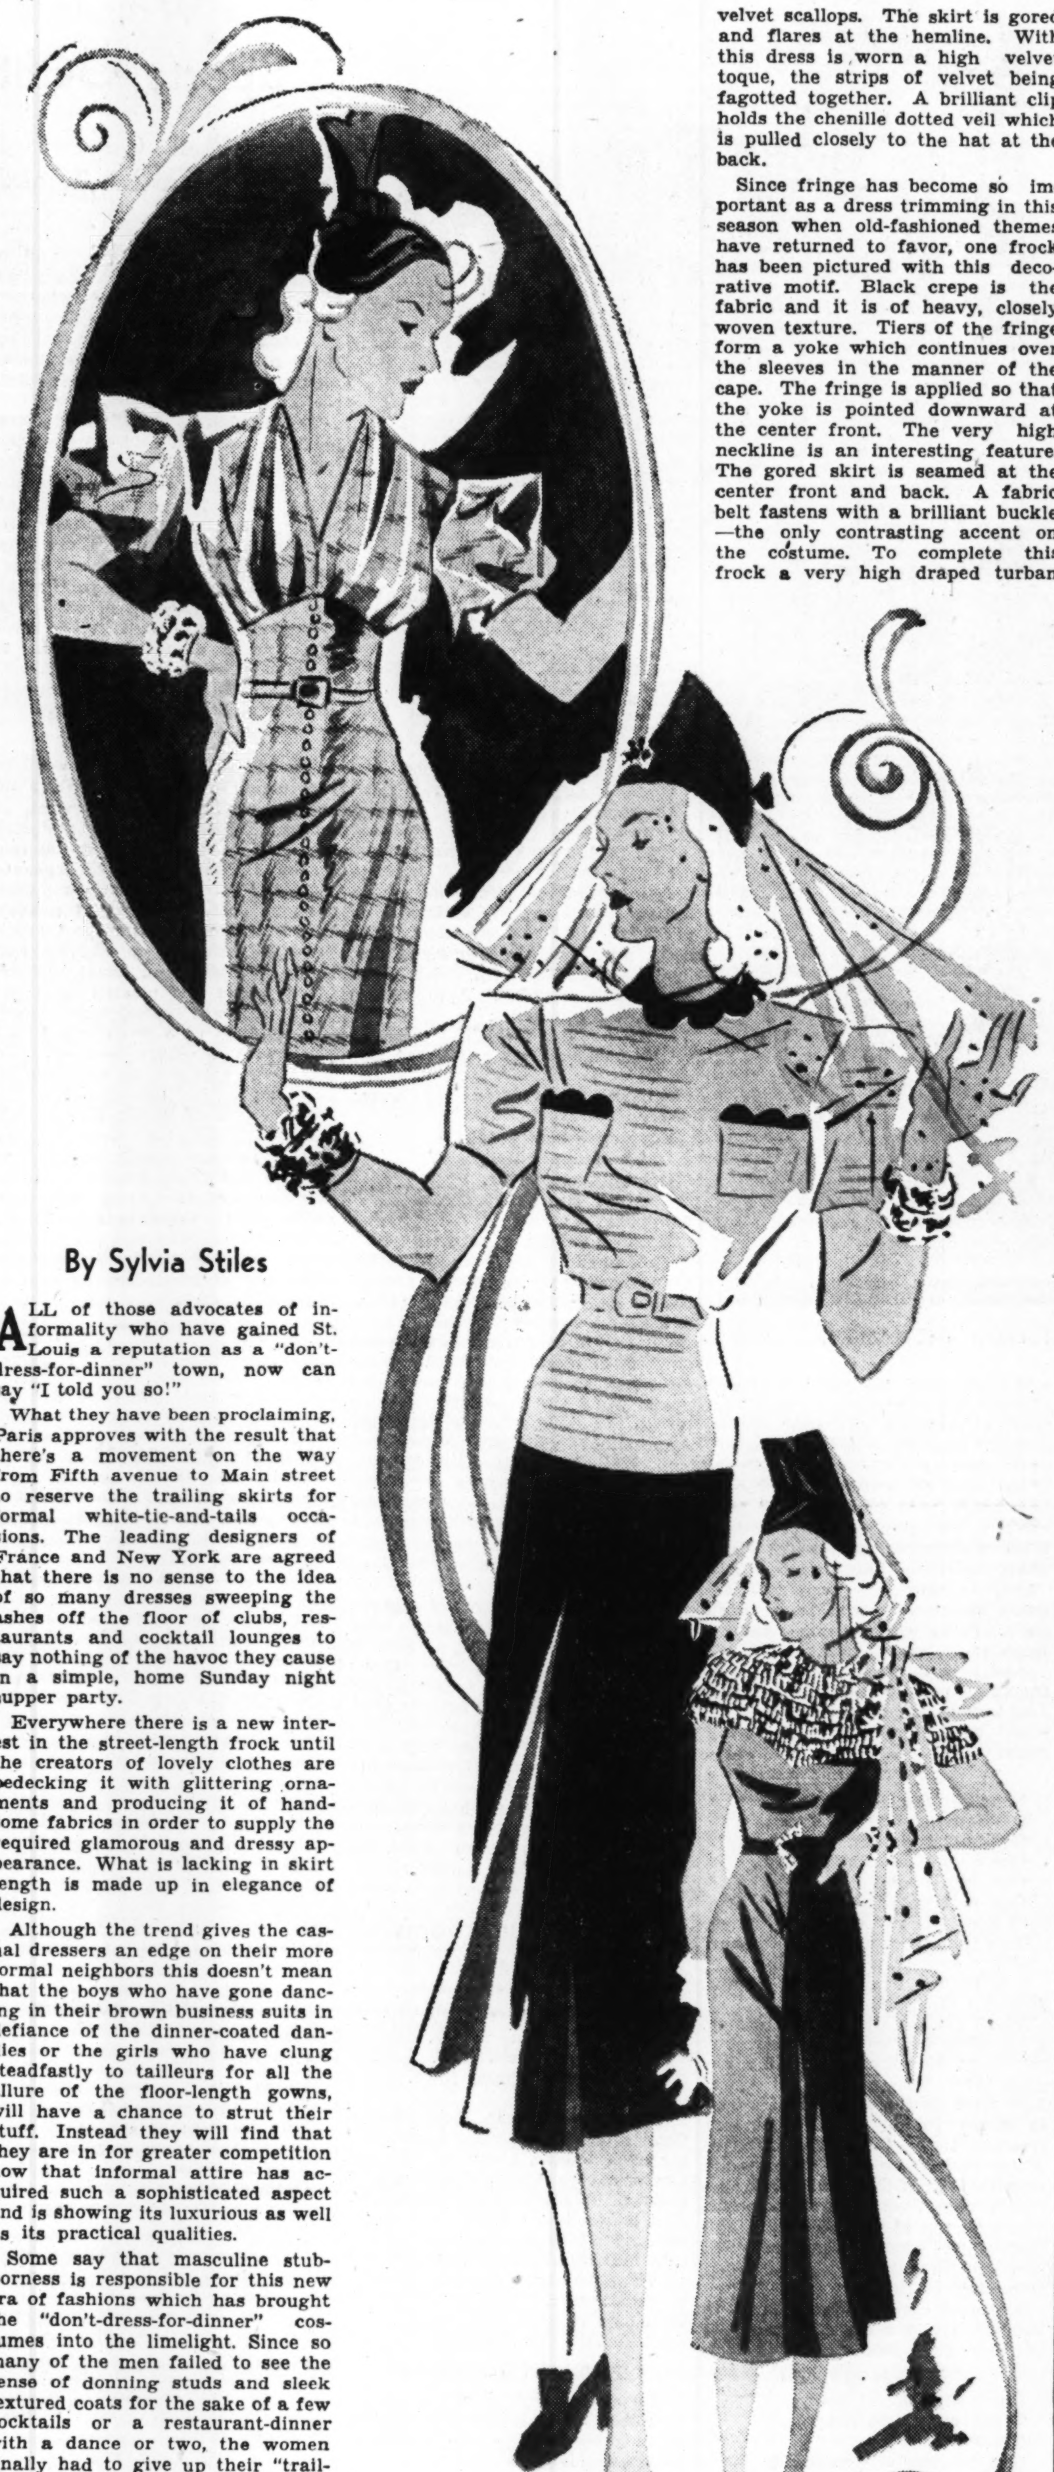
CLOSE-UP of ST. LOUIS FASHIONS

PARIS Seconds ST. LOUIS



ILLUSTRATIONS BY AITHRA HOLLAND.

By Sylvia Stiles

ALL of those advocates of informality who have gained St. Louis a reputation as a "don't-dress-for-dinner" town, now can say "I told you so!"

What they have been proclaiming, Paris approves with the result that there's a movement on the way from Fifth avenue to Main street to reserve the trailing skirts for formal white-tie-and-tails occasions. The leading designers of France and New York are agreed that there is no sense to the idea of so many dresses sweeping the ashes off the floor of clubs, restaurants and cocktail lounges to say nothing of the havoc they cause in a simple, home Sunday night supper party.

Everywhere there is a new interest in the street-length frock until the creators of lovely clothes are bedecking it with glittering ornaments and producing it of handsome fabrics in order to supply the required glamorous and dressy appearance. What is lacking in skirt length is made up in elegance of design.

Although the trend gives the casual dressers an edge on their more formal neighbors this doesn't mean that the boys who have gone dancing in their brown business suits in defiance of the dinner-coated dandies or the girls who have clung steadfastly to tailleurs for all the allure of the floor-length gowns, will have a chance to strut their stuff. Instead they will find that they are in for greater competition now that informal attire has acquired such a sophisticated aspect and is showing its luxurious as well as its practical qualities.

Some say that masculine stubborness is responsible for this new era of fashions which has brought the "don't-dress-for-dinner" costumes into the limelight. Since so many of the men failed to see the sense of donning studs and sleek textured coats for the sake of a few cocktails or a restaurant-dinner with a dance or two, the women finally had to give up their "trailers" in order to please their escorts. More explicitly, perhaps, the designers ordered the women to dress down if the men refused to dress up. A man in striped business suit and a woman in formal gown began to jar the aesthetic nerves of the makers of fashions.

NOW that the new theme has become definitely launched and St. Louis shops are presenting street-length frocks that will delight the heart of the fussiest dressers, there is no doubt that the women are going to welcome the change. Instead of hurrying home from the matinee or the bridge game to don a floor-length frock for an informal dinner party they may take their time and flit from one engagement to another.

Many of the dresses that fill the requirements for both afternoon and evening are made of velvet or metallic fabrics. Occasionally crepe is used but when it appears there are glittering or other arresting decorations to give it a more luxurious emphasis. Gold braid or scroll embroidery of gold or silver is employed effectively on several crepe models while jeweled clips and beaded bandings enhance others. Sleeves usually are quite short and necklines vary from very high to low V types. There is a swing to many of the skirts since they likely will be worn for dancing.

Three frocks that are typical of what we'll be seeing around town during the next few weeks have been sketched.

The large figure in the foreground displays a two-piece dress combining gold lame and brown velvet. This alliance is especially attractive for dining because the bodice is so decorative. The metallic fabric has a novelty weave which suggests a quilted design, while the velvet is of a heavy, deep pile quality. Distinctive features of the blouse include its short peplum, short sleeves, scalloped turnover collar made of the velvet and the patch pockets that are edged with velvet scallops. The skirt is gored and flares at the hemline. With this dress is worn a high velvet toque, the strips of velvet being fagotted together. A brilliant clip holds the chenille dotted veil which is pulled closely to the hat at the back.

Since fringe has become so important as a dress trimming in this season when old-fashioned themes have returned to favor, one frock has been pictured with this decorative motif. Black crepe is the fabric and it is of heavy, closely woven texture. Tiers of the fringe form a yoke which continues over the sleeves in the manner of the cape. The fringe is applied so that the yoke is pointed downward at the center front. The very high neckline is an interesting feature. The gored skirt is seamed at the center front and back. A fabric belt fastens with a brilliant buckle—the only contrasting accent on the costume. To complete this frock a very high draped turban has been selected. This is made of black velvet completely covered with a veil having a wide mesh and square dots. It may be draped in several ways.

The third dress is of a metallic fabric in stained glass window shades forming a plaid design. Covered buttons and loops appear at the front, extending to the low V-shaped neckline. The Directoire theme appears in the cut of the dress which gives a very high-waisted effect, although a belt is placed at the normal waistline. The short sleeves are quite full and the skirt has the flaring hemline that distinguishes so many of these dresses. The toque worn with the dress soars skyward. It is of velvet and draped sheer jersey which is twisted around the base of the peak.

Keeping Young Is Matter of Knowing How

Women Can Carry Heavy Burdens and Still Keep From "Going to Seed."

By Helen Jameson

MANY a woman has suddenly realized that she sees a strange, unfamiliar face in the mirror. Something has happened, almost over night. There's something funny about the eyes. The glint is gone. The texture of her skin is not the same, color more sallow than cream. She looks closer. Yes, wrinkles! Little ones, but wrinkles, all right. That's a hard blow to take.

This event is a shock. The truth is, of course, that the woman has been chugging right along the same route every day, paying no particular attention to her appearance. Maybe she has regarded cosmetics as silly time-wasters. Dress hasn't seemed vitally important.

She beholds herself in a full-length mirror. Not so long ago she was wearing a size 16 frock, now she has graduated to a 38 size. The dress she has on is altogether too full of girl. Rotundity has sneaked up on her because she hasn't been watching her grocery intake.

Well! She sits down and does a little thinking. She has been working hard, mind intent on the business of life. That's all right but she should have had some play now and then. You can't keep the eye sparkles going if you don't have fun.

—o-o—

WHAT SHOULD this woman do? She must map out a new plan of existence. She can face her responsibilities, carry on the job and still not go to seed. Millions of other women have done it. They've worked like horses, kept young beyond the 60 mark. It is in knowing how.

Clear the mind of worry cobwebs. Sweep away old grievances. Take a less serious attitude toward duties. Never let self-pity get a grip on your thoughts. Keep spirited. If you don't, you're lost.

Cut down on the grocery bill if you must, and sneak some money for a beauty binge. An afternoon at a beauty shop will give any woman a rosier view of life. Have a new coiffure, even if you're afraid it's going to make you look silly. It isn't there for life. No doubt you'll like it when you get used to it.

Stop buying practical clothes; cute one of gay colors don't cost any more. Get some brand new makeup and use it. A touch of color on the lips is better for the health and spirits than a week's rest in bed.

Don't spoof at beautifying. It is a support. It is a tonic.

BECAUSE WE FEEL you ought to know what sinister forces are at work within that silk stocking organization, the St. Louis Junior League, we want to report that there has recently appeared on its bulletin board, usually devoted to announcements of portrait exhibits and talks on antique silver, the following class-conscious notice, penciled on common yellow paper:

"To Whom It May Concern."

"We, the waitresses of the Junior League, in order to form a more perfect union, united we stand, divided we fall, Lewis will protect the working girl, etc., etc.—are now ORGANIZED.

Our demands are as follows:

1. Better looking smocks.
2. Free lunch; free parking.
3. Couches in the clubroom; beds in the kitchen.
4. Shorter working hours.
5. Right to accept tips.
6. Right to eject customers who are unattractive:
   (a) Those who yap about the service.
   (b) Those who demand specials.
7. No outside service. (Serving lunch across the hall in the beauty shop.)
8. A closed shop. If nobody can get in, it follows quite naturally that we will have nothing to do.

"If immediate action is not taken in granting these demands, there will be drastic consequences. Civil warfare in the Junior League. Internal strife is a frightening and horrible thing. SEE SPAIN. Help Us to Avoid This."

Waitresses are members of the Junior League, serving in the tearoom without pay. Their complaints have been referred to the proper authorities and it is hoped a strike may be averted by peaceful negotiations. Paging Mr. Lewis!

A DESIGN FOR LIVING

amazing facts of the whole situation here is the continued and increasing enmity between those who sympathize with the Dionne family and those who place implicit faith in the judgment of Dr. Dafoe. The undercurrent of dissatisfaction and distrust — mere mumblings last year when I visited this quiet little town—has grown now into open and direct accusations. Those who oppose the almost absolute authority invested in the babies' physician accuse him quite openly of exploiting the quintuplets for his own selfish interests. Those who oppose the continued demands of the Dionne family that they be reunited with their five famous daughters argue just as heatedly that Oliva Dionne and his wife are dissatisfied with the handling of the quintuplets experiment only because they have not reaped a larger financial harvest.

To the first charge Dr. Dafoe replies: "The babies' funds are handled darn straight. Remember the books are examined by government auditors monthly."

Out of the quintuplets' income Dr. Dafoe is paid $210 per month for shouldering almost absolute responsibility for everything connected with the lives of these famous youngsters from their education to their eyesight. He admits freely that this small salary is generously supplemented by income from his writing and radio work.

"I'm not bothered by malicious rumors," the doctor insisted, but he drew his hand wearily across his eyes and sighed before he went on to explain that he is "the goat, the guy who has to take the blame for everything."

I'm ready to quit," he admitted. "There is more to all this than can now, or perhaps ever, be told."

—o-o—

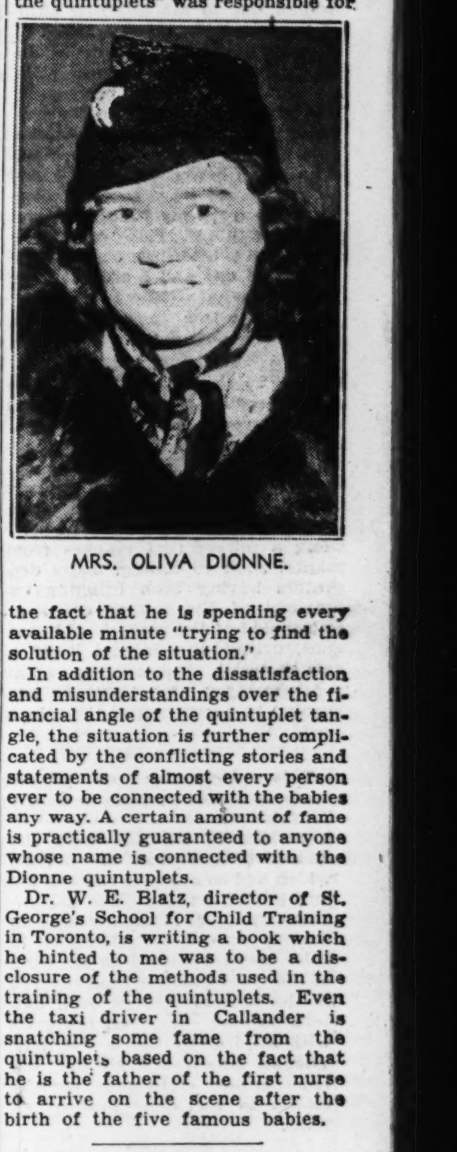
WITH a fortune of approximately a half million dollars, invested largely in Province of Ontario and Dominion of Canada bonds, the financial security of the quintuplets is assured and it is this fact which those sympathetic to the Dionne family point out in urging that the father, mother, brothers and sisters of the quintuplets be allowed to share in their fortune. At the present time the Dionne family receives $100 a month from the income of their five famous daughters. Supplementing this income, are the profits from the hot-dog and souvenir stand which the father operates across the road from the quintuplet nursery. This souvenir and refreshment stand has been enlarged to three times the size it was when I visited Callander last year and while chatting with Oliva Dionne, I counted nine cash registers in various parts of the establishment.

Dionne, himself, looks prosperous enough, but the ramshackle old house where the quintuplets were born and where the Dionne family still lives shows no evidence of repairs. Weatherbeaten and ill-kept, the old house looked decidedly dejected in contrast to the shiny, new automobile that stood in the yard among the tin cans, rocks and assorted junk. Mrs. Dionne was hanging out an enormous washing as I left her husband's hot-dog stand and started down the road to Corbeil to visit the school where several of the older Dionne children are in school.

No charge is made for viewing the quintuplets. They themselves receive no cash for performing for the thousands of visitors that flock to the nursery daily. Their fortune has been accumulated through news, pictures and film contracts, through indorsing everything from absorbent cotton to aluminum dishes. Right now, the guardians are faced with the problem of deciding what curb should be put on the quintuplets' earnings. And that question, like all others, will be settled largely by Dr. Dafoe.

Repeated attempts have been made to bring Dionne into accord with the board of guardians, but as yet these attempts have been unsuccessful. At present, there is some hope that Father Pilon, newly appointed priest to the parish of Corbeil, may be able to bring about some sort of an understanding.

Father Pilon, when I visited him at the parish house, was unwilling to discuss his plans and agreed only to be quoted as saying that his "grave concern over the future of the quintuplets" was responsible for the fact that he is spending every available minute "trying to find the solution of the situation."



MRS. OLIVA DIONNE.

In addition to the dissatisfaction and misunderstandings over the financial angle of the quintuplet tangle, the situation is further complicated by the conflicting stories and statements of almost every person ever to be connected with the babies any way. A certain amount of fame is practically guaranteed to anyone whose name is connected with the Dionne quintuplets.

Dr. W. E. Blatz, director of St. George's School for Child Training in Toronto, is writing a book which he hinted to me was to be a disclosure of the methods used in the training of the quintuplets. Even the taxi driver in Callander is snatching some fame from the quintuplets based on the fact that he is the father of the first nurse to arrive on the scene after the birth of the five famous babies.

Turquoise Blue Now An Accent for Black

TURQUOISE blue as an accent for black offers one of the most interesting fashion developments of the season. So popular has this alliance become that turquoise jewelry and accessories with a jewel-like emphasis are conspicuous in the shops.

One and two-strand necklaces, clips, brooches, bracelets and earrings are among the pieces that are recommended.

Blouses of this flattering shade of blue are featured of satins for wear with black suits. Daytime frocks have close-fitting scarfs of blue velvet while belt buckles, buttons and other ornaments bring out the beauty of this color.

The Homemaker's Page

LET ME SUGGEST

by Josephine Walter

IN my most philosophical vein, I have decided that Fall, like practically everything else in life, has its good and its bad points. At the moment I am torn between the joy of getting rid of screens and the sorrow of saying good-by to the garden furniture until next spring. And in between these more sentimental moments I am occupied in seeing that both these jobs are done in the most practical and best ways possible.

There is really very little to be said on the subject of putting the screens away, except to be sure that you don't do it too early. Aside from that, my advice would be: first, tag each screen as you take it down, especially if you have different sized screens in different rooms, so that next year you won't have to try them all over to find their proper place. Next, if there are any with holes or that need repairs, have the necessary work done now for it's human nature to forget to put up screens until they are a dire necessity, and then it is too late to have them fixed up. Finally, store them in racks, preferably built into the ceiling of the basement where they will be completely out of the way with no chance of having holes poked into them.

—o-o—

And now as to the garden furniture. Of course, the ideal arrangement is to have a game room where you can use the garden furniture during the winter months. This eliminates the necessity of storing cumbersome pieces and it also allows you to enjoy a gardeny feeling the year round. If this is impossible, giving your furniture a little attention now will well repay you in the spring when you want it to be nice.

—o-o—

● BEING OUTDOOR furniture, it should be able to stand water, so give it all a good scrubbing with soap and water before you put it away. If it is of iron, rubbing it with an oily cloth will keep it from rusting. Then wrap all of the framework with newspapers and hold the wrappings in place with a string. This is the usual method used by shipping companies and will save the furniture many nicks and bumps as well as keeping it clean. Cushions and upholstered pieces should be well brushed and cleaned if necessary before they are wrapped up. If the upholstery is of fabrikoid, rubbing it with a little vaseline will help keep it from cracking.

Having recently replaced two glasses in windows which were broken due to the unerring skill of my young hopeful, I asked a friend who has something to do with the building of autos if he didn't think it would be a good and practical idea to use shatter-proof glass in house windows. He replied that he thought it would be a much better and more practical idea, at least for the time being, to teach my young one not to throw things. However, I still think the shatter-proof glass idea is a good one and I offer it free to any young architect or inventor who wants to really make something out of it.

—o-o—

● IN THE MEANTIME, there are all sorts of other glass ideas that are really making decorating news. Of course, we have all become thoroughly familiar with the modern way of using large expanses of mirrored glass, even in traditional settings. Not content with using a mirror that reaches from mantel shelf to ceiling, many decorators having been bringing extensions of the mirror down on either side of the mantel, and even constructing the mantel itself of this material. But, ever searching for something new, they are now turning to decoration of the mirror itself.

—o-o—

This decoration on mirror serves a double purpose, in that it provides the decorative charm of a picture or painting with the reflective qualities of mirror, which add so much to the sparkle and life of a room. The decoration of mirrors is usually done in one of two ways. Designs in color may be painted on the back of the glass which is then silvered in the normal manner or a pattern may be etched on the glass with sand or by the use of acid. Themes may range all the way from sedate eighteenth century motifs to the most modern effects.

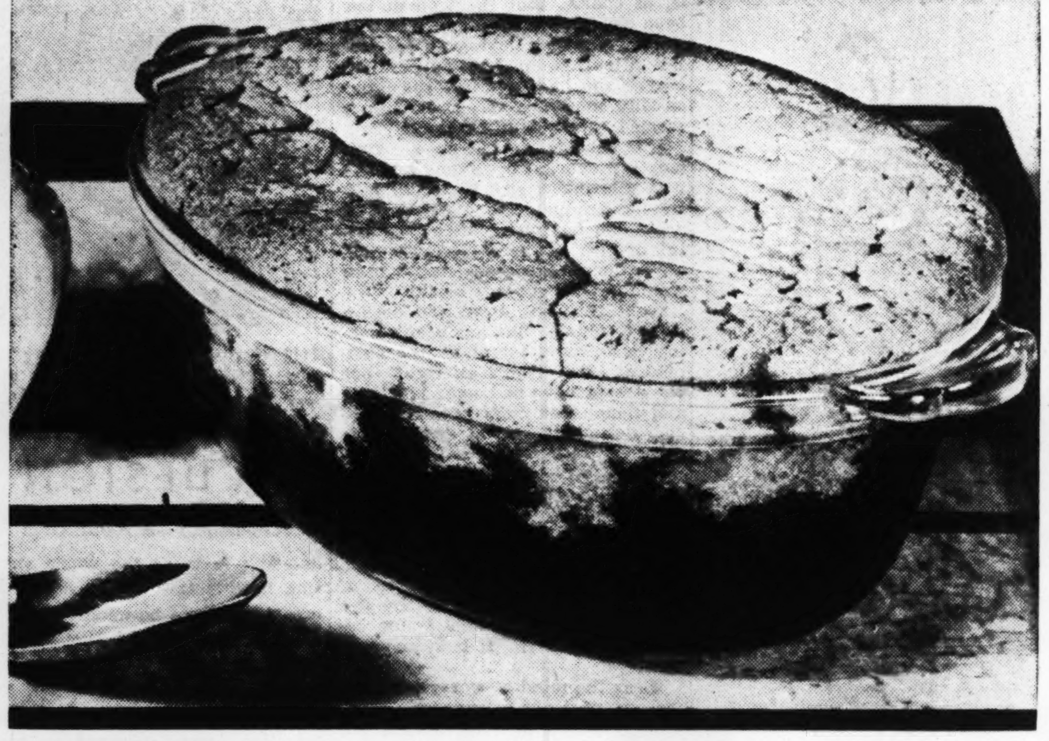
—o-o—

IN OUR CONSTANT SEARCH for novel table decorations, we were intrigued by one we saw at a dinner party the other night and we trust our kind hostess will forgive us for putting it into print. The motive for the table setting was found in the party itself, for the guests had been invited to come and help rake up the leaves that had accumulated around the place. After the guests had worked up a good appetite from their strenuous activities they were invited into the house to partake of a buffet supper. The centerpiece was a little wooden wheelbarrow, heaped with colorful autumn leaves with a few spilling out over the sides. At either end of this wheelbarrow were toy rakes crossed over one another and on the two outside prongs of each rake were placed red candles which cast a glow over the table.

THE MAGIC IN GRAPES

Collected in Recipes for Jellies, Cobblers, Custard Grape Pie, and Other Good Things for the Table.

GRAPE PACK MAKES A GOOD DESSERT.



A GRAPE COBBLER IS LIKELY TO CAUSE CHORTLES OF DELIGHT FROM THE FAMILY.

FRAGRANCE, color and flavor are the magic results of secret forces in nature. Clusters of blue grapes hang among flat, dull green leaves on twisty vines, and fill the crisp air with perfume making their use a personal challenge. Blue magic is scarce among foods. We like the color only where nature has placed it—in berries, in plums and in grapes. For sheer beauty and flavor the blue grape tops them all. It is not an easy thing to understand this magic or to harness it unharmed to everyday life, but it can be done.

For all cooking purposes except jelly making, grapes should be ripe and full of sweet juice, but firm and purple-blue in color. As soon as the skin turns blackish and shrivels a little, the peak flavor is past. If you have a vine of your own, pick each bunch as it ripens; if you buy at the market, buy only enough to last for one or two days.

There is a drawback to these grapes. They contain seeds. Eaten raw, the seeds slip down easily enough, embedded as they are in the slippery pulp. But when cooked the pulp softens and the seeds are released in the mouth, and so they present a problem. Since the appearance of some grape recipes rests on the use of whole grapes, cooks experimented and found that if a small slit is made in the stem end of a grape, the seeds can be pressed or dug out with the pointed end of a sharp, small knife, without in any way damaging the round appearance. The grapes swell during cooking and look as well as unseeded grapes, and the product is much easier to eat.

Where the recipe calls for cooked grapes, it is easy to slip the skins, heat the pulp over a low flame, and then press it through a coarse sieve, leaving the seeds behind.

Here is a most unusual and delicious recipe for grape cobbler. The cake portion, made of sour cream, is as light and tender as can be, a pleasure to eat. It can be served with cream, plain or whipped, but is so good, it can be served without a sauce or other embellishment.

GRAPE COBBLER

Four cups blue grapes.
One tablespoon butter.
One-fourth cup firmly packed brown sugar.
Two teaspoons grated orange rind.
One cup sifted cake flour.
One and one-half teaspoons baking powder..
One-eighth teaspoon baking soda.
One-eighth teaspoon salt.
One-fourth cup butter, or other shortening.
One-half cup sugar.
One egg, well beaten.
One-half cup heavy sour cream.

Wash grapes, and slip skins. Heat pulp, and press through strainer removing seeds. Add butter, sugar and orange rind to skins and cook over low heat 5 minutes. Turn half of mixture into greased casserole. Mix and sift together flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt three times. Cream butter; add sugar and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Add flour alternately with sour cream, a small amount at a time, beating until smooth after each addition. Place half of batter in casserole, add grape pulp to remaining skin mixture, and pour on top of batter; place remaining batter in ring shape on top of grape mixture and bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 45 to 50 minutes or until done. Serve with cream. Approximate yield, six portions.

And here is a grape ice, surprising in appearance as well as flavor. Light, yet rich in flavor, nothing could be better for the Thursday night dinner. (Maid's night out.)

GRAPE GLACE

Four pounds blue grapes.
One-fourth cup hot water.
One-half cup orange juice.
One-fourth cup lemon juice.
One cup sugar.
One cup water.
One cup heavy cream, whipped.
Two tablespoons powdered sugar.
One teaspoon vanilla.
Two-thirds cup walnut meats, coarsely chopped.

Wash grapes; slip the skins. Cook pulp, skins and water together over low heat 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Strain through cloth. Add fruit juices, sugar and water to grape juice. Turn into deep freezing tray of automatic refrigerator and freeze until of mushlike consistency. Stir well. Combine cream, sugar, vanilla and nutmeats. Place on top of grape mixture and freeze two hours longer or until cream is firm. Approximate yield: One quart ice.

The next recipe is for a Trauben Kuchen, really a custard grape pie of very fine flavor and texture.

TRAUBEN KUCHEN

One recipe plain pastry.
Three cups blue grapes.
One cup sugar.
One tablespoon cornstarch.
One cup light cream.
Three eggs slightly beaten.
One-half teaspoon cinnamon.

Line a shallow pie pan or baking pan with pastry. Wash grapes, make a small slit near stem end and remove seeds. Place grapes in pastry shell, sprinkle with one-half cup sugar; combine remaining sugar and cornstarch, then add cream slowly, mixing until smooth. Add eggs, pour over grapes and sprinkle with cinnamon. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) 15 minutes. Reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees F.) and bake 30 minutes longer or until filling is firm. Serve cold. Approximate yield: Six portions.

AUTUMN JELLY

Six ripe tomatoes.
Six medium sized cooking apples.
Two pounds under-ripe blue grapes.
One-half cup water.
Sugar.

Wash fruit; slice tomatoes and apples, and mash grapes. Combine fruits and water and cook over moderate heat 15 minutes. Strain through cloth. Add one cup sugar for each cup juice and boil rapidly 10 minutes, or until syrup sheets from spoon. Turn into hot sterilized jars; cool, seal with paraffin and store in cool place. Appromimate yield: Six (half-pint) jars of jelly.

SWISS LETTUCE ROLLS

Four large lettuce leaves.
One cup cottage cheese.
One-half cup chopped nuts.
One-half cup grated carrot.
One-half cup blue grapes, chopped.
Two tablespoons mayonnaise.

Dry and crisp lettuce. Combine remaining ingredients; spread on lettuce leaves and roll as tightly as possible. Chill for one hour. With a sharp knife cut in slantwise slices. Serve as garnish with meat, vegetable plate or salad. Approximate yields, six portions.

GRAPE PACK

One package lemon-flavored gelatin.
One and three-fourths ucps warm water.
Four cups blue grapes.
One-half cup water.
One-half cup sugar.
One-half cup heavy cream, whipped.

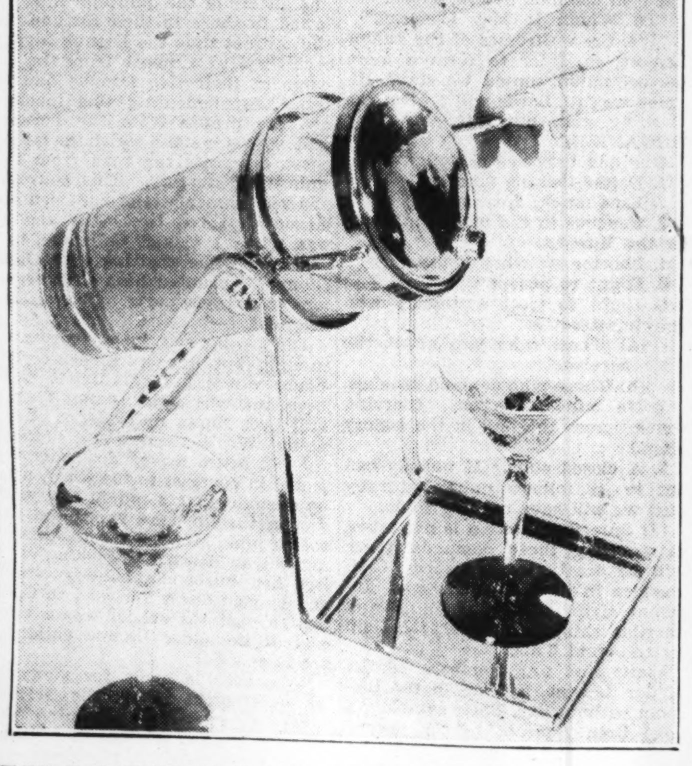
Dissolve gelatin in warm water. Chill until firm. Slip skins from grapes, heat pulp and force through coarse sieve to remove seeds. Chop skins, add water and cook 10 minutes. Strain, add sugar to juice and cook until dissolved. Chill. Place alternate spoonfuls of jelly and grape juice and top with whipped cream. Garnish with a whole grape. Approximate yield, six portions.

BAKED JELLIED GRAPES

Two cups blue grapes.
One-third cup quick-cooking tapioca.
three-fourths cup sugar.
Two cups warm water.
Two egg whites.
One-fourth cup powdered sugar.

Wash grapes. Make a slit in stem end and remove seeds. Place in baking pan or casserole. Cover with a mixture of tapioca and sugar. Add water and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) one hour. Beat egg whites until stiff, add sugar slowly, beating constantly until mixture stands in peaks. Spread on grapes and bake in moderate oven 15 minutes longer, or until meringue is brown. Cool. Approximate yield, six portions.

AUTOMATIC COCKTAIL SHAKER



TURN THE CRANK JUST AS VIGOROUSLY AS YOU DESIRE TO MIX THE COCKTAIL, AND TIP IT TO POUR INTO GLASSES.

Jellied Mushrooms

One tablespoon gelatin.
One-quarter cup cold water.
Two cups mushrooms, sliced thin.
Two cups boiling water.
One teaspoon salt.
One teaspoon lemon juice.
Lettuce.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Cook mushrooms in hot salted water until tender, about 20 minutes. Drain, saving liquid. Add liquid to gelatin, stirring until dissolved. Add lemon juice. Chill until thickened. Fold in mushrooms. Turn into individual molds and chill until firm. Unmold on lettuce. Approximate yield; Six portions. Serve with cold meat or egg salad.

Unusual Housecoat

If you are looking for a housecoat that is far different from the usual styles on display in the shops, take a tip from a noted American designer who has developed Scotch plaid woolen most effectively. Included in her collection is one trailing coat which employs plaid cashmere for a quaintly styled model. This has the fitted, basque waistline and the very full hemline after the manner of the old-fashioned wrapper.

Two Requisites Of a Woman's Sports Outfit

Blanket Plaid Coat and Suede Jacket Are Termed Necessary.

A BLANKET plaid coat and a suede jacket are two requisites of a sports wardrobe, whether the wearer participates in or merely watches the game. She adds to these more plaid and more suede, plenty of scarfs and the wooliest socks she can find.

Those blanket plaid coats are ideal for wear on cold days watching the football game. They serve as good substitutes, also, for regulation football blankets. Made of boldly patterned woolens, they are both warm and colorful. New and striking is a plaid blanket cape, suggested for spectator sports wear and later for skating or skiing. A typical one has a fringed hemline and a detachable hood. A wide belt with fringed edges is pulled through the armhole slashes and ties at the front.

—o-o—

THREE-PIECE SUITS combining plaid or checked with solid colored woolen have been worn at autumn sporting events and are regarded as exceedingly smart this season. These consist of separate skirt and overblouse or jacket with a short, casual topcoat of a boxy silhouette. The two-piece Scotch plaid suit also is a favorite and looks youthful and bright. Short fitted jacket and pleated skirt cut on the bias are typical companions. The alliance of a monotone tweed skirt with a single-breasted plaid jacket is another to consider in planning a striking costume.

The vogue of plaids also is represented in dresses. One and two piece types are equally popular, as are the one-piece, straight line silhouettes and the dress with umbrella skirt. Combinations of red and blue and blue and green seem to be accepted as the leaders and often are accompanied by matching Scotch caps.

—o-o—

A CLAN PLAID TWEED jacket which has a special "wind-proof" lining is a new item that is being featured extensively for outdoor wear in cold weather. This coat is hip length and belted and cut on loose lines so that it may be worn over a woolen suit, heavy dress or skating clothes. Another new plaid garment suitable for inclement weather is a full-length coat which has a water-proofed gabardine lining. It has a fair-weathed appearance when the plaid fabric is worn outside but becomes a rainy-day costume when the sides are reversed.

A matching cape and rug are regarded as chic additions to a spectator sports wardrobe. The two are shown of plaids and novelty patterned tweeds. Regardless of the motif there is a Scotch emphasis to the fabric. One cape is an adaptation of a Schiaparelli design. It crosses over at the front of the neckline with two wing-like taps giving a square look to the shoulders. The cape is full length, and the rug has generous proportions.

Cocoanut Souffle

Ingredients:
One cup milk.
Pinch salt.
Three tablespoons flour.
Two tablespoons butter.
Four tablespoons sugar.
Four egg-yolks.
One teaspoon vanilla.
One cup shredded cocoanut.
Four egg whites.

Melt butter, then add flour when well blended, stir in the milk. Cook until thickened and smooth. Beat egg-yolks with sugar and stir into milk mixture. Cool slightly, add vanilla and cocoanut. Lastly, fold in the stiffly beaten egg-whites. Bake in buttered pan in moderate oven 30 minutes. Serve hot with chocolate sauce.

After you have used a chamois skin for cleaning windows or washing the car, rinse it out three times, shake it well and hang it up to dry. Pull and shake it several times while it is drying. (That will keep it soft.) Chamois should be dried slowly—never directly in the sun or over heat.

CHANGES IN HOME

By Elizabeth Boykin

"AFTER a long hunt," writes Mrs. R. E. K., "I found just the house I wanted and now we're on the verge of moving in. In the settling down process, I'm planning on making some changes in our furnishings and would appreciate some suggestions. The place has just been repainted all in white throughout and looks very fresh for our old things. I'm beginning my changes with the living room and hope to accomplish some brightening up by means of slip covers, new curtains and a few additions.

"Here is the situation: We will buy a new sofa, a new chair and two new tables, not small, low ones but good sized lamp and book tables. I will make new slip covers for the old, easy chairs and will add new draperies. The old rug we'll keep. It's plain blue broadloom in a nice delft shade. The old furniture is heterogeneous, mostly mahogany and some is eighteenth century. I'd be grateful for any suggestions for these changes. The room will get hard wear so the furniture coverings at least must be sturdy."

Why not get chintz for the draperies—white preferably splashed with brilliant pattern in scarlet. Then have two of your easy chairs in plain red covering preferably leather, and a third in an all-over fabric in blues and reds. The sofa might be interesting in one of those new striped materials that are so smart now. You can select a material that can stand hard usage.

Fresh white shades for your lamps, picture frames in bamboo and accessories in pewter would give the room a pleasant finish. The new tables might be mahogany drum top style—that has a substantial feeling and would help coordinate the things you already have.

—o-o—

THESE BRIGHT young couples who live in tiny new apartments don't know what they're missing in not having gracious leisurely dining rooms. We're all "agin" the idea of doing without a real dining room for that should be the jolliest room on the place.

So we advocate doing without a lot of things before dispensing with the idea of having a dining room with good dining room furniture. After all it will get use enough through the years to warrant the investment.

A friend of ours who is just now graduating to a house with a dining room is all of a flutter over newspaper ads of dining room furniture she's been collecting. "But I can't decide on the style I want. What would you suggest?"

The ads all heralded the grand values available in furniture, but one appealed particularly . . . a Queen Anne suite of walnut, solidly made and yet graceful. With it we suggested a plain dusty blue rug of nubby textured quality, walls in soft ivory, draperies of printed linen predominantly copper in tone. Then accessories and accents in copper. 'Twould be unexpected but lovely to use copper with Queen Anne things.

Grate raw carrots and use them with prunes in gelatin salads. The salad may then be served as a separate course or with roast fowl, fish or meat.

The Methods Of Handling Roses in Fall

"Each Soil Imposes Different Requirements on Grower of Roses."

By Harriet W. Chandler

THE disputed question of how best to handle roses in the fall is agitating gardeners as the season ends and winter is about to drop the curtain on outdoor flowers. Different methods of fall planting and various forms of winter protection are vigorously debated.

An answer to the babel of conflicting advice comes from a rosarian of note in our own midst, C. B. Fall of Webster Groves says that each site and each soil imposes different requirements on the grower of roses, who must experiment until he discovers what treatment will give best results in his own garden. As Dr. Horace McFarland says, "Rose growing is not a certain, but a most delightful plant adventure." A visit to Fall's garden at any time during the season will convince one that he has discovered the magic of how, when and what to do for roses in and about St. Louis. In a general way his methods can be followed by local amateurs.

To begin with, he never courts trouble by planting roses that do not like our climate, but selects only those that will stand our drouths and with reasonable care will resist disease. He plants his roses where they look best, but emphasizes the fact that roses must have sun at least two or three hours a day and water at all times. Our hot, dry summers reduce mildew and black-spot, two troublesome diseases, but call for more water, which should be applied to the point of saturation once or twice a week, to get down to the lower roots. He finds that a good clay loam will satisfy his roses if plenty of manure is worked in at the bottom of the hole below the main roots but within reach of rootlets descending from them. Perfect drainage is given each plant. A big hole is made and the rose planted on a small cone of soil with roots spread downward. The soil is then packed down hard in contact with the roots, and the hole is half filled with water. After this seeps in, the rest of the soil will not have to be packed so closely.

IN JUNE, after the first abundant bloom, the roses are fed with any good complete commercial fertilizer, a tablespoon to each plant. The earth is drawn back as a shallow basin around each plant, and fertilizer sprinkled in; then the soil spread over this again and a good soaking given, as the plant will only take up its food in liquid form. This is repeated in six weeks.

There is a general agreement that fall purchases of roses are more satisfactory than buying in the spring, as spring shipments often come too late. The difference of opinion here is whether to plant in the fall or to heel the plants in so that they will be ready to be put in their places in early spring. Many of our best growers claim that roses planted in fall are a year ahead of those set out in spring. These roses start new roots right away and continue growing in the late fall and through our open winters, even though the top of the plant seems entirely dormant. Then when the warm weather comes, and the sap starts to rise, the plants have good roots and are all set to make rapid growth.

Commercial rose growers dig their roses in fall and keep them in cold storage through the winter. These are what we get to plant in spring, and if our season is unfavorable and the dormant rose cannot go into the ground before the fifteenth of April, it will have a hard time to make enough root to support life where our weather warms up so rapidly.

Roses can be planted with us from the middle of November on, as long as the soil can be packed hard enough around the roots to make the necessary contact for root growth to start. To hill up the soil six or eight inches around each plant and fill in the trenches with fresh manure is enough protection for newly planted roses in this section.

Cholly Knickerbocker, the society chatterer, tells me that Ina Claire and Clifton Webb are the only two troupers really accepted socially by local swells. But I said why Cholly old gadabout, how about Fred Astaire, once an Austerlitz of Omaha and now the boy-friend of the Whitneys and the only actor member of the holy Racquet and Tennis Club, and how about his sister Adele, who is Lady Cholly Cavendish of Mayfair, Ireland, and way-points? I fawncy I had Cholly there!

ALL OUR LOVERS of perfect singing of sad, sweet German songs fought their way into our Town Hall the other night to hear Richard Tauber, the German tenor whose lieder-singing is about tops. It is his first local stopover in six years, and he brought his new wife along—beauteous British actress, Diana Napier, and what a high-class name that is! A novelist should have thought it up first!

Well, that grub-worshiping outfit of ours, The Gourmet Society, has begun its season of food-idolatry. Its first service was held at Ridgefield, Conn., for a dinner typical of that fine old State, including baby turkey, steamed raisins and chestnuts, and pumpkin pie. No smoking during the meal, and all these precious fanatics must tie their napkins under their chins. The food's fine, but all this palate-dandling makes me howl.

● THE NEWEST STORE to catch my avid eye is "The Map Shop," opened by the classic topographers, Rand-McNally, from those atlases some of us learned to location of Teirra del Fuego, which we promptly forgot. There are millions of map-nuts in the world, and how they'll go mad for this new shop, with its maps, globes, atlases, almanacs and guides. It's on Fiftieth street, in Rockefeller Center, if you're an addict.

—o-o—

A FIFTH AVENUE store has just caught the idea of installing a smart girl to act as clothes counselor for bachelors, who are so often lost and befuddled when buying duds. "The wife pro tem" is Alice Chooljian, 23, from over in Jersey. Alice says she prepped for the job by helping Pop and Brother buy their clothes for several years. Seems to me like an exceptionally crafty notion!

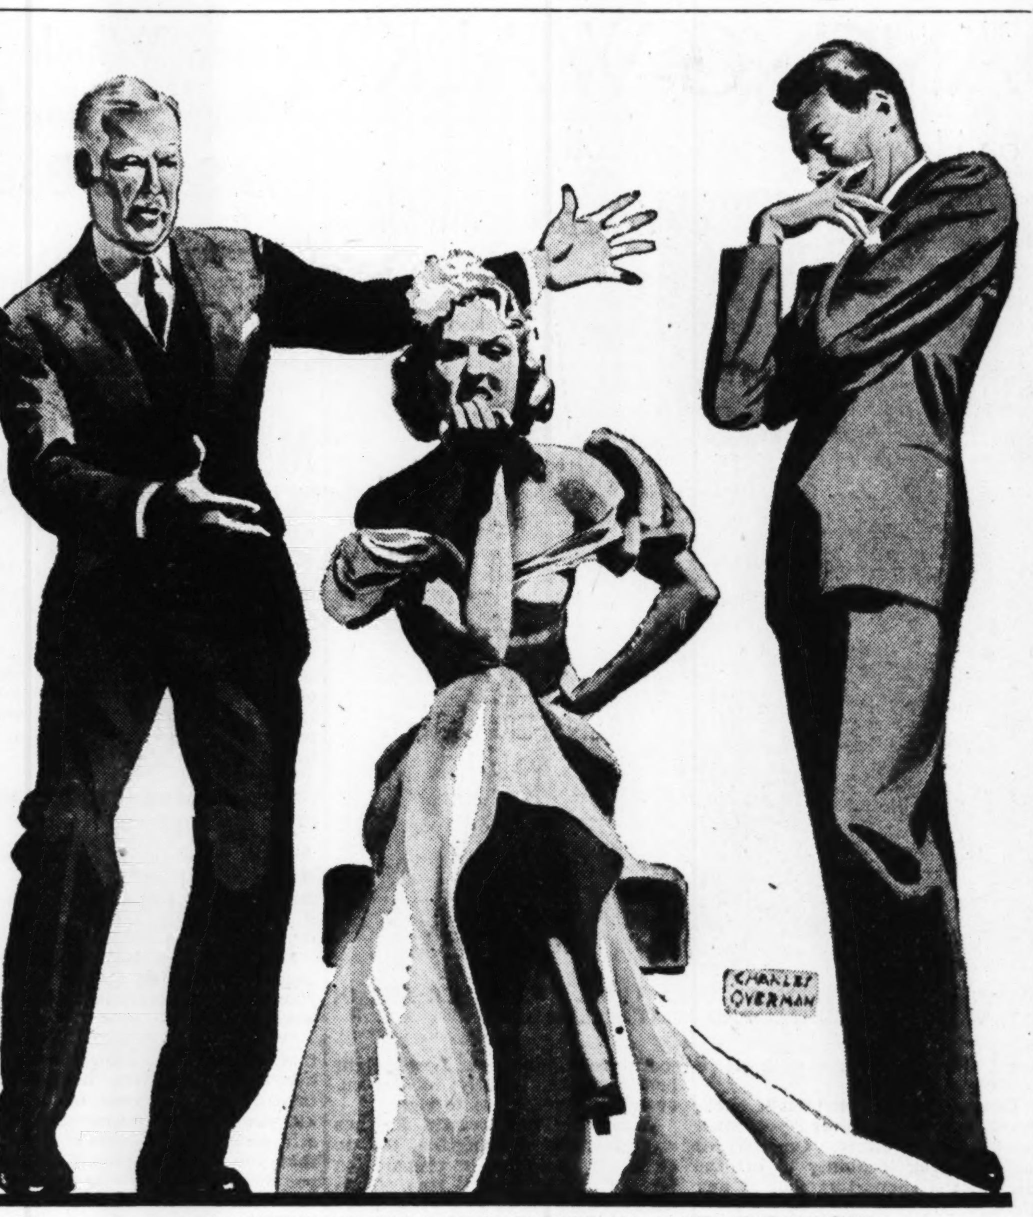
I'VE OFTEN TOLD YOU about the various sports-trains that steam from Forty-second street to open country—for skiing, boating and bike-riding. This week a brand-new one chuffed out of town—a "husking bee train" which hauled a load of overalled and ginghamed youngsters to Kent, Conn., for one of those fall jamborees. Most of the kids had never even heard of such an orgy, but they'll try everything. All for $3, trip, food and so on. Railroads are getting smart!

WOMEN Hate to Be TOLD---BUT ARE

They Are Forced To Listen to Advice From Males On All Subjects.

By MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL



FROM FATHER TO BOY FRIEND, THEY'RE ALL ALIKE—THEY KNOW!

"MAYBE mother knows best, but try to tell it to father! The one thing of which he's convinced, beyond any possible, probable shadow of doubt, is that father knows best and mother's an idiot."

Thus spoke one of New York's upper-bracket business women, in a voice which was a nice blend of exasperation and amusement. Four of us had lunched together—the feminine executive with the five-figure annual income; the red-haired woman artist whose striking cover-girls pull 'em in to the newsstands; the attractive and sophisticated wife of an economic royalist, and myself. Over the coffee and the cigarettes we were swapping data on our best friends and severest critics—men.

No one of us is a man-hater—far from it! But all agreed that even the nicest men of our acquaintance had one apparently incurable bad habit. They will persist in "telling us"! They flood the hapless female with their oceans of gratuitous advice on every possible subject, from babies to business, from lacquered nails to love affairs, from how to take care of our money to how to take care of our husbands.

When it comes to setting the little woman right, there's a line in "Omar Khayyam" which just describes the average man—"he knows about it all, he knows, he knows!" And he isn't a bit bashful about spilling his knowledge.

All of us at the lunch-table were not only free, white and over 21; three had become successful and solvent in their chosen callings, while the fourth was just as smart at her own job of managing two homes, four children and half-a-dozen committees. You'd say we had proved competence and common sense. Nevertheless, the gentlemen, bless 'em, consider us in constant need of fatherly counsel!

The red-haired illustrator was ready with her illustration.

"My landlord's renting agent dropped into the studio the other day to ask for the renewal of my lease. He stepped up to look at the cover on which I'm at work.

"'Very pretty!' he approved. 'But it would look better if you had put a red dress on the girl. And why don't you make her mouth more pouty—the way Harlow's used to be? You'd have a nicer picture.'"

The artist, whose temper matches her hair, ground out the end of a cigarette, half-smoked. "I said, 'My good man—and then I said to myself, 'Heck, what's the use?'" she finished. "A man—any man—can tell you, but you can't tell him."

"Don't I know it!" sighed the wife and mother in our party. "I can't fire the second girl without Dan's going into a dissertation on how I ought to run the house the way he runs his business. And most of my servants stay with me forever, while he's still in the throes of a sit-down strike at two of his factories. Never mind—he can instruct me how to handle my labor problem."

The woman executive smiled and shrugged.

—o-o—

"THEY'RE all alike," she summed up. "My favorite stenographer came up to me this morning seething with suppressed fury. I asked her what was wrong.

"'Mr. Hendricks'—he's the head of one of our departments—'has been giving me fatherly advice again!" she burst out. 'He's just explained how much money I ought to save every week. He hopes I eat plenty of simple, nourishing food—girls who diet are very foolish. Also, he thinks I ought not to wear such thin shoes when it rains. Aside from these things, there's nothing the matter with me. The darned old fool! Why can't he attend to his own affairs?'

"I shouldn't have let her go on, but I know Hendricks—and I know how she felt. He's the man who's always anxious to instruct me how to invest my bonus, and yet he's the easiest mark in the office for shyster stock salesmen."

Just then the waiter brought the check, so I had no chance to make my own contribution on the topic of the supervisory sex. But it is a fact that men—some of them utter strangers—have offered me anxious admonition on a variety of occasions.

It would seem as if men might have enough business of their own to mind, without perpetually intervening in ours. But no—like my friend just mentioned, they are nothing if not unselfishly helpful. Of course, if we wanted to be nasty, we might point out that the present state of a man-managed world is no testimonial to the sex's qualifications for distributing words of wisdom.

Mostly, however, we girls suffer in silence—or sputter to one another. And men, at least, play no favorites. Practically all women are beneficiaries of this benevolent concern for the regulation of their daily lives.

That there are no exemptions even for fortunate women possessed of success, sophistication, wealth, wit, I discovered during an interview with Sophie Kerr. She is the author of "Fine to Look At," "There's Only One" and other delightful tales which rank her among the most popular and prosperous of women novelists.

"Some of my best friends are men," she began cheerfully. "I like them! And yet the thing which 'riles my soul' is the advisory behavior of the male sex towards the female sex.

"You'd suppose that men would admit a woman might know her own mind about her own home," the novelist continued with humorous indignation. "Not at all! I remember the first man to whom I proudly pointed it out, after I'd signed the papers but before I moved in. He looked pained.

"'You don't want to buy a house,' he admonished. 'It's too much of a burden for a woman like yourself. You'd be more comfortable in an apartment.'

"Other men have explained earnestly how mistaken I am in the management of my house. 'You ought not to stay there nights without a lot of servants,' they expostulate. 'You should have more than just a cook sleeping on the premises. You don't know what you're doing.'

"What I'd like to do is to answer: 'Oh, I don't, don't I? I haven't known my cook for years, haven't I? I can't be trusted on human psychology, can't I? Teach your grandmother to suck eggs!'

"Why, I even had one man tell me perfectly seriously that, when I come home from a dinner party, I ought to order the taxi to stop down the block—it would be so much safer for me than getting out in front of my own door," she finished.

"Then there are the men, not even on the edge of the literary world, who think they can advise me how to write my books. One gentleman the other day felt that it was his duty to change the course of my career.

"'You ought to write essays, instead of stories,' he informed me kindly. 'It would be better for you.'

"'But why should I write essays?' I demanded. 'I'm a novelist and a story-teller—it's the way I make my living.'

"'Yes, but writing essays would be better for the permanence of your reputation—more dignified,' he argued.

"'Fudge and fiddlesticks!' said I.

"However, no woman can attempt to snub all her male mentors. Their number is legion, and in no place is she safe from them. Just last night, when I salted my soup, my dinner partner interfered.

"'You ought not to use so much salt. It burns up the blood.'

"'I like to have my blood burn up,' I answered, and took another pinch."

Plenty of men, Sophie Kerr admitted, have suggested that she should wed again—she is Mrs. Underwood in private life—instead of living alone and liking it.

"But that's easy," she twinkled once more. "When it's a husband who hands out this line, I look sweet and regretful as I murmur: 'All the nice men are married!' As for the bachelors, they're so busy keeping in the clear that they wouldn't give a woman an opening by bringing up the subject of wedding bells.

It appears that man's tutorial tendency toward womankind may be summed up in one word—a hangover. Or, as Sophie Kerr puts it:

"After considerable thought I've decided that the advisory capacity in the male mind is like the appendix in his body—a vestigial remnant. It's all that is left of his patriarchal power. He tells women what they ought to do today because, no farther back than Victorian times, he is supposed to have made them stand around.

—o-o—

"AND yet even Victorian women, judging from their portraits, were not unhappy. I can't help feeling that, instead of standing around before Father the Terrible, they learned how to stand out from under. In my own girlhood home, I can remember how my father used to give orders—only he never noticed, afterward, whether they were obeyed. So maybe Victorian women, and those before them, had learned the trick of saying, 'Yes, dear, you're very wise,' then doing exactly as they pleased.

"It is, at any rate, an inspiring thought! For, of course, that's the trick wise women know today, when men tell them what to do and how to do it. Men can't be cured of giving advice, but why try? They enjoy themselves so much in the role of omniscient authority. Why interfere with their simple pleasure?"

Woman to woman, we exchanged a long meaningful glance.

"And so," I prompted, "when a man tells a girl that she ought not to have anything to do with that fellow, or that she ought to get married and raise a family, or that even a woman ought to know better than—"

"Why, she says, 'How right you are!'" Sophie Kerr purred. "She listens with a smile, the smile of the cat that swallowed the canary. And then she acts as she had intended acting from the first. Because, no matter how much superfluous advice a woman gets from a man, she doesn't have to take it!"

Napoleon, no less, declared that "you must bring up women who believe and not women who argue. The feebleness of the female brain, the instability of their ideas . . ."

Lord Byron went all out with the stipulation that a woman should have no more intelligence than "enough to be able to understand and value mine, but not sufficient to be able to shine herself. All men with pretensions desire this: though few, if any, have courage to avow it."

By comparison, the modern man is indeed a modest violet—so if he still wants to inform and instruct us girls, why not let the poor dear have his bit of fun?

Well-Groomed Man Keeps an Eye on Detail

"Don't Be Too Busy to Maintain Spick-and-Span Appearance."

IF you're a genius, a millionaire or a castaway on a palm-fringed isle you don't have to worry about your appearance. You can be as shabby as you please.

But if you're not an eccentric, a magnate or a ship-wrecked sailor you should have a decent concern for your dress and its condition. Your employer didn't engage you because you looked like a collar ad, but you can be sure that some of the good impression you made came from your spick-and-span appearance. Don't be too busy to keep yourself that way.

Here are a few suggestions to help you keep that well-groomed appearance:

Don't wear a suit two days in succession. Good materials return to their unwrinkled shape when they have a "rest," making for sound economy, by cutting pressing bills. Two suits worn alternately last more than three times as long as one worn day after day.

—o-o—

HANG YOUR SUITS on wooden clothes hangers. Those thin wire affairs the tailor sends your clothes home on leave a crease across the trousers and permit the shoulders of the jacket to sag.

Don't get suits that fit too tightly. The strain takes all the "bounce" out of the material, shortens its life enormously.

If you're conspicuously stout don't buy clothes which dramatize your size. Vertical stripes on dark or medium-dark materials will give a slimming effect. Single-breasted suits are better for short, stout men than the double-breasted ones.

Harmonize your accessories. Men, once they get around to giving a few moments attention to color-blending in dress, discover they're just as good at it as their wives. Don't be afraid to experiment with colors.

Pay particular attention to the "V" formed by your collar line and coat lapels. This area, though relatively small, is most conspicuous. If it's "dressed properly," chances are you'll present a picture of good grooming. A neatly tied necktie of good material, of a color to blend or contrast with your suit can do wonders.

—o-o—

IF YOU HAVE a short neck don't wear a high collar. It's possible to buy either stiff (preferred) or soft collars which conform to your peculiar neck construction.

If you wear a soft collar use a collar pin, unless it has tabs or buttons down. Pins should be plain.

A pocket handkerchief gives a final, smart touch to a man's dress if it's right. Wear a white handkerchief (of good linen) with a white shirt or white collar. Wear a harmonious colored square otherwise.

Tailored Fur Coat

The furriers are handling the season's favorite pelts with such nonchalant assurance that they treat fox as casually as though it were tweed, and Persian lamb as though it were crude cotton. Among their latest ideas is a coat cut along severe reefer lines but made of luxurious fur. It is as tailored as those trim suits made famous by Creed. A double-breasted closing, notched lapels and braid binding are part of its distinction.

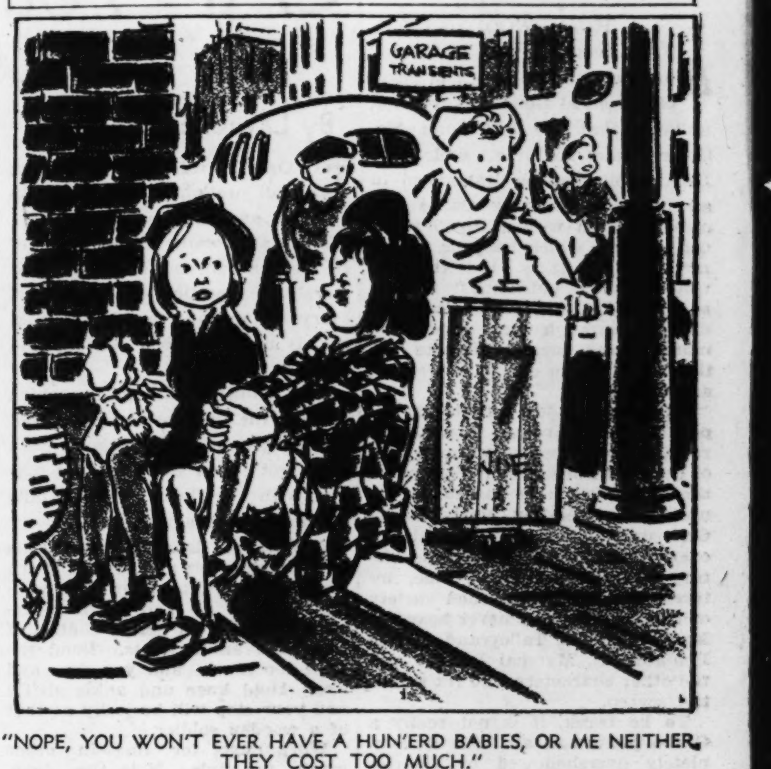
All Not High Hats

Not all of the winter hats have great height to recommend them. Some go to the other extreme and, while luxurious in their fabric and trimming, are as low as milliners can make them. One little sailor, for example, has a crown less than two inches high. This unusual hat is made of black Persian lamb fitted very smoothly over the crown and the brim, and there is a big red rose placed flat against the brim over the right eye.

Juvenile Stockings

Bare knees are still fashionable in juvenile fashion circles but a cleverly-styled stocking introduced recently assures cold weather comfort. This stocking is really two stockings in one, there being the regulation sock with cuff top to which is attached a flesh colored upper section. Various color schemes are featured so that there is no chance of losing the bright appeal of the usual cuff style of sock.

ON OUR BLOCK By Jack Welch



"NOPE, YOU WON'T EVER HAVE A HUN'ERD BABIES, OR ME NEITHER. THEY COST TOO MUCH."

UNIQUE ARRANGEMENTS IN HEADDRESS THEMES

A HEAD is covered or nearly so, according to the latest dictates governing evening fashions. For most formal occasions smartly dressed women are preferring feathers, jeweled tiaras and flower garlands while their dinner costumes are topped by various new millinery conceits ranging from the tiny calot of sequins to the wide sweeping velvet hat with ostrich trimming.

This vogue has taxed the designers of headdresses to the limit and brought out some unique arrangements. Feathers, perhaps, offer the most striking innovation over the headdress themes of a year ago. They also contribute an emphasis of grandeur to an ensemble and a certain dignity that most floral pieces lack. Sprays, clusters of ostrich tips and even clipped wings of birds are posed on sleek coiffures this season.

One of the most dramatic coiffure ornaments suggested for formal wear consists of a bird with outstretched wings to be clipped to the front roll of the hair. These wings usually have an artificial appearance with gilded covering although brilliantly shaded feathers also are accepted. The arrangement is daring and calls for a youthful, but sophisticated wearer and hair arranged very sleek.

—o-o—

ANOTHER arresting type of headdress consists of two sprays of burnt goose resembling Paradise. These are attached to a narrow bandeau which is worn under a rolled coiffure. One spray is adjusted so that it sweeps downward at the side while the other swings directly upward. Less spectacular but decidedly dignified is the use of one upstanding spray placed at the center back or front of the head.

In the handling of ostrich tips, there is equal opportunity to affect a grand-lady manner and more opportunity for flattery. The high treatment of ostrich which looks like a little tree placed on the head is arresting while the lower and wider treatment giving the effect of many little curls is new. Again one sees ostrich handled as though it were ribbon with a cluster at the side front where a bow would be expected.

It's still considered smart to tie two tiny bows of ribbon at either side of the head, little-girl fashion and the use of handsome jeweled clips arranged in the shape of bows is equally piquant and youthful. Real diamonds are being worn in hair clips and diadems, proving that a woman will spare no expense this season to make her coiffure look as elegant as her costume.

—o-o—

FOR LESS FORMAL attire, little sequin caps are being suggested to match sequin jackets. These are available in sets or as separate items. Black, gold, silver and multicolored types are displayed as accessories. The millinery shops have others, especially the familiar one that fits the head snugly and adds a novelty flaring veil.

Flower caps are rivaling the glittering ones for dinner wear. One of the most attractive on display in St. Louis has white velvet gardenias massed on a black velvet foundation. Velvet roses in shades of pink and dark red are arranged on a wine colored velvet foundation to provide another interesting model.

These small caps are being exploited more generally in St. Louis than are the wide-brimmed dinner hats but the picturesque quality of the large chapeau fits so perfectly into the scheme of dinner suits that women here are expected to adopt the style before many weeks have passed.

Increasing Interest In Longer Suit Jacket

INCREASING interest is apparent in the longer suit jacket which has a fitted waistline and a flaring tunic. The general acceptance of this silhouette for late fall and early winter wear gives indication that it may be a leader for spring costumes. Separate jackets of plaid woolens or suede as well as coats that match skirts or frocks are appearing in this style. The favorite length is finger tip. Waistlines are closely fitted to the figure by means of darts and the use of a belt is left to the individual preference of the wearer.

ON THE FLICKER FRONT

By H. H. NIEMEYER

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 30.

AT the moment, with Hollywood producers setting such store in biographical films that it is not unlikely that the late John McGraw, James J. Corbett and Steve Brodie will soon be dramatized in all their glory, Greta Garbo has come through with a fine historical romance which happens to run pretty true to facts. It is the film which started out almost a year ago as "Countess Walewska" and dragged through long production months, and several changes of titles, to blossom out, at a preview, as "Conquest."

Exaggerating just a trifle the importance of Napoleon Bonaparte's romance with the lovely young wife of the aged Polish Count Walewska, the dramatists have turned out an upstanding Big-Boy-Meets-Little-Girl story which will appeal to every worshiper of Napoleonic history and, at the same time, interest the common, garden variety of cinema fans who never heard of Mrs. Walewska, Talleyrand, Prince Peniatowski, Marshal Duroc and the other characters who flit across the screen.

To be frank, it is not really a Garbo picture at all. She is completely overshadowed by Charles Boyer, who gives a superb portrayal of the Emperor. At all times he dominates the film and there is not a flaw, anywhere, in his characterization. True, if the Walter Winchells of the period are to be believed, the Walewska affair was not the only romance in Bonaparte's life but, for screen purposes at least, it was his one big passion and in "Conquest," the movies make the most of it.

—o-o—

● GARBO DOES about all that any actress could do with her role. She plays the countess in the accepted Garbo manner, making her the clinging vine type but every time she seems about to rise to the heights, Napoleon enters and takes possession of the scene. Miss Garbo is really to be congratulated upon her restraint. Few women stars would have consented to play second fiddle to a leading man and even less temperamental, if any, ones would have demanded that Napoleon, history or no history, be shot in the first reel and seen no more.

One of the high spots in "Conquest" is the retreat from Moscow with Napoleon, it seems, covering most of the distance back to Paris through the snow on foot. This gives an opportunity for one of the great dramatic moments of the play, a moment which centers around a wounded soldier of the Guard who seeks, and finds, lasting peace in a snow drift. The howls of a mongrel dog, which refused to desert his dying master, were almost drowned in the sobs which came from a hard-boiled preview audience.

"Conquest" is a fine picture, a truly great one and make a memorandum to see it when it reaches St. Louis. And, too, peg Boyer's performance as one likely to win the Academy Award next March, an award which, up to now, seemed most likely to go to Robert Montgomery for his role in "Night Must Fall" or Paul Muni for his Zola.

—o-o—

● JACKIE COOGAN, whose last picture, "Home on the Range," made three years ago, was a rather dismal come-back attempt by the former kid star, has been signed by Paramount to play opposite his bride-to-be, Betty Grable, in "College Swing." . . . George Arliss is coming back to America to make a screen play of the life of John D. Rockefeller providing the Rockefeller family will consent. And Norma Shearer, getting into the biographical swing, has commenced work on "Marie Antoinette." . . . Mervyn LeRoy is trying to tempt Rafael Sabatini to desert Europe and come to Hollywood long enough to dramatize Jack London's "The Sea Wolf." If he succeeds it will be the author's first try at film writing although his own "Captain Blood" was made into a pretty good picture by another scenarist.

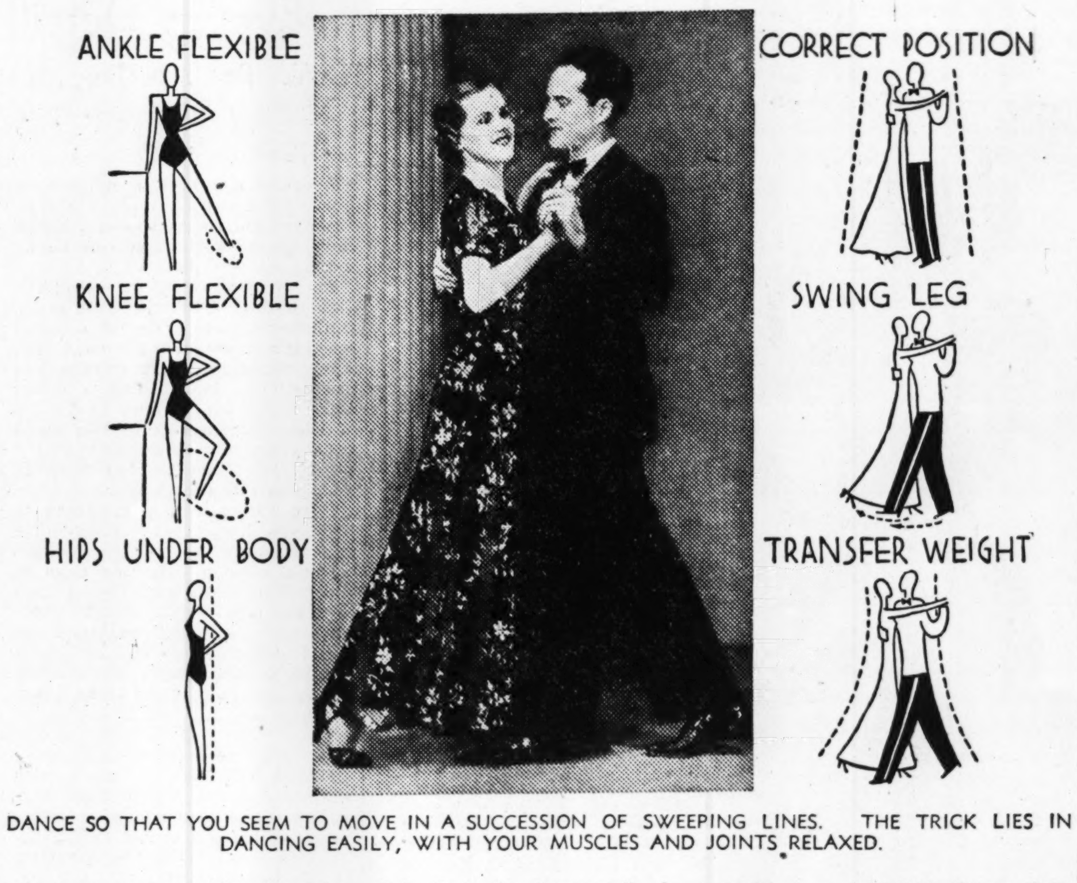
PARAMOUNT has signed John Barrymore to a three-year contract—but had to take Elaine Barrie as part of the arrangement. Elaine (Mrs. Barrymore) will make her bow in a screen feature picture in the next Dietrich film, "French Without Tears," in which John will have the leading male role. . . . Clark Gable, who has been living in a Beverly Hills hotel ever since he and Mrs. Gable separated two years ago, is going to build a ranch house on a lot of acreage in the San Fernando Valley and raise race horses. . . . And Gable's stream-lined trailer for his pet horse, Sonny, is one of the major wonders of Hollywood. . . . Laurence Schwab, who came out here from Municipal Opera in Forest Park to be a producer for Twentieth Century-Fox, is moving over to M-G-M.

Lee Carrillo's desire to be the next Governor of California is really pretty serious. . . . There are rumors that Bill Hart, out of pictures for a long time, is coming back. . . . Cary Grant's recent hit in "The Awful Truth" has boosted his salary to 75 grand per picture. As Archie Leach his pay check in Forest Park was slightly under that figure.

CAN You DO the DANCING-WALK?

The First of a Series of Articles on How to Dance Correctly

By Lawrence Hostetler



DANCE SO THAT YOU SEEM TO MOVE IN A SUCCESSION OF SWEEPING LINES. THE TRICK LIES IN DANCING EASILY, WITH YOUR MUSCLES AND JOINTS RELAXED.

TO DANCE well, you must first of all walk well—walk backward as easily as forward.

The dance-walk is the basis of all modern ballroom dancing. It is merely a modification of correct every-day walking, and, like walking, is built on good posture and carriage.

But unlike walking—in which you lift the knee to carry the foot off the ground—in the dance-walk your foot skims along in light contact with the floor. This permits minimum knee action.

A finished dancer's movements have smoothness and style. Work first for smoothness, or even gliding, without up and down movements. The trick lies in control of knee and ankle joints. Bend the knee too much—and you dip and rise. Hold knee and ankle stiffly and your step will be jerky as that of a wooden soldier.

Work next for line—in other words, for style. Note the long, sweeping curve from back of head to heel of the girl in illustration—photographed the instant her toe is glued to floor, allowing her back leg to be perfectly straight.

But while modern dancing seems to give a succession of sweeping lines, it's just a clever illusion you're staging which contributes vastly to grace and general appearance. Be careful not to hold the leg stiff. When it receives weight, flex the knee slightly without giving the impression of bending it.

Let's analyze the forward step of the man with his partner in the three sketches to the right of photograph.

First, he assumes correct standing position—hips well under torso, not thrust forward as in the debutante slouch, nor backward in bustle effect. He sways the entire body forward until heels can be easily lifted. For balance, he carries weight over balls of feet as much as possible.

Now he swings left leg forward, toe pointing straight ahead. He lets the foot skim lightly along the floor until leg is fully extended, as in second sketch. For just an instant the heel receives the weight before it is carried to the ball of the foot.

As weight is transferred to the left foot, the toe of the right foot remains glued to the floor, allowing this leg to become perfectly straight—an unbroken curve from head to heel, as in third sketch.

As the body moves forward, the right leg will swing through, almost brushing the left leg. But guard against knee interference, which will spoil the whole picture. To carry the leg forward requires little effort. Let joints and muscles be relaxed as it moves. Keep in mind that the dance-walk is a gliding movement.

Ordinarily we don't walk backward, but to dance well you must do it without effort. One test of light dancing is ability to lift the heel of the supporting foot at any time.

Before taking a backward step, sway forward wih the entire body until you can lift both heels. See girl's position in the first sketch to right of photograph. Flex left knee and swing right leg backward as far as the toe will reach. Until this leg is stretched fully back, keep weight on ball of supporting foot.

To complete the step, merely transfer weight from forward left foot to rear right foot. Lower right heel, flex knee slightly; inconspicuously sway right hip to right.

Meanwhile the forward leg has straightened, allowing the toe to come off the floor in preparation for the next backward step. Thus the sequence flows along rhythmically in graceful, swinging movement, through ankle, knee and hip in the order named.

Once you have become skillful in this dance-walk, you will find that most dance steps are just variations of walking, such as stepping sidewise, turning, pausing, or changing rhythm.

Next in the series on "How to Dance" will appear tomorrow in the Post-Dispatch Daily Magazine.

Dressy Blouses Are an Aid to Fall Costumes

THOSE who like to get the most service out of autumn suits as well as those who enjoy mixing their own costumes welcome the vogue of dressy blouses. They may choose from a great variety of materials and styles and attain an expensive-looking costume suitable for the tea or cocktail hour with surprisingly little outlay of money.

One of the most inexpensive blouses that creates an impression of elegance is made of synthetic jersey. It is a long sleeved, draped model. A slide fastener extends the length of the front, supplying a decorative note as it is surrounded by the shirring which gives the draped line to the blouse. White, black and wine red are available but of the three the white is most dramatic because of the contrast of the glistening black zipper.

—o-o—

ANOTHER long-sleeved blouse that is made of satin employs pleats to supply a supple drapery. These pleats are placed on either shoulder and stitched to yoke depth when they form soft folds that are gathered into a cluster at the front of the waistline. The result is a brief overblouse, extending only slightly below the normal waistline. Sleeves are long and have fullness at the shoulders.

Noted among other interesting long-sleeved blouses are several which show modifications of the peasant theme with smocking or deep shirring at neckline and sleeves. Satin is the favored material although crepe continues to be used. The overblouse type is stressed and there are jewel tones as well as black and white.

Jacket blouses may be long or short of sleeve and fit into the season's scheme of fashion. Metallic fabrics are the choice of the majority because they have the most glamorous appearance and do most to dress up a costume. A long-sleeved type much in vogue at present follows the line of the short, fitted jacket. Sleeves are long and straight and there is no collar to mar the trim cut of the V neckline.

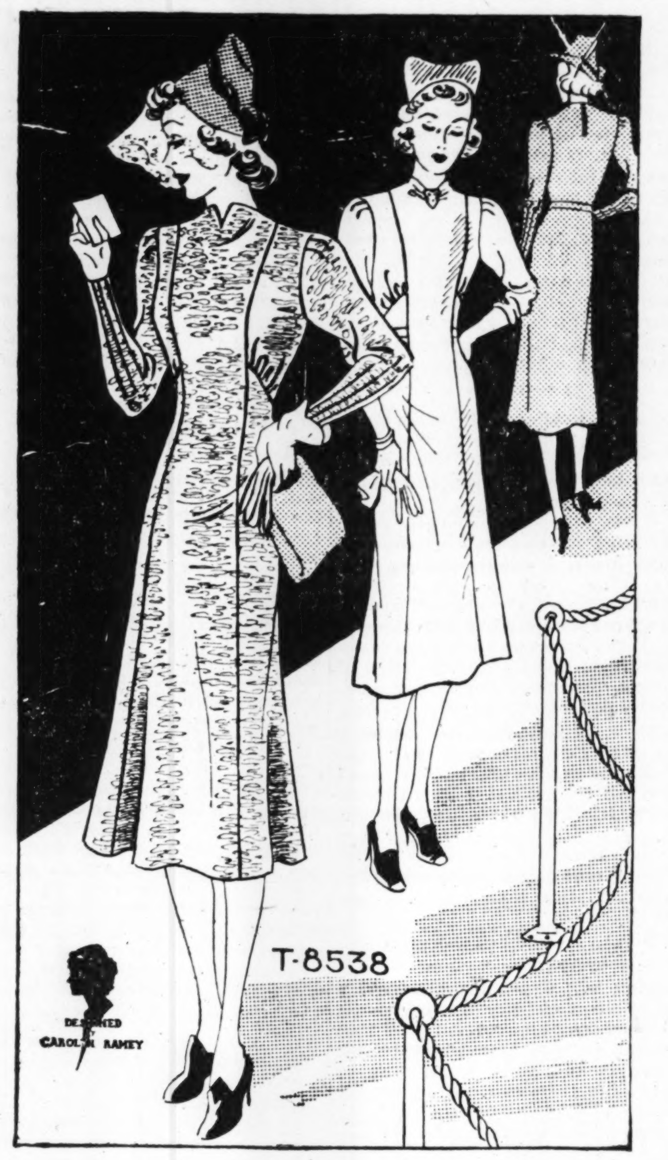
Upholstery fabrics as well as metallics are used for many of the short-sleeved blouses designed along jacket lines. The fitted waistline and short peplum are features of most of these, the shorter jacket types being reserved for double-duty dress needs. Often a brightly colored Ascot scarf is tucked into the neckline. A typical model made with short sleeves that are square and wide at the shoulders adds a vivid scarf of chiffon. The glass buttons that fasten the blouse match the scarf in shade.

A striking crepe blouse that has different lines from many adds a shallow yoke to which the lower section is gathered. A boat neckline is arresting, especially in combination with the puffed sleeves that are padded so that they stand rather high on the shoulders.

A twisted neckline gives a soft draped effect to the front of another blouse that is made of lame and is sufficiently dressed up to be worn in the evening. The waistline is fitted with darts at either side and the peplum which is short is cut very straight. Sleeves are mere puffs of the glistening material.

CAMPUS MODES

By Carolyn Ramey



FOR that straight, slim look that everyone likes, I give you this frock. Besides being smart, it does wonderful things for your figure. The high Empire waistline gives you a long-legged look, but wards off the flat chest, which we can't afford to have these days.

The lines are simple so that the dress is easy to make, in fact you could run it up on a week-end if you don't have too many dates. Then, too, there is the possibility of surprising the latest heart-throb with a neat little number you made all by yourself.

The back of the skirt has a little bit of fullness held under control by the belt, and a zipper down the back is a decided advantage when you are in a hurry. There is no fussiness to get out of order so the dress will always be ready for you to grab and fall into at a moment's notice. Either silk or wool is grand for this design, so choose your favorite.

Style No. T-8538 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Send 15 cents (coins preferred) for pattern to CAMPUS MODES, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, 119 W. 19th St., New York City.

And Now Vogue Turns Back to 'Pill-Box' Hats

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.

WE can't remember a fall when millinery silhouettes have varied so drastically, and never has a certain type of hat been so completely chic one month and so absolutely passe the next.

At the beginning of this fickle fashion season, hats were high or wide; now they are neither—merely extremely handsome. Those towering, high shooting numbers have been discarded by the smartest women and gone, too, from fashion's favor are the wide brimmed square crowned sombrero affairs that were seen at the smartest places a few weeks past.

The most interesting chapeaux of the moment are the luxurious fur trimmed toques, and for more dressy occasions the adorable little pill boxes glittering with bands of sequins and "flirting" veils.

Fur trimmed hats have, of course, always been terribly smart with luxurious coats of matching pelts but this year they are seen with cloth suits and coats.

They are also worn with simple wool dresses matching the sable or silver fox scarfs of the wearer.

—o-o—

MRS. ROBERT JOHNSON looked very chic recently in a black wool jacket suit collared with leopard skin and added a tiny toque in matching tawny fur. The lovely English actress, Margot Grahame, lunched the other day at the Colony in a nubby black wool suit with an interesting floral lame blouse. Bands of Persian lamb looped down the revers, and this same fur fashioned a tiny pill box with wool crown.

Mrs. Jeremiah MacGuire favors the flattering toned stone blue in a simple wool dress and wears eight handsome sable skins scarf fashion about her neck. Her hat is crowned in stone blue with a sable band shaped in diadem effect.

All along Fifth avenue we see smart young girls with simple black or brown fitted jacket suits collared with nutria and the same skins banding their little hats. Speaking of nutria, which is so important this year, no one has worn this fur to better advantage than Carolyn Eric, who lunched at "21" in a mustard and brown flecked tweed jacket suit with a handsome nutria collar cut in little boy fashion.

The little velvet pill boxes that are outstanding are cuffed in sequins either in color of the hat or in vivid contrast. Bergdorf Goodman has an unusually interesting collection, especially the black velvet number with green paillettes and the long veil dotted with several hugh discs of same gleaming gems.

Lesson Which Wasn't Found In School Book

Concerning Quality of Student's Work, and His Character.

By Angelo Patri

MISS MARIA held a scrap of paper in her hand and looked steadily at John Henry until he began to wiggle. "Stop off a minute at dismissal, John Henry. I want to see you."

"Yes'm."

When the line filed out Miss Maria took up the scrap of paper and said, "this is your homework, John Henry, is it?"

"Yes'm."

"This untidy, torn, dirty scrap of paper is your homework, John Henry? You did this bit of work to hand to me as your arithmetic lesson?"

"Yes'm."

"Are you proud of it, John Henry?"

"No'm."

"Then you did a bit of work that you are not proud of. In fact, you are ashamed to look at it."

"Yes'm."

Miss Maria sighed. Her eyes gazed through the glasses at John Henry with a kindly light, but they were stern.

"When you do a bit of work that shames you, John Henry, you take inches off your height. You take degrees off your honor. You kill your pride. You cheapen yourself and make yourself mean so that you dislike yourself. All this you have shown me in this scrap of soiled paper.

"The arithmetic lesson I give you to do isn't important. But the way you do it, the feeling it gives you as you do it, is highly important, to YOU. You cannot afford to do work in such a fashion that it shames you. Your father's son. A boy looked up to by his friends. And liked by his teachers. No, John Henry, you can't afford to do that."

—o-o—

THERE WAS only the sound of the clock on the wall in that room as the old teacher looked down at the boy, shrunken in his clothes, and all but slipping under the desk. Finally he managed to say, "Could I do it over, Miss Maria?"

"Could you? Would you? I'd feel so much better about you"——

John Henry took the scrap of paper and hurried home. Next day he handed in two papers, masterpieces of neatness and good workmanship.

"Good! Very good, John Henry. It is quality you want in your work because it is quality you need in your soul. Don't forget that. What good you put into your work you build into your character. I'm not caring much about your per cents. They're all right. But I'm caring mightily about the quality your work is putting into your soul. Thanks for helping me straighten this out."

John Henry nodded and went his way. If he thought Miss Maria a queer old nut he didn't say so to anybody. I am inclined to believe he quite understood. Children have a spiritual insight beyond their elders' comprehension at times.

Spiral Silhouette

The spiral, cone-shaped silhouette which has been adopted so generally in millinery, is appearing for muffs, gloves and other accessories. A muff that is made of mink and has one small end in contrast to the wide opening at the other is among the novelties appearing in St. Louis. A hat of black antelope which has mink heads for decoration provides a handsome ensemble. Gloves of suede with spiral cuffs and bags of various supple leathers repeat the conical theme.

To add a nutty flavor to oatmeal cookies sprinkle the oatmeal in a thin layer in a shallow pan and heat it for about five minutes before mixing. But be careful not to burn it.

"I THINK YOU KEEP MISSING THAT TUB JUST SO YOU WON'T HAVE TO TAKE YOUR BATH!"

FAREWELL TO BOYISH FORMS

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

THE girls are eating again this season. That's because the boyish figure is passe.

—o-o—

Even the boys don't want the boyish figure any more. So the women have taken themselves off dangerous diets in favor of more dangerous menus.

—o-o—

The definition of a diet is simple. You only eat meat when you are invited out to dine.

—o-o—

What they call the boyish form results in nervousness, irritation and a palpitating ticker. Our advice to any woman, is to look like one.

—o-o—

By cracky, the women were looking so boyish in 1936 they were tipping their hats to each other. And there's more truth than poultry in that.

—o-o—

An unbiased definition of the boyish figure is a broomhandle with ears.

—o-o—

We don't know why women ever want to look that way but they did. It all started when a motion picture actress dieted herself down to 60 pounds and a soda cracker, and got so thin she could do her setting-up exercises in an umbrella stand.

—o-o—

She was an overnight sensation and women bought canary birds so they could buy salad and birdseed without attracting attention.

—o-o—

The average meal was one olive to a cafeteria platter. The result was attrition, malnutrition and anemia. Why, the girls got so weak they couldn't slap their boy friends' faces anymore.

—o-o—

We are glad the dieting bug is over. When the wife is on a diet she does the ordering for the family. And when she is on a diet even the bums at the back door get back their youthful figures.

Hollywood Itself Seen In Three Current Films

By Colvin McPherson

FOR once in the history of the audible cinema, the number of films about Hollywood exceeds those about Broadway. At the first-run theaters this week, three features take us to the town where golf is good all the year 'round and success is always colossal. At the same time, there is only one movie each for the Broadway backstage plot, the cab racketeers, the jewel thieves, the bank robbers and the gay married folks.

At the Ambassador, Eddie Cantor, a poor boy with an autograph book, stumbles in on a location set of Twentieth Century-Fox, printed in big letters, and is hired as an extra. He goes to sleep, dreams he is running the ancient city of Bagdad, stays around to get things going better than Buchanan did, and then returns to the twentieth century. He is fired from the movies, attends a preview, sees Eddie Cantor there.

Just where picture leaves off and fantasy begins, how many plots there are inside of the main plot, how much is rehearsal and how much actual, is hard to determine, but the round of nonsense and music that Laurence Schwab got together is Grade A entertainment.

Most of the fun comes while Cantor, as Ali Baba, is acting as brain trust for Sultan Roland Young. His innovations are on strictly New Deal order, a few of his mannerisms are Rooseveltian, his quips are better than he uses on the radio, but "Ali Baba Goes to Town" is far from a gridiron banquet, with the administration on the grid.

The feature has its share of traditional Cantor song numbers and his inimitable scampering and patty-caking. In the number of specialty entertainers introduced and the neat handling of production numbers, one detects the characteristic style of Laurence Schwab at Municipal Opera.

In addition to Cantor and the droll Mr. Young, the cast includes Louise Hovick, dressed to look more like Gypsy Rose Lee, Tony Martin, June Lang, John Carradine and Virginia Field. A tinting process improves some scenes, does not materially help others.

The one extraordinary virtue of the Ambassador's second film, "Dangerously Yours," lies in the close-ups of the very attractive Phyllis Brooks. The action takes place on an ocean liner where "cabin class" means "crooks" and everybody looks suspicious. A pretty, thief marries a G-man at the finish and thus Hollywood makes two more hearts happy.

The Girl Said No.

AN amount of Gilbert and Sullivan sufficient to whet the appetite for more is to be found in Loew's Broadway backstage picture, "The Girl Said No." Generally the picture is devoted to a bookmaker, Robert Armstrong, and taxi dancer, Irene Hervey, and the settlement of their differences.

Yet ever and anon, selections from "Ruddigore," "The Pirates of Penzance" and "Pinafore" are rendered by those Gilbert and Sullivan veterans, Frank Moulan, William Danforth, Vera Ross and Vivian Hart and the film ends in a burst of melody and good humor with production of "The Mikado." Not only is the recording such as to make these songs most welcome but the camera can make much of facial gestures and the sound track can catch Gilbert's marvelous lyrics.

Just why no one has ever thought to do Gilbert and Sullivan operas on the screen seems strange. One reads that the d'Oyly Carte company in London, which has rights to these works, has been reluctant to have them filmed, but Hollywood has had enough money to persuade anybody, even Theodore Dreiser and William Shakespeare. The ripples of laughter over the audience last Thursday plainly showed that Gilbert and Sullivan would achieve far greater success on the screen than at Municipal Opera, where the matchless wit of "The Mikado" was more or less wasted on the vast summer air.

For its main billing, Loew's has the Luise Rainer-Spencer Tracy picture, "Big City." The mere act of casting these two together would indicate heavy dramatics, but "Big City" instead is a rather warm, amusing true confession of a taxicab driver and his foreign-born wife, surrounded by a cab war and looking forward to having a baby.

On its materials alone, "Big City" couldn't be accounted more than a class B melodrama for Lew Ayres, Brian Donlevy, Chester Morris or some of the other licensed operators to chauffeur about town. Its cab-smashing and murder smack of the most odorous of second features, but the writing was by Norman Krasna, who did "Fury," and the direction by Frank Borzage, who did the original "Seventh Heaven," so "Big City" reveals much natural human behavior and geniality.

Music for Madame.

STARTING out as a powder-puff fellow, more or less, in his first picture, "Here's to Romance," Nino Martini overcame that handicap in "The Gay Desperado" and now in "Music for Madame," at the Fox, emerges as one of the most likable personalities on the screen. His voice always has been glorious so only his accent needs working on.

Having learned to give a hitch to his trousers, wear his hat on the back of his head and wink at pretty girls, Nino sets out for Hollywood this time. He gets mixed up with some crooks but is received into the best homes and even as a robbery suspect, achieves eminence as a singer in Hollywood Bowl. The plot is pretty feeble and the romance with Joan Fontaine utterly foolish but whenever Nino is singing, "Music for Madame" has everything necessary.

A double dose of the studios is given at the Fox, with the second picture, "It Happened in Hollywood" about a great Western star who is dispossessed by the talkies. Richard Dix takes the role, finally coming back into his own by thwarting a bank holdup. Of unique charm is the opening of the film, in which an old-time Western, with piano accompaniment, introduces the two-gun hero.

The issue of "The March of Time," on the same program, has an absorbing review of Mayor La Guardia's record in New York.

The features change on Tuesday to "The Perfect Specimen" and "They Won't Forget."

In the class of the "by all means" pictures of the year is the Irene Dunne-Cary Grant comedy, "The Awful Truth," playing for its second week in town at the Missouri. A better example of one laugh piled atop another has not been offered in many months. "Hideaway" is the second one on the program.

MARGARET MOONEY OF "THE CIRCLE," LITTLE THEATER.

Children's Guild Show

First performances this season by the Children's Theater Guild will take place at the Toy Theater, on Boyle avenue south of Olive street, at 8 o'clock Friday evening and 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The production is "The Magic Ring."

Preview of "The River," Federal Documentary

"The River," a 30-minute documentary film based on changes in the Mississippi River and the Mississippi Valley since settlement began, will have a preview showing before an invited audience of local, State and Federal Government officials and leaders in education, art and music, at the S'Renco screening room, 3143 Olive street, at 11 o'clock Thursday morning.

Prepared by the Farm Security Administration, "The River" is the Government's second major documentary film and has the same treatment as "The Plow That Broke the Plains," issued in 1936. It was written and directed by Pare Lorentz, who directed the previous film.

The picture attempts to dramatize the growth of the great cities on the river and flood and soil erosion problems as well. Scenes were taken all the way from Lake Itasca, Minn., to the Gulf of Mexico, and representations of early lumbering operations, steamboat commerce and the like staged to carry out the historical aspects. The film is accompanied by the narration of Thomas Chalmers and a symphonic score composed by Virgil Thomson and played by members of the New York Philharmonic Symphony under the direction of Alexander Smallens.

Public release of the picture will not take place for some time.

Symphony Begins Season With Mozart And Sibelius

Two Major Works of These Composers on First Program for Friday Afternoon and Saturday Evening, Opening Orchestra's Fifty-Eighth Year.

REHEARSALS of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra begin tomorrow morning and the fifty-eighth season will open with concerts on Friday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, and Saturday evening, at 8:30 o'clock. Vladimir Golschmann, entering on his seventh year in St. Louis, will conduct.

With eighteen pairs of regular concerts scheduled for the season, Golschmann's program selections again will include mainly the works of standard composers in the field of symphonic music. In consequence, the first three groups of concerts will offer works of Bach, Mozart, Sibelius, Rameau, Richard Strauss and Beethoven.

For this week Golschmann has selected the musically rich Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor by Bach and Respighi, the gay and spirited "Jupiter" Symphony of Mozart and Sibelius' rugged and sturdy Second Symphony.

Bach wrote the Passacaglia originally for a two-manual clavicembalo with pedals and arranged it later for organ. Respighi, in his transcription, has avoided imitating any of the organ effects of the original composition. Leopold Stokowski, famous conductor, likened the Passacaglia to "a great Gothic cathedral." On the basis of an eight-bar theme, the first half of which he derived from a Trio en Passacaille by Andre Raison, seventeenth century composer, Bach constructed 20 variations.

Mozart completed his triumphal C Major Symphony Aug. 10, 1877, when he was 32 years old. The Jupiter is the last of 44 symphonies of the composer, his first having been completed at the age of eight. The work was written in three weeks, ending a creative six weeks' period in which Mozart produced his two other greatest symphonies, the E-Flat on June 26, and the G Minor on July 25.

The masterpieces were penned while the composer was experiencing strong adverse conditions. Mozart was bankrupt, his wife was ill, and he was being ignored by the musical public. Yet the themes heard in the three works contradict any gloomy mental spirits he may have been harboring. None of the symphonies aided him financially.

No explanation has ever been given for calling the C Major Symphony the "Jupiter" symphony. The work, which has four sparkling movements, is a perfect composition in the symphonic form of the classical period. It is introduced with a vigorous, melodic and rhythmical movement, followed by a second movement of softness and expressiveness. The third movement is a traditional elegant Mozartean minuet, while the finale, based on four themes drawn from old ecclesiastical sources and written in fugue form, is one of the most spontaneously brilliant things Mozart ever created.

SIBELIUS' SYMPHONY, it may be noted, was included by Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Eugene Goossens of the Cincinnati Orchestra on their opening programs of the current season. The Second Symphony is one of the more popular of the seven similar works which have come from the mind of the great Finnish composer.

Sibelius composed his Second Symphony in 1901-02. It was performed for the first time at Helsingfors, March 8, 1902, at a concert given under the composer's direction. America heard it for the first time at a concert of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, with Theodore Thomas conducting, Jan. 2, 1904. The work was originally said to depict, in four successive movements, the quiet, pastoral life of the natives of Finland, their patriotism and the awakening of national feeling.

Sibelius has denied any program intentions whatever in his symphonies. "My symphonies," he said, "are music conceived and worked out in terms of music and with no literary basis. I am not a literary musician, for me music begins where words cease. A scene can be expressed in painting, a drama in words; a symphony should be first and last music. Of course, it has happened that, quite unbidden, some mental image has established itself in my mind in connection with a movement I have been writing, but the germ and the fertilization of my symphonies have been solely musical."

The program in detail for the initial concerts:

Passacaglia and Fugue in
  C Minor — — — — — Bach-Respighi
Symphony in C Major, with Fugue
  Finale, "Jupiter Symphony" — Mozart
  I. Allegro vivace
  II. Andante cantabile
  III. Menuetto: Allegretto
  IV. Finale: Molto allegro
Symphony No. 2 in D Major,
  Opus 43 — — — — — — Sibelius
  I. Allegretto
  II. Tempo andante ma rubato
  III. Vivacissimo; Lento e soave
  IV. Finale: Allegro moderato

The following week's pair of concerts, Nov. 12-13, also will be all-orchestral, without a guest artist. Yehudi Menuhin, violinist, was originally scheduled to appear at these concerts, but his engagement was transferred to Dec. 23-26, in order that he could be heard in the American premiere of the 90-year-old Schumann concerto. The second program will include the world premiere of Variations on a Theme of Frescobaldi by Alexandre Tansman; "Escales" by Ibert; Strauss' "Don Juan," and Beethoven's Fifth Symphony.

Josef Hofmann, world-renowned pianist, will be the first assisting artist of the season, playing the Beethoven Fourth Piano Concerto at the concerts on Nov. 19-20. Other works on the program are Rameau's Suite No. 2, "Dardanus," and Chausson's B flat Major Symphony.

GEORGE ARLISS AS THE CLERICAL "DR. SYN" AT THE SHADY OAK CINEMA TOMORROW NIGHT.

"A Doll's House" Next Booking For the American

NEXT at the American Theater, which has a dark house this week, is the four-star revival of Ibsen's "A Doll's House," a week from tomorrow night, the four stars being Ruth Gordon of the English and American stage, as Nora; Dennis King, the operetta hero and dramatic actor, as Helmer, her husband; Sam Jaffe of Broadway and the films, as Nils Krogstad, and Paul Lukas, Hungarian actor of the films, as Dr. Rank.

The production is one which graced the Central City, Colo., dramatic festival last summer, with Miss Gordon, King and Jaffe in the cast. Lukas, who has never been on the stage in this country before although he had long experience on the Continent, was wooed away from British films for the road company. The script used is an adaptation by Thornton Wilder, author and professor at the University of Chicago.

"A Doll's House," which was Ibsen's first unqualified success and which has been a vehicle for most of the great actresses of the last 50 years, including Nazimova, Duse, Rejane, Modjeska, Minnie Maddern Fiske and Ethel Barrymore, has long been considered the declaration of independence of the modern woman.

After "A Doll's House" comes Charlotte Greenwood in "Leaning on Letty," on Nov. 14. The play is Miss Greenwood's version of a comedy melodrama called "Post Road," which ran in New York early in 1935 and which Miss Greenwood carried the entire season in Chicago last winter. Other dates for the American are: Nov. 28, "The Women"; Dec. 6, the Fredric Marches in "Yr. Obedient Husband"; Dec. 12, "Room Service"; Dec. 25, "Brother Rat."

George Arliss In "Dr. Syn" at The Shady Oak

A GEORGE ARLISS picture from England, "Dr. Syn," is the Shady Oak Cinema's selection for the week beginning tomorrow night. The melodrama, based on the Russell Thorndyke novel, is about an eighteenth century pirate who turns clergyman. Arliss takes that role.

In the cast are John Loder, as the Squire's son, Margaret Lockwood as Dr. Syn's daughter and Roy Emerton as the head of the revenue officers. Others are Graham Moffatt, Frederick Burtwell and George Merritt. The secret of the vicar's past remains intact until the revenue officers arrive but a series of discoveries put the officers on his trail, since he is engaged in the side line of smuggling, an occupation not exactly disapproved by the public at large. Two murders figure in the telling of the tale.

For the week beginning Nov. 8, the theater has booked "Mayerling," the Charles Boyer-Danielle Darrieux film which is the leader in its field in New York now. It is a tragedy based on the celebrated historical romance of Archduke Rudolf of Hapsburg and the Baroness Vetsera. The week of Nov. 15 will be taken by the German film, "Die Letzte Rose," from Von Flotow's opera, "Martha." The title is derived from the opera's famous aria, "The Last Rose of Summer."

"La Kermesse Heroique," which had brought the Shady Oak its first capacity houses this week, will end its run per schedule tonight, but very likely will be rebooked at a later date, since numerous requests have been made for a further engagement.

KSD Seeking License for Facsimile Tests

Asks FCC For Right to Institute Program of Research on 550 Kc. and W9XPD Frequencies.

APPLICATIONS for licenses for facsimile broadcasting on KSD and W9XPD (31.6 megacycles) the Post-Dispatch and KSD's ultra short wave station, have been filed with the Federal Communications Commission.

The purpose is to experiment toward the development of transmission and reception of facsimile on a wide basis of research. If the application is granted, the broadcasting will be between 1 and 6 a. m. on KSD, when it will cause no interference in the broadcast band, and at various times in the daytime on W9XPD, which, because of its range limited to 25 or 30 miles can operate at any time without interfering with the signals of other stations.

In facsimile broadcasting, radio sets are used which receive the station signals and print on paper exact reproductions of the writing, printed words or drawings broadcast or even of whole pages. It is planned to set up a number of facsimile receivers at various points in the St. Louis territory, all of them tuned to the station's 550 kilocycle frequency. The plans provide for supplying the engineering and journalism departments of leading universities in this district with the receivers, so that they may co-operate in checking the results obtained. Also, facsimile receivers designed for tuning to W9XPD will be similarly distributed.

At suitable locations, facsimile receivers tuned to both KSD and W9XPD will be installed, so that an accurate comparison may be made of the reception and results generally.

Each receiver will be operated with a time clock, which will automatically start the receiver operating at the proper time to begin receiving the facsimile broadcasts.

Non-Commercial Sponsored Series Features Pastor

A NON-COMMERCIAL program sponsored by a manufacturer and featuring talks by Dr. Kark Karl Reiland, formerly rector of St. George's Church on the Lower East Side of New York City, will start on the WJZ net at 6:15 p. m. Friday. Dr. Reiland, a liberal minister, won more than local fame by his "soul clinics" and milk stations, and made his homely philosophy helpful to many persons. An experimental broadcast series featuring Dr. Reiland on a basis similar to that proposed for the WJZ chain programs was a success for eight weeks in Atlanta, Ga., last spring. In announcing the new series, the president of the sponsoring company said, "We believe the real need for, and interest in, a fundamentally sound creed for living, and the good that may be accomplished by supplying that need, will bring good will that will more than justify the expense of this undertaking." This statement may mean that the Dr. Reiland's programs will be opened and closed merely with mention of the sponsor's name.

OLGA SAMAROFF, the pianist, who is the daughter of Mrs. Carlos Hickenlooper, 4545 Maryland avenue, St. Louis, will be the soloist in the Concert from Detroit Sunday night, Nov 14. It will be the first time that Mme. Samaroff has played in public since 1925, when she injured an arm in a fall. Since then she has written musical criticism for a New York newspaper and taught in the Juillard Institute. Recently she was appointed one of three musicians of note who will arrange generally for the part music will play in the New York World's Fair.

Plans for erecting new NBC broadcasting studios, to replace the outgrown ones erected two years ago in Hollywood, are announced. The studios will stand on a site two blocks square, bounded by Sunset boulevard, Vine street, Selma street and Argyle avenue. Construction will begin soon on a building to include four large audience studios under separate roofs, four studios from which audiences will be excluded, a large lobby three stories high, with two entrances from Sunset and Vine, and a three-story office building. The master control room will be visible from the lobby. The site, only half of which will be occupied by the studios for the time being, was that of the original Famous Players-Lasky film lot.

RE-ENGAGED FOR "MET" OPERA

HELEN TRAUBBEL, THE ST. LOUIS SOPRANO, WHO HAS BEEN RE-ENGAGED FOR THE METROPOLITAN OPERA SEASON. MISS TRAUBEL ALSO WILL SING IN ONE OF THE ST. LOUIS SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA'S CONCERTS.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S tenth "fireside chat" from the White House will be broadcast at 9:30 Sunday night, Nov. 14, on the eve of the reconvening of Congress. His topic is to be "The Unemployment Census." It is scheduled on all the networks.

In observance of National Lutheran Week, a program will be broadcast for the board of directors of the Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other states on WLW from 1 to 1:30 o'clock Friday morning. The program, planned for world-wide reception, will include an address by the Rev. J. W. Behnken, Oak Park, Ill., president of the Lutheran Church of the Missouri Synod, and a synopsis of the talk in Spanish. It also will be broadcast by the short-wave station, W8XAL.

The new Hilltop House serial, with Bess Johnson in the principal role, will start tomorrow on a 4:45 p. m. Monday through Friday run on the CBS and KMOX. Miss Johnson, supported by a strong cast, will play the head of an orphan asylum in a small town. The story of an Armenian peddler who saved the money to bring his son and daughter from the Near East to this country, but never saw them, will be dramatized in the Court of Missing Heirs. Ginger Rogers, Don Ameche and Charles Winninger, and possibly Jack Arnold, will play in the Radio Theater performance of "A Free Soul." The history of transportation as it has affected Chicago will be fold in a broadcast from a Pageant of Transportation at the State Street Seniors' banquet, at 10:05 p. m. tomorrow on the WJZ net. Channing Pollock, the playwright, will be the Magazine of the Air guest tomorrow.

Tuesday, a Jenny Lind program will be carried at 1:15 by the Mutual net; George Bernard Shaw will open the "As I See It" series, by British leaders of thought, arranged by the British Broadcast Corporation, at 3:20 p. m., on the WJZ net; Adolphe Menjou and Veree Teasdale will be guests of Al Jolson.

Thursday, the National Corn Husking Contest on the Weber Brothers' farm near Marshall, Mo., will be covered during the Farm and Home Hour at 11:30 a. m. on KWK and in a broadcast over a Mid-West stations hook-up which will include WEW. The result of the contest will be announced at 3:45 p. m. on the WJZ net.

Friday, Fred Astaire and Joan Fontaine will be featured in the Hollywood Hotel period.

The legend of the Piasa Bird, which once was carved on the Mississippi River bluffs, will be recalled by Francis Bowman during the Edward D'Aanna band concert at 6:30 Saturday on KMOX and the CBS net.

5000 TO COMPETE FOR SCOUT BADGES

Willard R. Cox, General Chairman for Show to Be Held Dec. 2 to 4.

Willard R. Cox was recently appointed by the St. Louis Council, Boy Scouts of America, to serve as general chairman of the annual Merit Badge Show which will be held Dec. 2 to 4, inclusive, at the Arena. Assisting Cox as committee chairmen will be: Col. H. D. McBride, William E. Port, John Franciscus, Art Holthaus, Frank See, Russell Gardner, Roy H. Wenzlick and Arthur H. Baer.

More than 5000 Boy Scouts will participate in the demonstration of 137 phases of scouting activity, Cox announced. A special feature of the show will be the presentation of four new merit badges, recently approved by the National Boy Scout Council. The badges are for proficiency in coin collecting skiing, finger-printing, and dog care.

Tentative plans also include five competitive events, three for individual Boy Scouts and two for scout troops. Events for individual scouts will be fire by friction, fire by flint and steel, and bugling. Inter-troop contests will feature wall scaling and pyramid building. Finals in each event will be conducted Dec. 4, and winners will receive trophies in token of their championship in the St. Louis area.

The crews of 20 St. Louis Sea Scout ships will demonstrate the educational value of nautical training in a special section of the show, it was decided Thursday evening at a meeting of skippers and district commodores with Commodore H. A. Brereton. A frieze, depicting the history of sailing vessels and painted by John Cook, veteran sea scouter, will feature the exhibition, which will include special presentations by the various units.

The Polaris will hold the Council Trophy for another year as a result of its victory in the annual fall regatta of St. Louis Sea Scouts, which was held last Sunday at Creve Coeur Lake. The crew will be honored at a council bridge in December.

Troop Notes.

Troop 321, Kirkwood High School, was host to Troop 324, Kirkwood Presbyterian Church, last night at a Hallowe'en party.

A new Cub Pack, comprising 40 boys, will be organized Thursday evening in Riverview Gardens, with Principal Clark Troutman of the Riverview Gardens Grade School as cubmaster.

West District scouters held their annual get-together yesterday at Country Day School, with J. V. "Pop" Allison as master of ceremonies.

The Southern Cross, a new Sea Scout ship, was formally invested last night by the Sea Lion at Swedish National Hall, 1159 South Kingshighway boulevard.

Troop 307, Webster Groves, and Cub Pack 12, Webster Groves Congregational Church, held their annual Hallowe'en parties Friday evening.

Girl Scouts.

A city-wide meeting, sponsored by the Training and Personnel Committee of the St. Louis Girl Scout Council, will be held at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, Kingshighway and Washington boulevards. The meeting is open to all adults interested in the program and activities of the girl scout organization. The principal speakers will be Mrs. Louis Burlingham, first national vice-president of Girl Scouts of America, and Miss Ruth A. Sampson, St. Louis Girl Scout director.

The golden eaglet award, the highest Girl Scout honor, will be presented to Ruth Diefenbronn, Friday evening at 8 o'clock during a meeting of Troop 4 at St. Peter's Evangelical Church, St. Louis and Warne avenues.

A reunion of counselors of the 1937 camp staff will be held next Saturday and Sunday in the new winter cabin at Camp Cedarledge, near Pevely, Mo.

St. Louis Girl Scouts of first class rank will be honored with a tea this afternoon at the Girl Scout Little House, 4253 Magnolia avenue.

HE LIKES

"Ralph says he likes REM, says 'It tastes good.' I find REM is the quickest cough relief of anything."

Mr. Paul Bruess
1603 N. 56th St., Milwaukee

Sure!

When Mr. Bruess emphasizes "quickest relief," he's only one of thousands who comment on the speed with which REM works. REM's great record is no accident. There are definite reasons why REM is so effective:

(1) REM is made specifically for coughs resulting from colds.

(2) REM is a real cough medicine, not just a "tickle stopper."

(3) REM is thorough because it works two ways . . . not only in the throat, but also systemically. That's what makes it so very much more effective.

So is you have a cough resulting from a cold, don't fool around with it! Go after it with a real cough medicine like REM.

What Japanese People Think About the War—Russian Finds Lower Morale Than Leaders Wish Conscripts Banish Fears With Luck Charms; High Food Costs and Rising Taxes Upset Upper and Lower Classes.

By G. TICKETT.
(Reprinted From Izvestia, Moscow)

TOKIO, October.

THE bloody smell of the war which the Japanese imperialists have started against the Chinese people, has begun to penetrate every phase of Japanese life. This became particularly noticeable after the commencement of military hostilities in Shanghai. In all the Tokio railway stations one can witness how every hour groups of mobilized reservists bound for North China and Shanghai are being seen off.

From the suburban stations of the capital and from the stations of other Japanese cities, long echelons of military divisions, accompanied by tanks, artillery and military supplies, are being dispatched daily. Streets in the vicinity of the station are thick with new trucks decorated with the bronze star of the army.

Acting on instructions from militarists, the Government has from the very beginning of the fighting in North China been kindling military-chauvinistic sentiments in connection with Japanese imperialism's latest adventure, which has developed into real war. In full accord with the plan outlined in the pamphlet "The Japanese Army and Foreign Powers," issued by the War Ministry in March, 1937, the whole Government machinery, press, radio, theaters, cinema houses and other places of entertainment, all sports societies, schools, temples as well as numerous official societies, subsidized by different Government organs, associations, federations and groups have been mobilized for chauvinist propaganda.

War propaganda is also being conducted by Parliament, both Houses of which, during a special session lasting two weeks, meekly approved a $150,000,000 supplementary budget for covering the expenses of the army and navy in connection with the North China "incident."

The upsurge of patriotic feeling which the militarists want, however, is not to be felt. Small groups of school children may march the streets and cry "Banzai" but, as the full extent of the latest misfortunes into which the most aggressive wing has plunged the country, the rear begins to waver more and more.

Braces Stomach for War.

On the streets one often sees young people carrying pieces of cloth which they show, now to one, now to another passing woman. The latter, understanding without being told what is wanted of them, take the cloth and silently make a small knot in it with a needle and thread.

The reservists called up to the army thus prepare for themselves a talisman known as a senninpari, a knot made by thousands of people. According to an ancient belief a soldier wearing a bellyband made with good wishes by a thousand people will return unscathed from even the fiercest engagement. There is an amazing number of reservists who do not want to lay down their lives on the front and hope to preserve their lives by wearing senninparies. Enterprising exploiters of superstition are already considering the question of producing the miraculous senninparies on a large scale in factories.

Immediately after the decision to send a large number of troops to North China, the Government held conferences with representatives of the bourgeois-political parties, shareholders, big industrialists and merchants in the capital and in the other large cities. These gatherings were addressed by Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye, Navy Minister Mitsumasa Yomai, Foreign Minister Koki Hirota and War Minister Gen. Sugiyama. The ministers called upon these circles to support the Government policy on China and the conferences approved the raid on North China launched by the militarists. Thus was demonstrated the fact that the interests of all the groups in the upper circles of Japanese imperialists coincide when it is a matter of plundering China.

One of the principal reasons why the meetings adopted these decisions was that both Sugiyama Yomai assured the participants that the Army and Navy were only "making one more trip." The Nanking Government, Admiral Yomai said, threatens to resist the seizure of North China, but it will be sufficient for Japan to show the iron fist for the incident to be settled locally, like the incidents of recent years.

"We know China and Chiang Kai-shek," the Gen. Sugiyama said frankly, "and we are certain that Chiang is waiting for the first big defeat of the Twenty-ninth Army in order to utilize it for the purpose of saving his face in signing an agreement on surrendering North China to Japan."

A Trip to China Costs Money.

It is on the same basis that the special session of Parliament demonstrated "community of interests" in plundering China. But when Minister Yomai suddenly presented a second additional budget to Parliament—this time amounting to 419 million yen—owing to the development of the "North China incident" necessitating the issuance of state loans, the raising of taxes and the introduction of new taxes, people began to shake their heads in the Parliament lobbies and in the offices of big concerns. The events in North China become more and more unlike a "trip." On the contrary, we saw clearly revealed the contours of a long protracted war, the prospect of which was by no means to the liking of the big concerns, who are well aware of the truth concerning Japan's economic preparedness for such a war.

Ministers, governors and the inspired press still screamed about the "power of unity," designating by unity the agreement reached between the aggressive militarists and the upper circles of the political and financial world.

But as soon as large-scale military hostilities commenced in the district of Peiping and Tientsin, the Stock Exchange registered a drop in all securities, including the shares of war industry enterprises. Financial, industrial and stock exchange circles became still more alarmed when the events in Shanghai confirmed their dark forebodings about Sugiyama's and Yumai's miscalculations. In drawing up their plans, the ministers omitted one "detail"—the ever-growing People's Front movement in China against Japanese aggression.

The Government has decided to summon another special session of Parliament which will have to adopt a new supplementary budget, this time for the purpose of covering the expenses of a real war with China.

A Party Studies Economics.

In order that a shadow of a doubt should not be left that Japan is waging a protracted war that will strain all the forces of Japanese imperialism, the Government made it understood that the session should give it power to introduce full war-time control over the entire economic life of the country. This, together with the fierce resistance by the Chinese at Shanghai, has proved sufficient to disclose the possibility of dissensions among the ruling circles.

Anxiety prevails on the Stock Exchange. Finance Minister Okinobu Kaya has been compelled to publish assurances on "observing the interests of the financial-economic world." However, the

GERMANY and the COLONIAL QUESTION

Hitler Increasing Pressure for Return of African Empire

Italian Declaration a Logical Result of Developments of Past Three Years—A Fascist Portent on Japan's War in China.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

(Copyright, 1937, by The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI'S public and dramatic support this week of Germany's demand for return of her former African colonies draws attention to the Nazi Government's latent but deep resentment of the punishment imposed on her at Versailles and injects into troubled diplomatic councils a vexing issue that eventually must be settled.

The bringing of this grievance to the fore was merely a question of time. Speaking to the German nation and the world in his famous Reichstag speech in January, Chancellor Hitler bluntly served this warning challenge.

> "The right of the German nation to live is just as great as the rights of other nations. The demand for colonies in our thickly populated country is a matter of course and will constantly be raised."

Italian espousal of the German demands is the logical development of the past three years and it may foreshadow an alignment at the Brussels conference on the Japanese invasions of China.

Germany, Italy, Japan Are Standing Together.

Germany, Italy and Japan stand together like a Fascist symbol whenever colonial possessions, actual or prospective, are under discussion. Mussolini's blunt announcement that "a great people like the Germans should regain the place in the African sun which belongs to them and which they had," was gratefully received in Berlin and undoubtedly will give impetus to a movement which has been getting under way for nearly two years.

The National-Socialist administration has been quietly agitating for a "readjustment" of the colonial possession of the great world Powers, particularly Great Britain and France, who greatly benefited by the Versailles treaty. The immediate objective is the return of some, preferably all, of Germany's former holdings in Africa, and as the economic situation in the third Reich becomes precarious, the more insistent will be the demand for overseas territories. The announcement by Mussolini merely added to the propaganda which had already started in speeches, magazines and books by Nazi subjects. Now that he has the European situation well in hand, except for the possibility of trouble in Austria and Czechoslovakia, Hitler, with the support of Il Duce, can be counted on to insist on revision of what is left of the treaty that is objectionable to Germany.

But unless the attitude of Great Britain and France radically changes, he will encounter greater difficulties in efforts to recapture the former colonies than the mere denunciations which followed his rearmament of Germany and the reassertion of sovereignty over purely Germanic jurisdictions in defiance of the rigid provisions of the peace treaty. Great Britain and France and the other beneficiaries at Versailles apparently have no present intention of returning 1,045,000 square miles of African land and 12,860,000 natives to German rule, especially a Nazi domination.

In Conflict With Views Expressed in "Mein Kampf."

The persistent demands for return of the African provinces are contradictory to Hitler's views in "Mein Kampf" to the effect that Germany could well forget about former colonies and should concentrate on extending power in Europe, particularly in Soviet Russia. His thesis at that time was that the pre-war policies of colonies, colonial trade and sea power had brought Germany into conflict with Great Britain and that his program called for co-operation with Great Britain while Germany expanded East and Southeast.

"To gain England's favor," he wrote in 1926, "no sacrifice should have been too great. We should have denied ourselves colonies and sea power and have spared British industry from our competition."

These words were retained as late as 1935 in the German edition of "Mein Kampf" and as late as May of the same year Foreign Minister von Neurath officially told the British Ambassador at Berlin that Germany, although demanding the right to acquire colonies or mandates, cherished no desire for them at that time.

Six months later, the domestic situation in Germany and the political situation throughout the world had so changed that Dr. Goebbels, Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment, said in a speech in Berlin:

"We are a poor nation. We have no colonies, no raw materials. But we must tell the other nations that the time has come when we must demand our colonies back. It will not do that we continue to live as a poor country while the rest of the world is rolling in wealth. We are beggars. The others do not need the colonies which they have taken from us.

"We wish to remain neutral (in the Italian-Ethiopian war), but we understand that a nation like Italy must live. It is dangerous for the world not to concede such demands. Because some day the bomb will explode."

A few weeks later, Hitler in a speech at Munich, declared that "the white race is destined to rule," and that its rule over the world is "the basis of the European economic structure."

These speeches and the recent magazine articles and books give the key to the changed policy. Germany is acutely conscious that she is virtually alone as a "have not" nation now that Japan has seized large territories in China and Italy has asserted sovereignty over Ethiopia, after a ruthless war of conquest. Economic considerations aside, international prestige, and national honor would compel Der Fuehrer to insist on a "place in the sun" if he is to remain in character.

Colonies of Doubtful Value, Undeveloped, Long Neglected.

If Germany's pre-war experience is a guide, the African colonies are of uncertain economic value. The German colonial empire was started long after other nations had occupied the most profitable territories and Germany found that her colonies cost her more than they produced. Today Hitler can only promise that he will do more than the pre-war empire-builders.

In this article, the former German Pacific island colonies will be ignored except for the statement that Hitler is laying no claim to them at this time. They were valuable only from a naval standpoint. The old African colonies are the prize.

At the outbreak of the war they were distributed as follows:

	Area in Square Miles	Total Population	German Population
German East Africa — —	384,000	7,750,000	4,100
German Southwest Africa — —	322,000	260,000	12,300
Cameroons— —	305,000	3,850,000	1,650
Togo — — —	34,000	1,000,000	320
Total— — —	1,045,000	12,860,000	18,370

Germany did not start her empire building until the middle 1880's. Bismarck was not a "colony man," and his successor, Chancellor Caprivi, once threatened to sell German Southwest Africa. He was so indifferent to colonial expansion that he told the Reichstag in 1893:

"Let us thank God that someone did not make us a present of the whole of Africa."

But Wilhelm II was a great admirer of Cecil Rhodes and he wanted to challenge Britain on the seas. His colonization policy was corollary to his naval program, and this may account for the failure to develop the African possessions.

Arguments Old and New, Germany's Low Gold Reserve.

Despite disappointing pre-war experiences, the present German rulers are contending that if the old colonies were returned, the aggressive Nazi spirit would cultivate them into sources of raw materials, make them markets for German industrial products and develop them as suitable homesteads for the rapidly-increasing German population. These are the usual public arguments for colonies. Japan and Italy advanced them as explanations for the seizures of Manchoukuo and Ethiopia.

Germany has added something new to her plea. Her spokesmen, notably Schacht and Von Epp, insist that she must have colonies in which German currency is the medium of exchange.

This is the Nazi answer to Great Britain's revision of Germany's demand for a League

Labor Member of Parliament Takes Peep at John L. Lewis And American Labor Movement

"There Is No Compromising on Anything; You Are Either for or Against Everything," He Observes.

From the Manchester Guardian.

Last week the American Federation of Labor declared open war on the rival trade union organization, the Committee for Industrial Organization. Mr. R. J. Davies, the Labor Member of Parliament for Westhoughton, here gives his impressions of a meeting with John L. Lewis, the creator of the "new unionism" of the United States.

By RHYS J. DAVIES, M. P.

NEW YORK, October

IF you saw a man smoking a big cigar on strike picketing his shop, protesting vehemently against his employers and conditions of work, walking the pavement between sandwich-boards, you would think it a little incongruous if it happened in London, Liverpool, or Manchester.

That is not so in New York or Chicago; it is taken for granted here. You may buy a cigar for a nickel (2½d.) anyhow, so what does it matter?

What irritates the respectable New Yorker most is not the cigar but the fellow on strike. There are invariably two policemen on duty watching that the pickets do not stop walking while parading; if they did they would be jailed. They may, however, shout at the top of their voices, but let them stand still for an instant and they will suffer for it. The loudest shouters are the women pickets. The patrolman, as he is often called, brandishes his blackjack in his hand and fondles it occasionally, whilst his revolver is charged on his belt, with a row of spare cartridges on a strap round his waist.

Plenty of Strikes.

That is a rough impression of some of the main thoroughfares of New York nowadays. And to see all this on Fifth Avenue and Broadway is annoying to the substantial, conservative American, who is firmly of the opinion that all this upset is the direct outcome of the Roosevelt regime and John L. Lewis' agitation.

Be that as it may, there are indeed many sporadic strikes in New York just now. Two thousand window-cleaners laid down their wipers recently without notice, and they too are parading the pavements. After all, window-cleaning is a highly skilled and technical job in a city where you have a building of 102 stories and 1252 feet high. Some of the employes pushing those innumerable small trucks on four and six wheels through the streets are out as well, and so are the liftboys in some buildings. Then there are some shop assistants (commonly called clerks in the United States) out on the streets, and even fiddlers and other musicians are to be seen carrying placards demanding recognition of their union and better conditions of employment.

The Automat Walkout.

But the real fight at the moment of writing seems to be waged against a big firm of automat-owners, those places where you serve yourself, eat, and pay without bothering about waiters. It appears that they cannot very well expect a tip in an automat. Messrs. Horn and Hardart are the biggest in this line of business, and it must have pained the pickets on Seventh Avenue to read a large printed notice in the window of one of their establishments with the taunting words, "Strike out for the nearest automat and enjoy the tantalizing pumpkin pie (10 cents) that even the pickets can't resist."

Clever, but rather childish; but we must remember that we are in New York. New York, by the way, is not the United States, and the folk of New England, the South, and the Middle West delight to make that assertion more clearly today than ever.

Whatever the merits of these disputes, it must not be assumed that these strikes have made much difference to New York. Apart from the window cleaners, the percentage of strikers from each establishment is not large, and, in any case, the support of strikes in that kind of business is not universal enough to upset the owners. The interesting thing about most of the strikers is the claim printed on nearly every placard that "I am a member of the American Federation of Labor," meaning, of course, that they are respectable fellows, that they are not of that "wild set led by John L. Lewis." Still, we saw just a few strikers who belonged to Lewis' new Committee for Industrial Organization.

Met Lewis First in 1929.

We first met John L. Lewis in 1929 when he was just a typical miners' leader with a membership following of about 300,000. True, he was then a striking personality (born, by the way, of Welsh parents), but there was no hint of his later career. He came here the other evening to address a great demonstration of 15,000 transport workers in Madison Square Garden (where Tommy Farr nearly defeated Joe Louis). There was a charge of 30 cents for admission.

We had a chat with him at his hotel the following morning. The first thing that became obvious was his complete break with the American Federation of Labor, which, as is known, represents the majority of the craft unions of the United States. But there is no compromising in this country on anything; you are either for or against everything. They do not seem to have heard of bridging the gulf or of submitting a grievance to arbitration. They fight to the death, and that literally so.

Killings of Unionists.

On two succeeding days this very week three trade union organizers were shot, one dead and another not likely to live. The following day another trade union leader was shot in New Jersey, a few miles away. And what is terrible to those of us who live in the seclusion of our English shores is that nobody has yet been arrested, in spite of the declaration made by the chief officer in charge of police that he is going to "unearth this underworld racket."

These shootings had little to do with legitimate trade unionism. The assumption is that some unscrupulous employers actually pay fellows to organize the employes of their competitors in business, pay them again for bringing the workpeople out on strike, finance the strikers for striking, and thereby destroy the business of their opponents. It is difficult for us to imagine that to be the case, but there is good ground for believing all that if you spend a few weeks in New York. Another form of graft is practiced in the building industry; the trade union concerned will co-operate closely with the employer and will pull the political wires for him to secure a Government or local authority contract. They then share the swag between them.

Set Against Green.

This, however, is a digression. To return to Mr. Lewis. "John L." as he is familiarly called, was frank and definite about his antagonism to William Green and the policy of the federation; neither did he like our Sir Walter Citrine's friendly help to the federation delegate at the recent International Labor Conference. We told him, however, that as the American Fed-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

F. D. R. and the Neutrality Act.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

AT the last session of Congress, due to strong pressure from the public, the Neutrality Act was passed. The philosophy behind this law was that, when another part of the world decided to go mad, this country would have nothing to do with the affair.

The act provides that when the President recognizes a state of war exists, he shall apply it. In the past month, the executive department has officially denounced Japan for violating the Nine-Power Pact and the Kellogg Pact, thus openly recognizing that a state of war does exist. Yet, the President has refused to apply the act. This constitutes a flagrant violation of its terms.

But the President's refusal to apply the act raises a much more serious problem than what our policy should be toward the Far Eastern affair. This refusal, along with the State Department's branding of Japan as an aggressor, indicates that the executive department of the Government is seeking and is succeeding in wresting from Congress its constitutional power to determine what our foreign policy shall be. This means that the President seeks the power to tell you and me whether or not we must go to war. This is a far more serious threat of dictatorship than any conceivable Government regulation of business.

England and the Boers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN answer to J. C. Henning Sr., whose letter suggesting that England should protect the small nations appeared in your column Oct. 27, I should like to ask if this correspondent ever found out how England got all her colonies.

The writer happened to be on the side of the Boers in 1899. I fought with Gen. Joubert at Ladysmith against this England. If England has to answer for the "terrible sacrifice" of small nations, then let her answer for robbing the Boers of their country. A handful of farmers fought there gallantly for three years against John Bull, the "protector" of small nations.

JOHN DEMAR.

Moore, Alias Montague.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THAT Samsonian strength that enabled one Laverne Moore, alias John Montague, bosom friend of some of our brightest cinema celebrities, to perform such prodigious feats as standing George Bancroft, the husky actor, on his head and lifting Oliver Hardy, who is no mean accumulation of avoirdupois, with one hand, could certainly be put to better use in a coal mine or on a moving van, so it seems to me.

Most of us have seen men performing such back-breaking jobs whom the Hercules from Hollywood could break in half with a flick of his index finger, if reports of his leonine strength are true.

Instead, Laverne shows a decided predilection for such trifling occupations as, for instance, shoving a little ball around with a stick or shovel, or even a toothbrush, if you bet him enough, and neatly depositing the ball in a hole at $200 per. Is he really such a great golfer? He got into the rough seven years ago and just got out on the fairway the other day.

There is, of course, no need for kicking a guy when he's down, but, just the same, one hates to see a square peg in a round hole and watch things go to waste, especially such a splendid set of shoulder muscles as those of roly-poly Laverne. But our screen entertainers, too, have to be entertained, and that's where Laverne came in with his assortment of tricks.

He was, we are told, a genial, popular guy, who could muscle his way into the highest circles—and muscle his way out of some serious charges. Now that this modern Paul Bunyan is out of the legal woods, having been declared legally innocent, he can proceed to cash in on all that publicity. He may even earn enough to send his folks a postcard around Christmas time.

BEDLAMUS.

Sharing the Opportunities.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

AN editorial from a Middle Western paper, copied in the Post-Dispatch, showed the folly of sharing the wealth. But our need, if we wish to remain free in the United States, is to share opportunities so that we can create more wealth and not let a handful of men absorb the wealth already created.

An Educational Suggestion.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE shameful ignorance of American boys and girls in regard to their Government and its affairs demands immediate public action.

Reading, writing and arithmetic are drilled into their absorbent minds day after day.

A course in United States Government from the third to the twelfth grade is vitally necessary to create in the student a keen sense of citizenship and responsibility to his country.

As the public school system is organized now, civic studies begin in about the eighth grade, at which point an enormous percentage of students leave school.

Why pay taxes to support a system which fails in democratic learning?

Belleville. MARY LOUISE HYDE.

THE G. O. P. AT SPRINGFIELD.

We have a pretty definite feeling that if the Republicans of Missouri, who have just held a convention at Springfield, had restricted themselves to the affairs of the State, the session would have been more profitable.

What captured the attention of those who read the report of the meeting? Was it that the Missouri Republicans favor a return to the gold standard, or have certain views on foreign affairs, agricultural problems, social security and the great national problem of labor and capital? The people naturally look to the national Republican party, not to a state segment of it, for the party's policy toward national and international affairs.

The things that caught the eye were that the Republicans at Springfield favored a reduction of the State sales tax to 1 per cent; a reformation of the State criminal code; honest elections, strong permanent registration laws and uncontrolled election boards; sale of State bonds to the highest bidders at public sales; a survey of the State Government to eliminate useless expense and to promote efficiency.

How valuable it would have been if the Republicans had given these subjects microscopic study and reported their findings to the State! We are not thinking of this from the point of view of good politics, but of public service, but even good politics calls for a searching, factful, dispassionate study of Missouri affairs. Calls for it? Cries for it!

If ever an opposition party had a golden opportunity to exercise its high function, the Missouri Republicans have it. It would take long to catalogue the damage the dominant party has done in Missouri with bossism, corruption at the polls, loose fiscal policies, inefficiency and graft, yet the opposition, whose function is to inform the people of what is going on and what they intend to do to remedy it, has been for the most part inactive and silent. And now, at a State convention, the opposition party contents itself, for the most part, with a declaration of principles on the whole field of public affairs.

Our view is that by far the most interesting thing the convention did was to come out specifically for a reduction of the sales tax from 2 to 1 per cent. This declaration should have been accompanied by a detailed explanation of the way in which sales tax funds are being wasted and misappropriated. A bare proposal to decrease the tax might otherwise be considered a partisan move to embarrass the party in power.

As it happens, an excellent case can be made for the reduction—a case based on facts and figures. It was the contention of the fact-finding Governmental Research Institute last winter, when the Legislature was considering doubling the sales tax, that the State could get along without such an increase. Many other students of State Government held, and still hold, the same view.

It is well known that huge sums from sales tax proceeds are being squandered on old-age pensions which have been awarded for political and not humanitarian purposes. It is well known that the schools of the State, because of the automatic allocation to them of one-third of the sales tax money, are getting a revenue more than sufficient to meet their needs. It is well known, on the other hand, that the Legislature, prodigal in its appropriation of sales tax funds to other purposes, was miserly in its appropriation for relief. Because of that, some 20,000 St. Louisans are now reduced to a heart-breaking extreme of poverty. By a proper administration of State affairs, it is entirely possible a 1 per cent sales tax would be feasible.

The national Republican party is not going to devote itself to a minute examination of State affairs; that is the task of the Missouri Republicans and it is a task they have thus far failed to perform. When Al Smith was Governor of New York, he took the people into his confidence about State affairs; he told them where the State's money came from and where it was spent; he went into details and he made them interesting and the people returned him to office time after time. It is no good any more for a political party to deal in grandiose shibboleths and ringing Fourth of July oratory, for the people want the facts.

The facts about the way Missouri has been governed in the past few years make a story at once fascinating and humiliating. If it were spread on a canvas reaching from the river wards of St. Louis to the headquarters of Tom Pendergast in Kansas City, it would be of consuming interest.

Though he ran as independent, Senator-elect Miller of Arkansas says he is a Democrat and wants to be seated on the Democratic side. It just seems as if there were no Republicans anywhere, excepting the mute, inglorious Seventeen Million.

THEY MIGHT HAVE BEEN AMERICANS.

Three British soldiers were killed Friday during the Japanese shelling of a suburb of Shanghai, occupied by many British, Americans and other foreigners.

Fate and fate alone is responsible for the fact that the dead men were British soldiers and not American marines. Troops wearing the United States uniform are in the same danger zone and have been for months. How precarious the American position is can be judged from the order of Admiral Yarnell, commander of the United States Asiatic fleet, for our marines to return the fire of any airplane attacking them or noncombatants in their sector.

No one knows how much longer the American good fortune in escaping shells and bombs will last. It may be only a matter of hours until a tragedy which will blow out the lives of one, two, three, a half dozen, a score, perhaps a hundred American soldiers. All the apologies which would follow would not restore a single life nor assuage the grief of one of the homes stricken by the tragic event. Whatever the warring nation responsible for the deaths might do would be futile indeed. And the American Government in turn would have small consolation to offer to the families of the dead men.

It is now more than three months since Japan began its assault on China. That would seem to be a sufficient period in which to complete the evacuation of American citizens who want to leave the battle zone. In any case, there can be no question that the majority of Americans still in China are there because they have elected to stay.

The difficulties and responsibilities of the State Department in this trying time would be materially lessened if a date were set on which American troops would be withdrawn from the raging battle area in which they are now caught. American participation in an international attempt through the channels of diplomacy to end the bloodshed in China is one thing. Retention of our soldiers where they may be blown to bits is another thing entirely. However much we may deplore the sacking of China, our first obligation is to protect our own soldiers from unnecessary and foolish risk.

"WITH GREAT REGRET."

"It is with great regret——"

With that polite phrase, the Mayor of St. Louis is informed that the State of Missouri cannot meet the relief needs of the City of St. Louis.

Some 20,000 St. Louisans are living on the very edge of destitution. What does this mean? It means just food enough to keep body and soul together. It means no money for fuel, no money for light, no money for rent. Just what it is to live on this pitiful scale, with spasms of fear every time a shadow darkens the threshold because it may be a messenger bearing an eviction order, is something most of us are fortunate enough to know nothing about.

Ah, let us be complacent in our upholstered offices and in our fine, warm homes!

Meanwhile, a cascade of gold, derived from the 2 per cent sales tax, is pouring from the pockets of St. Louisans into the State Treasury and, while the 20,000 wait, that money is being distributed to purposes far removed from their desperate plight.

The Social Security Commission is greatly regretful. It was given only $9,000,000 to spend for the current two-year period and only $5,900,000 or so is left.

Well, why not increase this obviously insufficient appropriation? Why not call a special session of the Legislature? Why not rectify a bad calculation?

Human misery is not alleviated by politely phrased regrets.

ST. LOUIS STORMS THE LAST REDOUBT.

Henry Armstrong has supplied the jewel long missing from St. Louis' crown.

Our helmet, as we all know, is brilliantly and profusely studded. We shall attempt no chapter-and-verse recital of our pre-eminence in the arena of sporting endeavor. Our position could be symbolized by a dazzle of spinning tops.

But we have never had a fistic first until Friday night when the Syrian Sarron reeled, staggered and collapsed under the flailings of our walloping Don Kayota.

Now our cup runneth over. Now we have everything. But no Alexandrian tears. Instead of weeping over the blank prospect of no more worlds to conquer, as that Macedonian sissy did, we shall create new worlds in which to test our skill and stamina.

Forward, St. Louis!

UNFIT FOR PUBLIC OFFICE.

It would be difficult to find a more significant commentary on the tone of public life in St. Louis than the appointment of Joseph W. Hannauer to a $5000 job on the Permanent Condemnation Commission. The appointment was made by the Circuit Judges, sitting in executive session. Hannauer had the warm indorsement of Mayor Dickmann and, according to the Mayor, he was also indorsed by United States Senator Bennett Clark and State Senators Mike Kinney and Joe Brogan.

In September, 1936, Hannauer was summarily dismissed from the Board of Election Commissioners, along with the other members of the board, by Gov. Park, who said the dismissal was necessary "for the betterment of the public service." The Governor's action followed disclosures of wholesale and flagrant election frauds in the June registration and the August primary, for which Hannauer and his fellow-members were charged with responsibility. At that time, Hannauer was publicly characterized as "unfit for public office."

Yet hardly more than a year later, this man, who left office in disgrace, is named to a lucrative and powerful post in the public service by the judiciary—the same judiciary which is called upon to preside over the trial of election frauds perpetrated under the administration of Hannauer as an Election Commissioner.

At this point, words fail us.

DAY BY DAY.

The United States Treasury deficit, as shown by the daily Treasury reports, stood as follows on the given dates:

Oct. 22	$509,487,311
Oct. 23	519,014,977
Oct. 25	533,723,066
Oct. 26	535,817,420
Oct. 27	542,543,982
Oct. 28	546,519,146

That's at the rate of more than $1,650,000,000 for the fiscal year. Mr. Roosevelt's recent forecast for the year was a gross deficit of $895,245,000.

Bring on the pruning shears!

FROM ISAIAH TO ELSIE ROBINSON.

A discouraged doctor is speaking in his capacity as director of public health. He has looked upon the fingernails when they were red, upon the decimated eyebrows, the hyper-hectic flushes, and gives vent to his exasperation in the rhetorical query whether "it is worth the while of the Congress to try to save a beauty-mad generation."

Now here is a man with the courage of his convictions. He rushes in where few but Elsie Robinson have dared to tread—and she was not on his side, either, as will appear. Someone ought to tweak the good doctor's coat-tails and persuade him to sit down.

For the girls have played around with rouge and lipstick and other forms of ornamentation for a long, long time. The first Isaiah's imprecations upon the daughters of Zion involved "their cauls, their round tires like the moon, their chains and their bracelets." And archaeologists are still digging up tear-bottles, so-called, and cosmetic jars of an even deeper antiquity. In the face of this determined behavior, about the only thing Congress can do is to make the art as safe as possible—with perhaps a compromise against its more gory aspects.

Without endeavoring, ourselves, to pontificate upon so delicate a matter, we leave the dejected medico in the hands of the capable Elsie, who once put it this way: "Let me assure you, son, ladies in the raw are no treat. Maybe nature meant well, but she certainly put her okay on some mighty funny knickknacks."

DID "WE PLAN IT THAT WAY"?

Lesson of the Stock Market Break

Former adviser to President blames slump in securities on war scare, business recession and thin sales; believes tax structure, particularly the capital-gains levy, needs overhauling; says wide fluctuations frighten off new capital and raise question of whether we are not paying too high a price for protection of the little speculator.

Raymond Moley, Editor, in Newsweek.

MORE than 20 years ago, the chief executive then presiding over these United States called a current economic panic "psychological." For this he was roundly denounced from ocean to ocean. Perhaps if he had completed his diagnosis in a more sympathetic vein, with the observation that all panics are partly psychological, his critics might have been a bit less vehement. But they would none the less rightfully have continued to be critical. For he was, in fact, trying to cure a disease with the same treatment that had caused the disease.

No great physician who, as great physicians are, is also a wise psychologist, tries to cure a man who is suffering from a delusion that he has a cancer by telling him that he is deluded. The doctor patiently considers the physical facts, measures, X-rays, tests and, in an atmosphere of facts, sympathetically demonstrated, makes delusions vanish and mental health return.

A curious difference exists now. The President has not called the September-October stock-market panic psychological. Perhaps that is why the patient has himself proclaimed his disease as psychological and described it as "lack of confidence." The patient is right. But this time the physician is unwilling to agree. Which leaves patient and physician just as far apart as they were two decades ago—and as unnecessarily so.

Apparently, the President regards the present discontents of business with impatience, feeling that his current proposals for legislation should be far from disturbing—at least by comparison with those of the past four years. But, to pursue the psychological motif a bit further, such impatience betrays a failure to grasp the underlying reason why a psychological crisis often comes as the result of a very minor immediate shock.

For three years now, the Government and business have been hopelessly estranged. Name-calling on both sides, surprise legislation at every turn, bitter punitive attacks, vague hints of enmity to all profitable enterprise, wobbly foreign policy, wild rumors of every kind, seemingly validated by an unexpected threat to constitutional government last February, contemptuous references to those of us, on both sides, who have pleaded for peace—all of this is back of current frayed nerves. The damage has been done, these years, and nature is claiming her reckoning.

Frayed business nerves register themselves in the stock market. The curious institution at Broad and Wall is the psycho-galvanometer of American business. Ecstasy and despair etch themselves on the endless tape. The financial markets this year have soared confidently, then power-dived, screaming to a crack-up, only to flatten out somewhat.

Immediate reasons for the panic are clear enough—which is not to say that it is at all clear which among several forces was most powerful. There was a war scare. True, there have been war scares before, and the market has withstood them. But they had a cumulative effect; each one drove a few more buyers out of the market.

Second, there is a business recession. It is not of impressive proportions, and best opinion is that it will not become serious, but there is a slowing down of activity, which, with rising costs, makes prospects for corporate earnings smaller.

And, third, the market has undoubtedly been thin, to use a Wall Street term, which means, in plain language, that the sale or purchase of 1000 shares has, under new conditions, the effect that 3000 shares used to exert.

Now, what about the whole situation? The market cracked, almost to the verge of disaster. What is the significance of the incident? Let us look at it in perspective, if we can. Seven years ago, or so, we swore, "Never again!" We wanted no more public orgies in the stock market.

Nothing the Roosevelt administration undertook to do met with more unanimous approval than its effort not merely to curb abuses on the Stock Exchange, but to try to make sure that never again should we see the spectacle of housewife, cigar-store clerk, janitor, scrubwoman and bootblack trying to get rich quick in a game which they didn't understand and which, in any event, was rigged against them.

Apparently we have accomplished that. The only question which it is legitimate to raise now is whether we have, in our zeal, crippled a necessary part of our economic machinery. That some people—by and large, professionals and semi-professionals—lost cash in the market recently while outright investors suffered paper losses is deplorable, no doubt, but not as important, nearly, as the fact that, because the machinery of new investment is inextricably geared with speculative trading, wide breaks like the recent slump interrupt the flow of new money into trade and industry. Dozens of new issues, proceeds from which would promptly be translated into new enterprises and thus new jobs, have been made impossible. This impedes recovery; this is really serious. Are we paying more than we need to pay for protection?

No one, outside the ranks of a few diehards who yearn for the "good old days," will want to reverse every progressive step that has been taken since 1932. But it does seem to me that, casting aside pride of opinion, it will do no harm to reconsider the rules and regulations in the light of experience.

One thing I am sure needs to be done: the tax structure needs thorough overhauling. On the score of revenue alone—and that is the only argument to which the administration will listen—I think a revision of the capital-gains tax desirable. The tax is altogether bad.

As to the outlook for business, the men whose judgment I most respect feel that, as usual, pessimism in Wall Street has been exaggerated. Business has slowed up, but it will not crack. A big farm income is in the offing. Orders from Detroit will presently make the steel picture look brighter. Other industries will be buying again when they think they see a bottom to the decline.

There is nothing particularly threatening on the horizon in Washington; nothing new, that is—just more of the same.

Editorial by a Jobholder

From the Baltimore Evening Sun.

W. R. BRADLEY, director of the income-tax division of the South Carolina State Tax Commission, had something to say the other day before the National Tax Association on the practice of states exempting Federal employes from state taxation and the Federal Government exempting state employes from Federal taxation. What he said describes so clearly a condition which has become an abuse that we present it as our editorial:

"It started out as a little gesture of courtesy, and now it has grown and grown until it is getting to the point where something ought to be done about it. The thing is rotten at the core.

"Why should I be exempt from Federal taxes because I am a state employe? I benefit from all the services the Federal Government gives its citizens. Why should the thousands of Federal employes in my State be able to send their children to South Carolina schools without paying a cent of tax to keep them up?

"I can't understand why the people in the street put up with it. You would think they would rise up in arms against it."

If we have any comment to add to this, it is merely that the people have been somewhat complacent because it is only in recent years that the number of exempted jobholders has grown to vast proportions. When people realize that about 25 per cent of the population is now on the public payrolls and so exempt from income taxes at any level, and that the proportion is growing at a rate that some day may place the burden of taxation on a minority, the change may come.

REGULATION OF LABOR UNIONS.

From the New York Post.

THE Post has remarked many times that regulation of labor unions in some form or other will come; that only by some kind of regulation will public opinion be kept on the side of labor, as labor is safeguarded from its own extremists. That has been largely accomplished in England.

The gains labor has made must be preserved; the future course of regulation must never deprive labor of the right to strike against an employer on issues of wages or hours. But jurisdictional strikes between unions, which tie up industries though there is no quarrel with employers, ought to be abolished.

Nothing loses public sympathy for labor faster than a strike between unions, a quarrel between union leaders, which causes public inconvenience and violation of contracts.

Among other points (and the Post cautions against dogmatism) which need clarification and regulation are the questions of annual financial accounts and of democratic procedure within unions.

The President feels that unions can be made responsible without subjecting them to incorporation. Annual publication of financial statements would help. The requirement by law that no strike be called without a referendum among the members of the union and that no major change in by-laws and no change in constitutions be made without a similar vote would also help.

It is up to labor and labor's friends to take the lead in discussing these reforms. By fighting all change, labor will leave the problem in the hands of labor's enemies.

DR. HARLOW SHAPLEY.

Dr. Harlow Shapley, who was born in the cross-roads hamlet of Nashville in Southwest Missouri and figuratively moved into the farthest reaches of space in his gigantic undertaking of mapping the universe, will speak at Soldan High School Nov. 10 under the auspices of the Harvard Club of St. Louis. He has been director of Harvard Observatory since 1921.

Admission to the lecture, an illustrated popular talk on "Exploring Star Galaxies From a South African Kopje (hill)," will be free, but tickets must be obtained from the Harvard Club, 3435 Washington boulevard. The lecture will begin at 8 p. m.

Still a comparatively young man —he will reach his fifty-second birthday next Tuesday—Dr. Shapley's greatest contributions to science have resulted from his years of investigation into what lies almost incredibly distant beyond the ramparts of our world, an investigation which has given a clearer conception of the size and shape of our own galaxy and the universe itself.

Census of the Galaxies.

He has undertaken a census of the galaxies and has made a "working" classification of all organizations, from the most minute particles, invisible even under the most powerful miscoscope, to the great metagalactic system and what he terms the cosmoplasm, including galactic and inter-galactic materials.

For his studies in the structure and dimensions of the galactic system he received from England in 1934 her highest distinction for astronomical research — the gold medal of the Royal Astronomical Society. Other recipients have been Albert Einstein and Sir Arthur Eddington.

His observations have indicated that our solar system is a tiny part of an enormous lens-shaped galaxy and that this local shaped galaxy is one of many making up a supergalaxy and that there are many super-galaxies.

Our local galaxy, or star cloud, is more than 100,000 light years across. A light year is an astronomical measurement representing the distance light travels, at its speed of approximately 186,000 miles a second, in one year. Thus the indicated measurement of our galaxy, from edge to edge, is about 600,000,000,000,000,000 miles.

Outline of His Work.

An outline of Dr. Shapley's work, prepared for the Post-Dispatch by Dr. Jessica Young Stephens of the Washington University Department of Mathematics and Astronomy, follows:

"Dr. Shapley spends much of his time looking into the past and arranging what he sees in an order. Most of his work is based upon a knowledge of the nature of variable stars. In his early days as an astronomer he made a very careful study of stars which vary in brightness, particularly the group known as 'Cepheid Variables.' These hot, yellow, super-giant stars flash up and down at regular intervals. Dr. Shapley, after thorough study, concluded that these stars pulsate, that is they contract due to the pull of gravity, then expand due to the heat produced by the contraction, then cool off and contract again, then expand, and so on. This alternate contraction and expansion causes the changes in brightness. In addition, by studying all the pulsating stars known, he found that there is a well-defined relation between the period of time between flashes and the candle-power of the star—the longer the period, the greater the candle-power.

"It is well known that the farther away a light is the less light we receive from it. So when a new Cepheid variable was discovered, Dr. Shapley would observe the period of pulsation and from that determine the candle-power or actual brightness of the star. Then he would observe the amount of light received from the star. He could then tell how far away the star was.

Size and Shape of Universe.

"This opened up a wide field of investigation for Dr. Shapley and his co-workers. Wherever a Cepheid variable could be found its distance could be found. Up to that time (about 1914) astronomers had been unable to formulate any accurate idea as to the size and shape of the stellar universe to which we and the sun belong. They had no idea as to whether many objects were close or far away. Under Dr. Shapley's supervision the distances of the globular (ball-shaped) star clusters were measured by means of the Cepheid variables found in them. From these measures Dr. Shapley was able to learn the shape of the galaxy of stars and nebulae to which our sun belongs. He concluded that it is shaped like a lens with the globular clusters forming the surface of the lens and all the other stars and gaseous and irregular nebulae occupying places inside the lens. The system is over 100,000 light years across. In this system he found that the sun with its retinue of planets was about 60,000 light years out of center.

"At the time of this investigation a controversy was going on among astronomers as to whether spiral nebulae such as the great Andromeda nebula belonged to our system or were distant systems, called 'island universes.' By a study of Cepheid variables in the Andromeda nebula and others of its kind, Dr. Shapley and his assistants established the fact that they are island universes or galaxies, because the closest of them is more than 700,000 light years away, that is, the light that they were studying left the nebula 700,000 years ago and therefore showed the nebula as it was 700,000 years ago. They proved to be systems like our own containing stars, star clusters and gaseous nebulae.

"Dr. Shapley then wrote two books—Star Clusters and Flight from Chaos. In the latter, in order to form an idea of the vast universe, he arranged everything material in an order from the minutest corpuscles to the systems of galaxies.

Studied Stars in Southern Cross.

"Up to about 1921, when Dr. Shapley became director of the Harvard College Observatory, astronomy had been decidedly northern-minded. Very little was known about the stars of the southern hemisphere except those that could be seen at the northern observatories. The stars in and near the southern cross had scarcely been studied at all. So, at the branch of the observatory at Arequipa, Peru, Dr. Shapley started research on the Magellanic clouds those two hazy spots which seem near the South Pole that were well known to mariners. He found that these clouds are not just patches of light in the sky but that they are smaller systems resembling our own. They contain Cepheid variables, other bright stars, star clusters, and large, irregular nebulae like the great nebula in Orion. He found that they were close to our system and concluded that they and our system together form a larger system, called a 'super-galaxy.' He then started a search for other super-galaxies and found many.

"There was still so much left to be done as to the southern skies that the Harvard Observatory established another southern branch on a hill (kopje) at Bloemfontein, South Africa. Under Dr. Shapley's direction a set of photographs are being made using long exposures so as to photograph very faint objects. It is planned to completely cover the heavens, north and south. These photographs are being studied in detail under a microscope and all of the galaxies are counted, catalogued, and described. The most distant ones found so far are 500,000,000 light years away, which means that the light shown on the plate left the galaxy 500,000,000 years ago." (Expressed in miles, 500,000,000 light years are a figure represented by the numeral 3 followed by 21 ciphers.)

Considerable of Dr. Shapley's philosophy, as evolved in his years of study and practical work followed his graduation from the University of Missouri in 1910, may be gleaned from his book, "Flight From Chaos." In this book he lists and explains his 17-plus classifications of material system (from electrons to the galaxy of galaxies) and gives his notion of the order existing in an apparently chaotic universe. He leaves both ends of his classification open for unimagined possibilities of future discovery.

'GOLDEN RULE' MINISTER LEAVING FOR LITHUANIA

The Rev. Dr. Owen J. C. Norem Sails Wednesday to Take Diplomatic Post.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The Rev. Dr. Owen J. C. Norem, a 35-year-old Lutheran clergyman, left today to take over his duties as the first United States Minister accredited exclusively to Lithuania. A pastor of a Lutheran congregations at Havre, Mont., he said, when named to the post last summer, that he believed "the Golden Rule is a good enough diplomatic policy and I'll try to make it work in my new position."

As he and his family left for New York today to sail Wednesday on the Manhattan, he said a month of training at the State Department "has not changed my original idea." He will confer with President Roosevelt at Hyde Park Tuesday.

Previous Ministers to Lithuania have been accredited also to Estonia and Latvia.

ALTON LAKE TO OPEN NEW PLEASURE GROUND

Closing of Dam Gates Next Spring to Create 40,000-Acre Body of Water.

Within a few days after the gates are closed in the new Alton dam next spring, a large lake of deep, quiet water will be created, almost doubling the water area of the river for a considerable distance. When this is accomplished, an extensive aquatic playground will be available to devotees of water sports in the St. Louis metropolitan area.

When the gates are dropped, after the spring floods, the impounded water will be allowed to rise to a stage of 25 feet above extreme low water on the Alton gauge, at which it will be constantly maintained. At this stage, 18,000 acres of riverside land will be flooded, increasing the total water area to about 40,000 acres. Most of the land flooded will be on the lowlying Missouri shore. Very little of the Illinois shore of the Mississippi, rising to lofty, limestone palisades, will be covered.

The new lake, or "pool," as War Department engineers term it, will extend up the Mississippi 38 miles to Cap au Gris, Mo., and 55 miles up the Illinois, to LaGrange, Ill. At both places locks and dams are being built by the War Department which will create additional lakes. There will be about 250 miles of shore line, including the winding sloughs to be created by heightened stage.

Islands to Be Submerged.

Owners of pleasure craft on the lake will be confronted with new vistas. Familiar islands, such as Piasa Merrit, Eagle's Nest, Portage and Mason's, many of them historic, will be submerged, and Calhoun Point, at the confluence of the Mississippi and the Illinois, will be interlaced with sloughs. The Missouri side, from the dam to a point opposite the mouth of the Illinois, will also become a network of unnavigable sloughs, extending inland at some points almost a mile.

Just south of Otter Creek, on the Illinois, a large clear-water lake about two miles wide and 10 miles long will be created by the overflowing of the river onto adjacent lowland. Shallow-draft boats will be able to range freely over its surface.

Although the dam gates will pass the normal flow of the river in all seasons, the current will be negligible, due to the fact that the lake will have a much larger cross section than did the natural river. Thanks to the reduction of the current, which is continually shifting the channel, boatmen, who now cruise the river in fear of running aground, may proceed with assurance that the channels are where the navigation charts say they are.

Fixed Docks Can Be Built.

This stabilization of the channel and the unvarying stage of the water will permit resorts along the lake shore to build fixed docks to accommodate river craft. In the past it has been possible to build only floating docks, which were always in danger of being carried away by rushing currents and floating debris.

The Illini Yacht Club at Clifton Terrace is planning the construction of a yacht basin to accommodate 150 boats, including sailboats of the moth and snipe class. The basin will be 700 feet long and 350 feet wide, and protected by a seawall of sand dredged from the lake bottom.

Small boats cruising the river will receive the same service at the locks as large steamboats. They will be locked through at any time of the day or night, without toll. Similar accommodations will be offered at the other upriver locks on the Mississippi and the Illinois.

PROGRAM OF LECTURER AT CITY ART MUSEUM

American Artists and "The Ebony Chest" Among Topics to Be Discussed.

The program of activities at the City Art Museum for the coming week was announced yesterday as follows:

Tuesday: 11 a. m., "The Ebony Chest," a talk by Miss Mary Powell; 2:30 p. m., "Homer and Eakins," a talk in the series on Art in America, by Miss Jaquelin Ambler.

Friday, 10 a. m.: repetition of Tuesday's talk by Miss Powell.

Saturday: 1:30 p. m., drawing period for children; 2 p. m., museum games for children; 2:30 p. m. story, "The Stone Cutter," by Miss Powell and "The Sculptor's Job," by Miss Ambler; 3:30 p. m., "Persian Pottery Plates," a talk by Miss Jessie B. Chamberlain.

Lutheran Mission Workers to Meet.

The Lutheran City Mission Association of St. Louis will hold its first mission workers' conference at 2 p. m. today at Emmaus Lutheran Hall, 2617 Shenandoah avenue. A report will be made of the activities of the association, which includes work at eleemosynary institutions and the Veterans' Hospital, and the operation of mission stations, a school, and mission industries.

Dr. Mary E. Morris to Speak.

Dr. Mary E. Morris, member of the speakers' bureau of the Missouri Social Hygiene Association, will address the Girls' Auxiliary of the Jewish Old Folks Home at 4:30 p. m. today on "Education for Marriages." Miss Alice Schriver will speak on "Standards of Behavior," at Y. W. C. A., 1411 Locust street, at 7:30 p. m., Tuesday. Her lecture is sponsored by the Y. W. C. A. and the Social Hygiene Association.

SURPLUS COMMODITY OUTLAY $46,000,000

Government Corporation Reports on Purchases During 4-Year Period.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. — The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation spent more than $46,000,000 to take excess farm products off the market in middlewestern states during the last four years.

In addition, the Government purchased supplies, including hogs, valued at $38,874,637, not allocated to individual states. The figures are for the period from Aug. 1, 1933, to Oct. 1, 1937.

Purchases were turned over to local relief agencies for distribution. Through purchases this fall the corporation sought to relieve distressed market conditions caused by large fruit and vegetable crops.

Cattle was the most expensive item on the corporation's shipping list. In four years, hundreds of thousands of animals were bought. Purchases in North Dakota alone amounted to 972,482 head, costing $9,006,021.

Other purchases ranged from eggs and frozen fish to grape jam, late onions, dry skim milk, fodder and stover.

The purchases by states, included:

Illinois—Fresh apples, 125,025 bushels, $84,232; butter, 4,891,648 pounds, $1,322,521; cattle, 2707 head, $32,427; cold storage eggs, 21,789 cases, $122,641; fresh eggs, 43,779 cases, $291,938; fish, 104,819 pounds, $7909; fodder and stover, 1348 tons, $10,762; dry skim milk, 839,988 pounds, $65,303; evaporated milk, 68,000 cases, $150,886; rolled oats, 530,000 pounds, $12,720; total, $2,101,341.

Indiana—Fresh apples, 2516 bushels, $1635; cattle, eight head, $240; cold storage eggs, 9239 cases, $49,864; fresh eggs, 5600 cases, $51,010; fodder and stover, 2106 tons, $17,484; evaporated milk, 14,400 cases, $33,336; wheat for flour and mill feed, 56,538 bushels, $59,004; beet sugar, 200,000 pounds, $8874; total, $211,649.

Iowa—Butter, 693,745 pounds, $167,479; cattle, 23,238 head, $216,579; cold storage eggs, 6353 cases, $26,810; fodder and stover, 1038 tons, $8790; oat cereal, 3,232,274 pounds, $98,043; rolled oats, 3,526,300 pounds, $102,034; sheep, 1767 head, $3534; total, $623,271.

Kansas—Cattle, 521,320 head, $4,890,094; cold storage eggs, 1854 cases, $7970; goats, 149 head, $208; dry skim milk, 41,250 pounds, $3573; sheep, 9569 head, $19,138; potatoes, 14,152 bushels, $6482; total, $4,927,467.

Missouri—Apples, 58,120 bushels, $36,016; cattle, 511,515 head, $4,811,573; cheese, 87,906 pounds, $13,845; cold storage eggs, 14,701 cases, $67,567; fresh eggs, 1200 cases, $7800; frozen fish, 28,302 pounds, $1662; goats, 468 head, $655; dry skim milk, 240,157 pounds, $13,868; evaporated milk, 5600 cases, $13,400; rolled oats, 1,107,000 pounds, $34,281; sheep, 7575 head, $15,150; total, $5,015,860.

Nebraska—Cattle, 481,104 head, $4,228,469; cold storage eggs, 2672 cases, $10,666; fresh eggs, 2000 cases, $12,750; dry skim milk, 1,918,168 pounds, $145,571; sheep, 24,671 head, $49,342; total, $4,446,825.

KENTUCKIANS VOTE TUESDAY ON PLAN TO CONSOLIDATE JOBS

Separate Ballots to Be Used at Regular Election for Proposed Constitutional Amendment.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 30.—Kentuckians will vote Tuesday on a proposed constitutional amendment that would give the State Legislature power to consolidate many overlapping city and county offices and abolish those it deems unnecessary.

The proposed amendment will be on a separate ballot from that voters will use in electing legislators, an attorney general, a judge of the Court of Appeals and miscellaneous local officers.

Continued control of the General Assembly by the Democratic administration of Gov. A. B. Chandler was all but assured by the Aug. 7 primary.

Hubert Meredith of Greenville, incumbent by appointment, is the Democratic nominee for Attorney General. He is opposed by G. Tom Hawkins of Praise. Virgil Baird of Glasgow is opposed for the Appellate Court vacancy by C. B. Latimer of Glasgow. Baird is a Democrat and Latimer a Republican.

WAR PREVENTION SECRETARY

She Will Give Series of Peace Talks Here Next Week.

Miss Jeanette Rankin, legislative secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, will be in St. Louis next week for a series of addresses with "A Sane Policy of Defense" as her theme. Her visit will be under auspices of the Jewish Women's Council and other peace groups.

Next Sunday morning she will speak before the Ethical Society on "A Specific Program for Peace" and that afternoon she will address the Belleville Peace Council. On Nov. 8 she will speak before the Missionary Federation, the Jewish Women's Council and the Northside Peace Council. She will talk also before various organizations on Nov. 9 and 10. On Nov. 11, Armistice day, she will speak at Washington University at 11:30 a. m. That evening she and Congressman C. Arthur Anderson will discuss "The Legislative Program for Peace" at a peace action dinner.

Germany and the Colonial Question

of Nations investigation of the world supply of raw materials. The British were able to have this investigation limited to a study of "equal commercial access for all nations to certain raw materials," thus neatly avoiding the direct question of colonial possessions by emphasizing "equal commercial access."

"With a gold reserve of less than 2 per cent, the Germans have answered, with much reason, that they cannot compete on a normal commercial basis with countries who have large gold reserves. Schacht has flatly declared that "Germany must produce her raw materials on territory under her own management."

Germany's Pre-War Trade With Colonies Negligible.

Before the war Germany's trade with her colonies was negligible. In 1913, the total imports from her overseas territories were valued at $13,571,000 and total exports to them at only $12,666,000. In that year Germany's total foreign trade amounted to $5,333,333,000.

Even today's statistics reveal that the former colonies could supply only a meager percentage of the necessary raw material imports into Germany.

What Germany Needs.

Germany's great industrial needs today are iron, oil, fats, cotton and rubber. The accompanying table shows that the former colonies would require much exploration and cultivation to meet these internal needs. The gold and diamonds, of course, would supply her with some foreign currencies.

It may be noted that German statistics also disclose that, although the mother country had the African colonies more than 30 years before the war, only 18,370 Germans were living in them in 1914. The best explanation the present German spokesmen can give for this lack of colonization is that "during the few years preceding the World War the colonies experienced a notable forward development."

But the colonies cost more than they produced, as is evidenced in the following statement of one of the latest books:

"The amount of money provided out of the national exchequer for their (the colonies) opening up and development was successively reduced. During the 1913-'14 fiscal year it was just under 32,800,000 reichsmarks, so that by that time the colonies had become almost self-supporting."

Strongest of "Have Not" Cases.

Of all the "have not" nations, Germany has the strongest case, if it is taken for granted that the more advanced industrial nations have a right to exploit colonial populations and resources. The British Empire occupies an area three and a half times the size of Europe, or 13,500,000 square miles, while England alone consists of 93,000 square miles. The ratio is 150 to 1. France's colonial empire is about 20 times the size of France; Belgium has an empire 80 times the size of home country; Italy has 10 times as much land overseas as at home, if Ethiopia is included; Portugal has colonies 20 times as great as her own 35,000 square miles, while the Netherlands has colonial possessions aggregating 785,000 square miles, as against 13,000 square miles in Europe. The two other great "have" nations, the United States and the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, do not need colonies.

The Treaty of Versailles not only stripped Germany of all her colonies, but the peace negotiators formally indicted Germany as being unfit to rule native populations, the British going so far as to bolster these charges in an official Blue Book, and this has rankled in the German breast. The Germans, while denying these charges of pre-war maladministration, counter-claim that the African colonies were illegally seized by the Allies, and further contend that they accepted the Armistice on the basis of President Wilson's 14 points, of which Point 5 was as follows:

"A free, open-minded and absolutely impartial adjustment of all colonial claims, based upon a strict observance of the principle that in determining all such questions of sovereignty the interests of the populations concerned must have equal weight with the equitable claims of the Government whose title is to be determined.

"We have no jealousy of German greatness, and there is nothing in this program that impairs it. We wish her only to accept a place of equality among the peoples of the world—the new world in which we now live—instead of a place of mastery."

Different Approach Necessary.

The peace negotiators ignored Pont 5, as they ignored some other proposals of the American President. Hitler has successfully defied many of the peace restrictions and he is now strong enough to talk about revocation of the colonial provisions. The present situation, however, requires different approaches, and strategies, than his other efforts. The French and British did nothing when he rearmed Germany and when he recaptured the Rhineland. The former colonies are many miles away from Germany, and the Nazis have no sea power with which to challenge the British. Hitler cannot present the former Allies with a fait accompli; he must try to gain his end by diplomatic methods. Mussolini's speech Thursday indicates that some such diplomatic gesture is contemplated.

The Nazi writers and orators assert that the former allies have assumed a belligerent "dog in the manger" attitude toward return of the African colonies, and seek to show that the colonies are costing their present possessors more than they are worth; but the British have never surrendered a colonial possession without a struggle, and the two colonies that Germany most covets, Tanganyika, formerly German East Africa, and Southwest Africa, bring up important empire problems. Tanganyika is an integral section of the land belt from Cairo to the Cape over which flies the British-African air service, and Southwest Africa has been mandated to the Union of South Africa, a sovereign Power within the British commonwealth. Any attempt to return Southwest Africa to Germany would require the assent of the Union of South Africa, and every suggestion of that sort has met vehement opposition from the empire subjects on the Cape.

British Feelings on Issue.

The British have already started colonizing in these two territories, and the European population is about double what it was in 1913. Younger sons with Oxford and Cambridge educations are serving as administrators, and British traders have dug in according to British tradition. The British now say also, according to British tradition, that they could not think of turning the native populations over to a foreign power. Winston Churchill, whose command of picturesque English language is unequaled in politics, in 1935 condemned "the repulsive talk of handing over millions of human souls, irrespective of their wishes, like cattle or slaves, to new sovereigns."

Lord Lugard, once a colonial Governor and now the British member of the League of Nations Permanent Mandates Commission, voiced a similar opposition, when he said:

"There can be no doubt that the proposal either to place our dependencies under a foreign mandatory or to transfer our mandates to Germany or Italy would not be tolerated by British public opinion, and it would be simply heart-breaking to the men on the spot, who had spent years in building up a sympathetic native policy, to see their work nullified by the adoption of new policies."

The Germans aptly reply to these assertions that the feelings and wishes of the native populations were not considered when the British, the French and Belgians took possession of the colonies during the war and were not considered by the peace negotiators who were expected to be guided by President Wilson's 14 points.

Another Wing in Britain.

Churchill and Lugard, of course, represent the Empire bloc in British politics. There is another group, as yet not powerful, including such leaders as Lord Rothermere, Sir Arnold Wilson and Admiral Spencer de Horsey, which is willing to look for an 'adjustment" of colonial possessions or is for outright return of the colonies to Germany.

As early as 1934 Rothermere wrote in his Daily Mail:

"I propose that the British Government hand back to the League of Nations its mandates for Tanganyika, the British Cameroons and British Togoland, in order that they may be transferred to Germany. . . .

"Though this proposal may not be popular, I am convinced that it is wise. We cannot expect a nation of 'he-men' like the Germans to sit forever with folded arms under the provocations and stupidities of the Treaty of Versailles. Germany needs breathing space. . . .

"To deny this mighty nation, conspicuous for its organizing ability and scientific achievements, a share in the work of developing backward regions of the world is preposterous."

More moderate British spokesmen, like Sir Arthur Salter and Lord Lothian, have proposed that the imperial Powers consent to place their own colonies under a mandate system which would give all Powers free access to raw materials. On paper, this proposition answers Germany's economic arguments with two vital exceptions, the use of German currency and the flow of raw materials to Germany in case of war. It has been suggested that these mandated territories be protected by the League of Nations in the event of war, but the British capture of German East Africa during the World War, in alleged violation of a German-British treaty gives such a suggestion a dubious cast.

Germany Growing Stronger.

In several diplomatic negotiations Germany has formally asked for return of the African colonies as a part of the bargain, but never has pressed the claim. This was done during negotiations over the Dawes Plan and over Germany's entrance in the League of Nations. So far, Great Britain and France have made formal responses to the formal demands, but every year Germany, by reason of her military program, is getting stronger in Europe and is receiving more sympathetic treatment in the European councils. If Hitler could force revision of the colonial provisions of the Versailles Treaty, he could rightly claim that he had redressed virtually all of Germany's grievances arising from the peace pact. He could also rightly boast that he had re-established Germany as a world Power and had rehabilitated her prestige abroad.

Mussolini and the war lords of Japan have successfully bluffed the other world Powers into quiescence while they carved themselves colonies out of Northern Africa and Northern China. Hitler may try his hand at the same game, to regain what he claims is justly Germany's own.

What People Of Japan Think About the War

Minseito, the largest party in the Lower Chamber, has already announced that while supporting the Government's intentions it is nevertheless creating a commission of its own for studying and proposing its own financial and economic measures. The Seiyukai and the other bourgeois parties prefer for the time being to say nothing.

But they, too, will soon speak up, the more so since the militarists, taking advantage of the confusion they have created, are again dragging out the schemes for hastening the fascization of the country which they advanced in November, 1936. This is shown by the Cabinet's decision to appoint an independent chairman of the "planning administration," and the proposal to establish administrative boards in all ministries, similar to those already created in Manchukuo.

(Emergency legislation proposed recently by Prince Konoye would put industry and finance, already under severe regulations, on a full wartime footing with the Government regulating loans, prices, investments and exports.)

These fissures and breaks in the conspiracy of the upper circles will undoubtedly be filled up at first and by the time the special session of Parliament opens a compromise permitting the militarists to play their marked card of an imaginary "national unity." Things stand much worse, however, with the gulf between the conspirators in the upper circles of Japanese imperialism and the masses of Japanese workers and peasants, who definitely do not want war.

Charms Can't Feed Hungry.

Many representatives of these masses still see the preparation of individual senninparis and similar talismen as the only means of struggling against the evil. But the harsh school of war will soon destroy their faith in such means. The inevitable rise in the cost of living, the ever-increasing shortage of goods and the increasing inflation will do much to destroy such beliefs.

The steady decline in the standard of living of the masses, which is admitted on all sides, will also show the uselessness of such means of struggle against war, the more so since hundreds of thousands of families are without their breadwinners and consequently without earnings, which still further reduces the standard of living of the masses.

(The supply of good and commodities has been curtailed even further since this article was written. Cash and ships have been diverted to army uses, forcing the Government to study a plan to revive a World War emergency measure that would restrict movements of Japanese vessels abroad and make them available for domestic importation of food, coal, ore, salt and other vital supplies sorely lacking in Japan today.)

The upper circles of Japanese imperialism fear mostly the action of these object lessons, the list of which are by no means exhausted. It is not accidental that one of the first war-time measures introduced by the police and gendarme administration was to forbid all workers' meetings and meetings of delegates of trade unions, not excluding even those under the leadership of the more than loyal Syakaitaisyutovtsites.

Workmen's Compensation Rates.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 30.—The annual revision of workmen's compensation rates will be considered at a hearing here Nov. 18 in the office of George A. S. Robertson, new State Superintendent of Insurance.

ORDERS BEING SOLICITED FOR POSTMASTER'S BOOKLET

Service Relations Council in Charge of Sale of History; Price $1.

Postmaster W. Rufus Jackson has written a booklet, "The History of the St. Louis Postoffice," for publication in connection with the opening of the new Postoffice, now nearing completion. Sale of the booklet on a subscription plan is being managed by the Service Relations Council, welfare organization of postal employes here, which will receive whatever profits may be earned.

John F. Dee, the council chairman, said yesterday that orders for the booklet, which will contain not less than 64 pages with illustrations, are being taken from contractors and materials men engaged in construction of the new Postoffice; from the 150 postal supervisors here and from such Postoffice employes as wish to subscribe. Employes are not being solicited generally, he stated. The booklet will contain no advertising and complimentary copies will be given to distinguished guests at the opening of the new building.

The booklet is being sold at $1 per copy. The council has gotten out a sales letter to prospective buyers, in which it is stated the booklet will have reference value in describing postal services and how they originated. Jackson is the author of a three-volume history of Missouri Democracy, the first volume of which was published in 1935.

Dean Sweet to Talk on China.

Dean Sidney Sweet of Christ Church Cathedral, who returned recently from the Orient, will talk on "Adventures in China" this evening at 7:30 o'clock in St. Augustine's Parish Hall, Bruno avenue and Blendon place.

Labor M. P. Takes Peep At John L. Lewis

eration of Labor is now affiliated to the International Federation of Trade Unions Sir Walter could hardly do otherwise. It is obvious, of course, that the American Federation of Labor joined the International by way of showing "John L." what can be done when necessary.

When asked whether it was true that he had any political ambitions, Lewis was more than reticent. We told him that surely there was nothing dishonorable in the advocacy of a trade union Labor party in the United States on the lines of our own at home. But he would not be drawn, although many will have it that he has ambitions to be President of the Republic. Nor would he be drawn on the future relations between himself and the American Federation of Labor.

How the Fight Began.

We told him that there must be an end to every war, even the one in which he and William Green were engaged; that a peace conference must always ensue. He did, however, tell me in detail how and why the fight began.

"The American Federation of Labor annual convention, lasting two weeks, never paid the slightest attention to the problems confronting the affiliated industrial unions enrolling very low wage earners; they were always quarreling and debating lines of demarcation between the several crafts." "John L." and his assistants tried on several occasions to induce the Federation to take the job in hand of organizing the millions who toil for their living in the United States outside the cratfs, but it was all of no avail. "About two years ago the executive of the Federation decided in advance of its annual conference that any delegate raising that isue at all would be ruled out of order."

There was no mistaking the big man on this point; he was not going to be played with any longer, and the break came. The Miners' Union, with 600,000 members, the biggest in the United States, was "suspended," and "John L." being a wise man, knowing that expulsion would follow took the only course open; he disaffiliated his mighty organization and himself at the same time.

End Not to Be Foreseen.

The issues are great, and no one can foretell what the end will be. The most remarkable thing, however, is that both the federation and the Committee for Industrial Organization are making immense strides in enrolling new members. The Federation claims now to include 3,250,000 members; "John L." has a following, so he said, of half a million more than that.

The quarrel has had a most stimulating effect on trade unionism throughout this vast continent. Lewis claimed too that since he began his campaign the membership of the Committee for Industrial Organization had benefited in increased wages to the tune of one billion dollars per annum.

Industrial unionism has bitten into the heart of "John L." He gave me a case, down Indiana way, where fewer than a hundred craft unionists, belonging to one small union (enginemen and boiler attendants at the pithead), came out on strike some time ago at the bidding of their leaders and threw out of employment thereby 10,000 miners, members of Lewis' organization. That conflict was so bitter that the Governor of the State ultimately stepped in and decreed that craft unionism in the mining industry, in that State at least, should not be allowed to continue.

Denies Lewis Is Communist.

"John L.'s" traducers—and they are many—will have it that he is "well oiled by the Communists." There never was a more unscrupulous charge. He is as opposed to Communist philosophy as Roosevelt himself. Indeed, he asserted to me that he saw no ultimate difference between Fascism and Communism. And when he came to that point his eyes spoke as well as his voice, and a shake of his bushy hair added to his decision.

The fact that the Communists support his point of view is quite another issue; their support of LaGuardia for the mayoralty of New York City and their withdrawal of candidates opposing what some of our people at home would term milk-and-water Liberals all over New England is equally inexplicable.

No, John L. Lewis is having no truck with dictatorship or Communism; he is bent rather on seeing whether there is any possibility of establishing in the United States a labor party like our own, based on democratic principles. He will have big business, the thugs, and the racketeers to contend with in this effort, but they had better watch their step. They have at last a man ready to fight any crookedness they may play against him. He is obviously straight in his dealings, but the more honest you are in the political life of the United States the greater the antagonism you arouse.

M'GLYNN MEMORIAL CHAPEL TO BE DEDICATED TODAY

Archbishop Glennon Will Give Principal Address at Exercises This Afternoon.

The new Mgr. McGlynn Memorial Chapel at the St. Joseph's Boys' Home, Grand boulevard and Delor avenue, will be dedicated at 4 p. m. today. The principal address will be made by Archbishop Glennon.

The $60,000 chapel was constructed with a bequest by Mgr. James J. McGlynn, pastor of St. Rose's Catholic Church, who died Sept. 16, 1936. The home, operated by the Sisters of St. Joseph of Carondelet, houses about 130 boys.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY
JOHN G. NEIHARDT

HE FOUND NO MIDDLE WAY

THE ENEMY GODS. By Oliver La Farge. (Houghton Mifflin Co., New York.)

THE title of Mr. La Farge's new essay in Indian fiction is sufficient clue to its theme: the struggle to adjust the red man to the white man's ideology. Here are contrasted two diametrically opposed psychologies—the Indian's and the white man's; here one soul is the scene of strife between two gods, two personalities, two languages, two powers; here is definitive statement of the futility of trying to force one people into the cultural pattern of another.

The author's spokesman is Seeing Warrior, Navajo product of mission school tutorings in religious fundamentals, desirous of going "on the Jesus Trail" and being "like a white man." But Seeing Warrior, after losing the poetry of his name (he becomes obscure little Myron Begay on the school records), listening to Bible stories, wrestling mightily with Christian ethics, and reaching eagerly for knowledge and righteousness, learns more about the word "backslide" through active participation than in pious scrutiny of impenitents. He seeks a middle way between tribal call and white man's promises; possessed of the latter's knowledge, he reasons, he can return to his own people and be their prophet. But the conflict between mission minds and the twitchings of tribal impulse is too great. Myron, tired of the anomalous state of being neither Navajo nor Christian, makes his peace with his own gods.

Mr. La Farge's manner in "The Enemy Gods" is different from what it was in the completely fresh and amiable "Laughing Boy." There is something of bitterness in the glimpses he allows us into Indian psychology. One cannot miss the note of personal feeling, the voice of the ethnographer saying things that the human being has noted with grief. And no one is more fitted than Mr. La Farge to speak thus. His eye for details of Indian character is more acute than ever, and his understanding of and respect for the Indian's cultural dignity is profoundly sensitive. No one has given us pictures of the Navajo so fine and serious as those inspired by Mr. La Farge's intimate contact and deep sympathy. "The Enemy Gods" deserves the notice of any who have shaken their heads over the problem of interracial relationships.

"IT was Rudyard Kipling's odd fate," remarks Mr. Van de Water in this minor but very amusing contribution to literary history, "to find wife and friend and most vindictive foe in a single family." It is common knowledge that the friend was Wolcott Balestier, co-author of "The Naulahka," at whose funeral Kipling first met his friend's sister, Caroline, who became his wife. It is also commonly known that the Kiplings moved to Vermont shortly after their marriage in 1892 and built a home near Brattleboro with the intention of living happily there ever after. There Kipling wrote "The Seven Seas," "Many Inventions," "Captains Courageous" and the first and second "Jungle Books."

Why did the Kiplings leave their Vermont home in 1896, never to return? The answer, now given in full for the first time, concerns the scapegrace brother of Caroline, Beatty Balestier, and surely Kipling himself never invented a more engaging character. As a matter of fact, it is as a character sketch, rather than as literary history, that "Kipling's Vermont Feud" chiefly deserves attention.

Beatty, we read, "was a black sheep who wore that title proudly. He was a pain to the pious, a thorn to the respectable, an affront to the abstemious. He was iconoclast, spendthrift, roisterer, bitter enemy, charming and generous friend. He had a tongue like a skinning knife and included the Almighty in every conversation."

Nevertheless, he was able to make even those whom he scandalized furtively fond of him. It was with such a man that the austerely exclusive Kiplings tangled publicly over a ludicrously petty private matter. Beattie, legally defeated in court, nevertheless won an overwhelming popular victory by making the Kiplings ridiculous, and they fled.

Beattie, who outlived his famous brother-in-law, never forgave, and the memory of his triumph seems to have been the chief satisfaction of his life. Several years before his death he told the whole story, with characteristic gusto, to Mr. Van de Water; and here it is. Had a humorist invented the tale it could hardly have been more diverting.

A Satirical Fantasy

WAR WITH THE NEWTS. By Karel Capek. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

A SEA captain in search of pearls discovers a species of newts in a sheltered bay of an isolated tropical island. This colony of marine animals has remained unmolested because of the superstition of the natives and the natural protection from sharks. Captain Van Toch soon learns that they are docile and imitative to a surprising degree. In exchange for knives to protect themselves against sharks, they supply him with pearls. They even learn to croak a few words in response to his coaching. The captain enlists the support of a powerful financier and starts colonies of newts in various tropical regions. The newts flourish and bring up from the sea more pearls than the company can handle.

With the death of the captain, the romantic period of the newts' history is brought to an abrupt close. The financier, with remarkable vision, sees in the newts a force that will revolutionize the world. Modern science is able to raise them in great numbers, produce a strong and vigorous variety, and train them to do their work with machine-like efficiency. As a result, the world enjoys a golden age of prosperity and war is seemingly a thing of the past.

But man always works for his own undoing. He educates the newts in the art of warfare, envisioning his own safety, and then finds himself face to face with a formidable enemy, when the newt, now a highly developed animal, turns on his benefactor.

Karel Capek's tale in bare outline seems merely fantastic, but it is far more than a fantasy. The implied satire runs the full gamut, from good-humored burlesque to bitter irony, and the deft caricatures of national traits are delightful. The travesty assumes a more serious aspect when the civilized world must cope with the newts, who have patterned themselves after their masters, but "have left out all that is human, and have taken over only the portion that is practical, technical and utilitarian." A caricature of the human race is about to wipe out civilization, which cannot defend itself because of its own materialism. Commerce, industry and agriculture have come to depend on the new order. Nations, fearful of each other, will not rid themselves independently of the menace. Mr. Capek, acutely conscious of the error of human ways, sees inevitable disaster. His case is a strong one.

Notable Tetralogy In the Making

THE dramatist, John Ogilvie, as readers of "The East Wind" will recall, is a sensitive man, and as the present story opens in 1912 he is still at grips with the emotional and spiritual problems of a rapidly changing world. Intent upon ending an outgrown liaison with a French actress, he returns from an unsuccessful season in New York, only to encounter gathering war clouds which soon break, engulfing the continent. He joins up with the British Naval Intelligence, and is sent to the East Mediterranean.

Compton Mackenzie has drawn upon his own rich experience. He himself was with the Dardanelles Expedition, was Military Control Officer at Athens, and later Director of Intelligence in Syria. He knows island life, and is now living on the Isle of Jethou, which he holds direct from the King "for life and a year," with the right to fly his own flag.

But "The South Wind" is not autobiography. Instead it is the second book of a tetralogy conceived many years ago and slowly taking shape as "The Four Winds of Love," the intention being to show how the events of the twentieth century have affected a sensitive, experienced man.

At Lipsia, John Ogilvie learns of the South Wind, for the island is protected from every other wind; and the South Wind brings tears. It is on Lipsia, after months of arduous service, exciting intrigues and healthy growth, that he meets Zoe; and soon he sings: "Blow on South Wind. Bring moisture to the blossom and set the fruit. She is mine without fears of what the future may deny. . . ." But Zoe Gadrilakis is lost at sea and her body is not found. Later, along the Appian Way outside Rome, John Ogilvie sits beside a tomb and reads the plaint: ". . . Surely together we shall be cast naked upon the same shore; me the waves may bear away, if only the earth may cover thee."

But life goes on. John Ogilvie goes on. The last scene finds him at Citrano with Athene Langridge. Her husband Wacey has just gone off to war, and she is free temporarily of a man who never arrived. There is a stirring of the elements. It is the West Wind.

The tale, though long, moves from the beginning through the last page with beauty, dignity and discernment. Still it is not the presence of these qualities alone, which distinguishes the book, but rather an elusive and yet pervasive sense of the timeless stuff of life.

AN A B. C. OF ENGLISH USAGE. By H. A. Treble and G. H. Vallins. (Oxford University Press, New York.)

It is hardly supposable that any condensed handbook of English usage would or could please everybody, but this one gives its rulings concisely, neither prissily pure nor vulgarly modern, in easily findable form.

Three Distinguished Historical Works

THE AMERICAN CIVIL WAR. An Interpretation. By Carl Russell Fish. Edited by William Ernest Smith. (Longmans, Green & Co., New York.)

THE COLONIAL PERIOD OF AMERICAN HISTORY: The Settlements, Volume III. By Charles M. Andrews. (The Yale University Press, New Haven, Conn.)

WESTERN LANDS AND THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION. By Thomas Perkins Abernathy. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York.)

THE volumes at hand deal with three distinct phases of American history, the colonial settlements, the Revolution and the Civil War; yet when taken together they form a kind of highlight report down to the beginning of the era in which we live.

The third volume of the notable work which is crowning Dr. Andrews' career rounds out the chronicle of the settlements with brightly written, carefully documented accounts of the Carolinas, Pennsylvania, "the Jerseys," New Netherlands and Jamaica. Like the earlier volumes new perspectives are opened up and new emphases placed. The 60-page chapter on the proprietary province of Pennsylvania, for example, shows William Penn to have been much milder in his devotion to Quaker forms than the school histories have noted. The former Yale professor is producing what historians are agreed is the definitive study of his period.

Which was it, liberty or private property that Patrick Henry, Robert Morris, Benjamin Franklin and the others were concerned about? If it is unfair to insist on a definite choice, it is wholly in order to say that the leaders in the Revolution also were deeply interested in lands. Dr. Abernathy of the University of Virginia, in a work published for his university's Institute for Research in the Social Sciences, shows that speculation was at the bottom of much that went on in the Continental Congress during the Revolution's dark days. An exhaustive investigation of original sources, in England as well as the United States, leads the writer to the conclusion that greedy merchants and traders, together with foreign speculators, came close to wrecking the new nation in its first years. His book is a distinct addition to American historical writing.

"The American Civil War" makes available to the general reader the late Carl Russell Fish's brilliant course on the Civil War and Reconstruction which attracted so many graduate students in American history to the University of Wisconsin in the 1920s and before. The son of a New Englander and a Georgian, Fish saw the war between the sections as neither "a lost cause" nor "a Northern victory." He sought to understand the conflict as an American whose sympathies were with both sides. Lincoln was, in his view, not the "Great Emancipator," but the "Savior of the Union."

One of Fish's graduate students, now at Miami University, has edited the manuscript and supplied several concluding chapters, including an exceptionally interesting interpretation of the constitutional aspects of the war. The 40-page bibliography is much more than a list of references, being an exceedingly lively essay in itself.

A Mexican Border Romance

GONE TO TEXAS. By John W. Thomason Jr. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

WHEN the awakening Mexican national conscience, after the execution of Maximilian, precipitated trouble on the border, an important part of the United States Army, released from Southern and Eastern fields, was detailed to patrol duty along the Rio Grande. Into a cosmopolitan welter of American soldiers, smugglers, peons, rebel ranchers, intriguing Castilians and plain scum came a Yank, Second Lieut. Edward Cantrell, Twenty-ninth Infantry, U. S. A., and immediately he encountered trouble in the person of the young rebel hell-cat, Miss Brandon Hawkes. She began by throwing herself into his arms and identifying him to the law as her worthless cousin, Rance, wanted for murder and at the moment galloping off on Cantrell's horse. Brandon's crusty old uncle, an unreconstructed rebel, completed the identification by calling Cantrell his son. And so it was that Edward, who knew whisky but not women, fell in love.

Soon the young Lieutenant's duties took him out on the trail of a squad of deserters heading for a rendezvous with the murderous Rance. That worthy was running guns into Mexico for Porfirio Diaz, just then emerging as one of the half dozen "saviors" of Mexico. Cantrell and his men caught up with the runaways at the Hawkes barn; and when he prepared to dash into the ranch house to look for other plotters, the beauteous Brandon shot him. You would think that Edward had had enough. But wait till you read the story.

Maj. Thomas knows his Texas Confederates. He was born in Huntsville and brought up on tales of the Rebellion. Being himself a first-class fighting man, he appreciates some Yank qualities, too. The author's understanding of women seems a bit fuzzy. The novel is distinguished by graphic writing, lack of pure dissertation and many pungent drawings by the author. It would make a swell movie.

Accurate Portrait in Romantic Frame

SO GREAT A MAN. By David Pilgrim. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

THE 10 months from March, 1808, to January, 1809, were critical ones in the life of Napoleon. He was at the height of his power but, bent upon crushing the Bourbons in Spain, was already ceasing to be master of his fate and becoming enmeshed in the very system of which he was the originator. It is of this dramatic time that David Pilgrim writes in "So Great a Man."

This period was an exciting one to all Europe, and Mr. Pilgrim makes the most of it. In his tale are love, intrigue, war and mysteries in abundance. Here also is an array of famous people: Marie Walewska, the gentle "Polish Rose," who loved Napoleon too much to become his empress; Josephine, fearful for the loss of her power; the ever-faithful Duroc; Fouche, who knew everyone's secrets and betrayed anyone foolish enough to trust him; the scheming Talleyrand, who had sold himself to all Europe; the dissatisfied Murats, always in the midst of plots.

Napoleon is, of course, the central figure. This book is, however, really more than the usual historical novel with a puppet hero. It is a character study put into a frame of romantic fiction. The vast and intricate background is here in order that Bonaparte may show himself from all possible angles, as lover, husband, general and statesman. By choosing to represent this special part of the Emepor's life, the author has been able to show the strength and weakness of the man, the wisdom and power which had brought him to the throne and the fatal mistakes which were to cost him his empire.

Mr. Pilgrim has studied his period thoroughly and handles the details of his setting with scrupulous exactitude. Taking only minor liberties with historical facts, he has in the reporting of Napoleon's actions and conversations closely followed authentic records of the day. The result is a full-blooded and exciting romance which brings to life the days of the First Empire and presents with a great deal of reality one of the most interesting men in history.

New Work by a Yiddish Master

THE MOTHER. By Sholem Asch. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

SARAH RIFKE had but one wish, and that was to have educated children. But as they grew up, the mother, herself illiterate and truly articulate only with pots and pans, must see them sold into Egypt—Deborah, the "girl like a diamond," apprenticed to a seamstress; Moishele a "merchant" at the age of 10. Still, she kept her dream, "robbing" Deborah and the others to see that Joine Gedalie, the youngest, a pale "scholar of the Thora" at the age of 8, had a bit of meat once a week and soup at least twice. Ansel, her husband, at last had to write to America for help, hiding fear of the unknown under great Biblical phrases, and Sarah Rifke hoped again. But when the day of departure came, she wept and kissed Deborah's sewing machine good-by: "Next to God, it was our best friend, it was food in the house."

America was not like her simple conception of the Promised Land. The laughter that followed the discovery that here "you needn't carry water from the well, but like Moses from the rock, draw it from the wall" was only in the first hopeful days. Ansel, a man of learning and a reader of the Scriptures, could not find employment and the eldest son, anxious to get married and "succeed," took his father to the shop of a Jew in Brooklyn, to become a sewer of shirts for the rest of his life. A "topsy-turvy land," Sarah Rifke said, consoling his wounded pride, "where ignoramuses have the upper hand."

She dreamed nostalgically of the old days in the neighborly village in Poland, not realizing that the children, dearer to her than her own flesh and blood, were growing up in New York and had no dreams to remember. She consoled herself, but Deborah, spending 16 hours a day in a factory through the long winter months, envied the dressed-up wax manikins in the shops for their peace and happiness, and ran off eventually with an improvident sculptor. The "American" son, ashamed to celebrate the first Passover with his new bride, the daughter of the "wealthy" shoemaker, abandoned her. When Sarah Rifke came to see these things, it was too late; she had worked too long and did not have the strength to understand. She took to her bed. "It is time for me to die."

Sholem Asch, in this novel, continues with the saga of the "greenhorns," the poor Jews without money, that he gave Yiddish literature in "Mottke the Thief" and many plays and short stories. The translation, admirably clear yet idiomatic, is by Elsa Krauch.

HARBOR NIGHTS. By Harvey Klemmer. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

AS Harvey Klemmer points out in "Harbor Nights," those who go down to the sea find few exciting battles with waves, wind or sail. They're seldom shipwrecked, they rarely prosper. Instead, they spend humdrum eight-hour shifts of chipping paint and cleaning grimy winches.

Square-cut clothes and sealubber ways banish these wanderers from the Ginzas, Strands or Bunds of foreign ports of call. Their world is seen through the bottom of a beer mug, or in the eyes of a barmaid, not an anchor's throw from their ship. Stupid brawls, dismal carousals and frustrating courtships are the sailor's joys until harbor nights and a peonage labor system send him broke, bruised and drunk back to sea, there to dream of a landside job until his ship gets in again.

Klemmer doesn't burden his saga of port adventures with soft laments. Once a seaman, later a school teacher and newspaperman, he tells his tales of European, South American and Great Lakes saloons just as a sailor would do it, and so doing, he spares his readers nothing of the salty, though often brutal, vernacular of the docks.

Federal Theater Discussed

BREAD AND CIRCUSES. A Study of the Federal Theater. By Willson Whitman. (Oxford University Press, New York.)

THE first book to appear on the subject of the W P A theater project must necessarily be an argument for its better features, since no one, with the possible exception of Brock Pemberton, the producer, has revealed sufficient animus toward it to go to the trouble otherwise. Although Miss Whitman has not been connected with the Federal Theater, she might as well have been.

The many triumphs of the enterprise, headed by Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, have been recorded by writers on the theater everywhere. In the history of the American stage, the productions of "Murder in the Cathedral," "The Living Newspaper," the Harlem setting of "Macbeth" and "The Lost Colony" are not likely to be forgotten and may possibly provide precedents. Similarly, the country-wide flop, "It Can't Happen Here," will provide some lessons.

The author tosses all the available material into a dozen chapter headings, traces and retraces her steps, but perhaps lays the groundwork for a later consideration of the Federal Theater in its true perspective. A bibliography of articles on the project is appended.

Tale of the Great Boer Trek

THEY SEEK A COUNTRY. By Francis Brett Young. (Reynal & Hitchcock, New York.)

THE great trek of the Boers from the Cape country to the promised land that was to become the Orange Free State, was a slow and labored affair. Francis Brett Young's account of it in the form of historical fiction is the same. When something is due to happen it is a long time happening, as would be the case, it may be granted, with a column of ox-drawn wagons and droves of cattle and sheep on a long journey; but that was a hundred years ago and it may be doubted whether many have the time or patience now to travel at such a slow pace with a story-teller. It is only when, at the end of the trek, the home-seeking farmers are resisted by the savage black natives and are compelled to give battle, that the action quickens; and even then there are times when the reader is kept waiting longer than need be.

With the broad sweep of the trek as background, Mr. Young tells the story of the Prinsloos and of a young Englishman, who, having escaped from a convict ship, is befriended by them. There is a fair daughter, Lisbet, and propinquity does the rest. This is as it should be, for the young Englishman had committed no crime.

The romance, like the trek, moves slowly but surely, surviving the disasters that overtake the rest of the Prinsloos and their neighbors; and there is fulfilment for the lovers at the end of the trek.

When that time comes, and the book is closed, there is a willingness to forgive Francis Brett Young for taking his own time in telling his story, for the feeling lingers that one has verily trekked with the Boer folk and, although it has been a plodding pilgrimage, there is richness in the remembrance that remains. It may even be granted that, had the pace been swifter, something might have been missed along the way, something of the beauty of the South African scene and something of the rugged lives of the Prinsloos and their like.

SIGRID UNDSET ON MARRIAGE

THE FAITHFUL WIFE. By Sigrid Undset. (Alfred A. Knopf, New York.)

SIGRID UNDSET'S latest novel of marriage and divorce moves the reader to hopeless grief and leaves a taste of ashes in the mouth. In its characters Nordic gloom and fatalism have dwindled to petty disillusionment and pale cynicism, and there is nothing to relieve the carefully maintained mediocrity of plot and characters unless it is Nathalie's persistent love. The story is all the more depressing because its author's strong strokes and unimpassioned viewpoint, which recognizes human happiness but discounts it, are overawing. We are left, if not convinced, at least too discouraged to seek evidence with which to contradict her.

Nathalie Nordgaard has loved her husband, Sigurd, for 16 years, but when the story opens she is slowly becoming aware of a change in their relationship. He talks more often of the "irreconcilable" difference of his country upbringing and her town rearing, of his disappointment that they have never had a child and of his dissatisfaction that Nathalie, even though it was at times necessary, kept her rather important job. While they are vacationing she learns the cause of his restiveness. He has had an affair with a young girl who is going to have a child. Though devastated, Nathalie insists on a divorce for the child's sake, and to soothe her loneliness forces herself into an unsuccessful liaison with a former sweetheart. After four years of unhappiness, during which Sigurd's mistress dies, she wrings from him an admission that he still loves her and they reunite to take care of his little daughter and her adopted son.

Nathalie's sorrow is the element which most deeply involves the reader's attention, but the rest of the characters, and their vague, intuitive, pessimistic discussions of world problems are interesting. It would be a satisfaction, however, to know whether the author or the translator is to blame for the obscurity of much of the language. Until we learn to substitute "and" for "but" and "yet" for "so," the book, whatever its final effect, is simply irritating.

—Sophia Fox Kenamore.

Share - Cropper Tragedy

THE GARDEN OF ADONIS. By Caroline Gordon. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York)

WHEN the Mortimers, poor white share-croppers, returned to Ben Allard's Alabama plantation after an absence of years, they found the place showing the wear of time. Mr. Ben "had broke a lot, too." Ote, the Mortimer son, was a refugee from unemployment in Detroit. He missed the gay life of the city, and his loneliness made him all the more susceptible to the charms of Idelle Sheeler.

The Sheelers also were croppers for Allard, but the Mortimers considered them "trifling" and a notch lower in the social scale. Allard's tenants did not know that he was hopelessly in debt and dependent upon the indulgence of bankers, who had thus far suffered him to remain on his ancestral acres. Ben's son and daughter were living in Countsville, a small industrial city, where the daughter, Letty, had fallen in love with Jim Carter, married to Sara Camp. The Camps had moved their factory from the North, and had never been entirely accepted by the gentility of the community. The penniless young bloods and debutantes didn't mind sampling the excellent liquor and food of the Yankee interlopers, however.

The apparition of doom that hovers in the background as the book opens assumes more definite form as the story progresses. Old Ben Allard is staking his all on a successful tobacco crop, but it is stricken by drouth. This disaster plays havoc with Ote's plan to marry Idelle against his parents' wishes. Incest plays a prominent role in the scheme of the narrative, which remains unresolved as violence and death mark its final pages.

It has evidently been Caroline Gordon's intention to symbolize in some measure the social forces shaping the destiny of the South. The tenant system, the decay of the landed gentry, the invasion of Northern industry, and other phases of Southern life are touched upon. Although she has been more than a little successful in illuminating some of these problems, it is the author's consummate mastery of words that elevates her novel above the merely competent. If her presentation at times falls short of a needed dramatic intensity, it is distinguished throughout by suavity of tone and brilliance of imagery.

—Jack Conroy.

By a Goncourt Prize - Winner

REHEARSAL IN OVIEDO. By Joseph Peyre. Translated from the French by R. H. Torres. (Knight Publishers, New York.)

WHEN Gen. Franco's forces captured Gijon a few days ago, they also ended the loyalists' siege of Oviedo, which the rebels had taken early in the war. Bloody battles and sieges are an old story for Oviedo, and this book tells of earlier strife there, in many ways a prelude to the present civil war. The time was just three years ago, when the Spanish Left, fearing a Fascist coup, launched the ill-fated October revolt.

Then as now, though they were attacking instead of defending the Government, the Asturian miners battled fiercely against overwhelming odds at Oviedo. The writer, winner of the 1935 Goncourt Prize, takes as his tragic hero Morenu, a leader of the miners in the futile siege. It is a compact and vivid account of the conflict, and the reactions of a little group of characters. The background of war is far more impressively done than the development of the actors, however, so that it quite overshadows them.

The blurb writer is not content to let the book stand on its own merits as an effective though minor picture of war's horrors and of Spanish fighters. Instead, the author is introduced as having "a narrative style without equal in modern literature," as heir to "the mantle worn in the past by Dos Passos and Hemingway." When last heard from, they still had their mantle. Nor is the hero quite "as eternal as the Cid," as the blurbster asserts. Mr. Peyre is pretty good, but he's scarcely that good.

—Ferd Gottlieb.

Did Edison Banish Spooks?

GHOSTS. By Edith Wharton. (D. Appleton-Century Company, New York.)

TEN of the 11 tales in this collection of Mrs. Wharton's ghost stories had appeared in other volumes before her death. One—"All Souls"—appears for the first time in "Ghosts." That one was written apparently to refute the statement of Osbert Sitwell that "ghosts went out when electricity came in," for the scene is laid in a house equipped with electric lights, telephones and radio. Oddly enough, it tends to support Mr. Sitwell's contention, for it is far more adequate as a study of the effect of fear on the mind than it is as a shiver-producing chronicle.

There is little need to mention here Mrs. Wharton's inventiveness and unquestioned command of short-story technique. They are obvious in this collection as in all her other stories, though she was definitely never at her best in creating supernatural tales. In the present volume, the two stories in which there can be no natural answer to the sequence of events—"Mr. Jones" and "Pomegranate Seed"—are the least awe-inspiring; while the two in which the ghosts are not ghosts are by far the most effective in raising gooseflesh. One—"Bewitched"—is the story of a girl masquerading as the ghost of her dead sister. The second, "A Bottle of Perrier," is a superbly told tale of the murder of a man by a servant, half-crazed by loneliness and disappointment.

In an interesting preface, Mrs. Wharton has given her ideas on the creation and appreciation of ghost stories. The faculty for enjoying ghost stories, she believed, has become almost atrophied in modern man. As for the ghosts themselves, what they really need is "not echoing passages and hidden doors . . . but only continuity and silence." And since the "small" hours are continually growing smaller, "the ghost may after all succumb first to the impossibility of finding standing room in a roaring and discontinuous universe."

—Doris Talbot Hetlage.

ETIQUETTE: "THE BLUE BOOK OF SOCIAL USAGE" By Emily Post. (Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York.)

THE current issue of Mrs. Post's famous work on what to do and how to do it is the forty-second since the appearance of the first edition back in those early post-war days when the country was returning to normalcy under Harding. While some of the preceding issues have been reprintings with new sections here and there, the present edition is described as "rewritten, revised and reset."

How much social usage is subject to the changing times is indicated by the appearance of new chapters on manners for motorists, restaurant etiquette, simple party-giving, modern man and girl, modern exactions of courtesy, fraternity house parties and junior etiquette. The etiquette of smoking, the telephone, the radio and the airplane also has required overhauling of the previous sections under those headings. The index at the end of the nearly 900-page volume is a fine-tooth combing of the text.

times necessary, kept her rather important job. While they are vacationing she learns the cause of his restiveness. He has had an affair with a young girl who is going to have a child. Though devastated, Nathalie insists on a divorce for the child's sake, and to soothe her loneliness forces herself inte an unsuccessful liaison with a former sweetheart. After four years of unhappiness, during which Sigurd's mistress dies, she wrings from him an admission that he still loves her and they reunite to take care of his little daughter and her adopted son.

Nathalie's sorrow is the element which most deeply involves the reader's attention, but the rest of the characters, and their vague, intuitive, pessimistic discussions of world problems are interesting. It would be a satisfaction, however, to know whether the author or the translator is to blame for the obscurity of much of the language. Until we learn to substitute "and" for "but" and "yet" for "so," the book, whatever its final effect, is simply irritating.

TEN of the 11 tales in this collection of Mrs. Wharton's ghost stories had appeared in other volumes before her death. One—"All Souls"—appears for the first time in "Ghosts." That one was written apparently to refute the statement of Osbert Sitwell that "ghosts went out when electricity came in," for the scene is laid in a house equipped with electric lights, telephones and radio. Oddly enough, it tends to support Mr. Sitwell's contention, for it is far more adequate as a study of the effect of fear on the mind than it is as a shiver-producing chronicle.

There is little need to mention here Mrs. Wharton's inventiveness and unquestioned command of short-story technique. They are obvious in this collection as in all her other stories, though she was definitely never at her best in creating supernatural tales. In the present volume, the two stories in which there can be no natural answer to the sequence of events—"Mr. Jones" and "Pomegranate Seed"—are the least awe-inspiring; while the two in which the ghosts are not ghosts are by far the most effective in raising gooseflesh. One—"Bewitched"—is the story of a girl masquerading as the ghost of her dead sister. The second, "A Bottle of Perrier," is a superbly told tale of the murder of a man by a servant, half-crazed by loneliness and disappointment.

In an interesting preface, Mrs. Wharton has given her ideas on the creation and appreciation of ghost stories. The faculty for enjoying ghost stories, she believed, has become almost atrophied in modern man. As for the ghosts themselves, what they really need is "not echoing passages and hidden doors . . . but only continuity and silence." And since the "small" hours are continually growing smaller, "the ghost may after all succumb first to the impossibility of finding standing room in a roaring and discontinuous universe."

ETIQUETTE: "THE BLUE BOOK OF SOCIAL USAGE" By Emily Post. (Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York.)

THE current issue of Mrs. Post's famous work on what to do and how to do it is the forty-second since the appearance of the first edition back in those early post-war days when the country was returning to normalcy under Harding. While some of the preceding issues have been reprintings with new sections here and there, the present edition is described as "rewritten, revised and reset."

How much social usage is subject to the changing times is indicated by the appearance of new chapters on manners for motorists, restaurant etiquette, simple party-giving, modern man and girl, modern exactions of courtesy, fraternity house parties and junior etiquette. The etiquette of smoking, the telephone, the radio and the airplane also has required overhauling of the previous sections under those headings. The index at the end of the nearly 900-page volume is a fine-tooth combing of the text.

last heard from, they still had their mantle. Nor is the hero quite "as eternal as the Cid," as the blurbster asserts. Mr. Peyre is pretty good, but he's scarcely that good.

Not for Gloomy Days

THE CAPTAIN HAD A WIFE. By O. P. Gilbert. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, N. Y.)

TWO powerful characters, expertly drawn and skillfully guided through absorbing scenes, dominate this dismal but engrossing novel translated from the French. It opens in Dunkirk, France, with the cold-hearted and fanatically religious Madame Mollenard learning that her husband, a hard-drinking and irreligious skipper of a freighter, apparently has at last slipped and will be caught running arms in the Orient. The scene shifts to Shanghai where Captain Mollenard is sitting in the Minotaur's cabin gloating over the successful landing of his cargo. Talking to a company sub-agent, he characterizes his wife, after 25 years of marriage, as a woman who gives him a chill down his spine—a pious soul who hates her husband, makes existence at home intolerable, gives all her time and money to the church, is convinced that the gates of heaven stand open for her, and patiently awaits the time when the captain will come home too ill to fend for himself. The carousing skipper is fortunate in that he is home only one month out of 12.

Mollenard's shore-aids in the smuggling game—a choice assortment of cutthroats—turn against him, and there is fast and furious action ending with the burning of his ship at sea. Ironically the captain and his crew find themselves hailed as heroes on landing at Dunkirk. Mollenard's celebration in a waterfront dive is interrupted when his mouselike daughter, driven to desperation by her mother's iron will, commits suicide. It is a blow to the father, but the author portrays the mother renewing her martyr's smile and ostentatiously casting her eyes heavenward with no real affliction in her heart. Then paralysis strikes the captain down. His wife shanghais him back to her home and begins taking a terrible revenge on the helpless invalid. At the same time she leads the townspeople to praise her for her self-sacrifice.

It's a moving story but not for reading on a gloomy day unless one enjoys being morbid.

—Robert Randolph.

Not a Little Startling

THE ENEMY WITHIN. By Captain Henry Landau. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

ASIDE from giving an inside view of German spy activities, with documents and proofs involving Von Papen, Von Bernsdorf, and others, Capt. Landau preaches a timely sermon in his story of German sabotage in America during the World War. Here are some of his most alarming observations:

"At least $150,000,000 damage was done in the United States by sabotage agents during the World War."

"The weakness of the United States, both then and now, is that there was, and still is, no American counter-espionage service. Foreign spies can operate here in comparative safety."

"Germ warfare was in its infancy 20 years ago. But tremendous strides have been made since, both in developing more deadly and concentrated strains of disease bacteria and in perfecting easier methods of disseminating them. It would be too late to start organizing a counter-espionage defense after the outbreak of hostilities, for in a few days a handful of agents could initiate a nationwide epidemic of plague, cholera, or other deadly diseases."

Fourteenth Century Italy

THE TRANQUIL HEART: PORTRAIT OF GIOVANNI BOCCACCIO. By Catherine Carswell. (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.)

TO STUDY the life of Boccaccio is to study both the history of fourteenth century Italy and the life of Petrarch, for Boccaccio was active in the social and political affairs of his day, and in his later years he came into close contact with his famous contemporary. Consequently, Miss Carswell's biography includes exhaustive discussions of Petrarch's activities and ideas, and a detailed account of the political upheavals, ecclesiastical intrigues, social questions and recurring plagues of early Renaissance Italy.

Boccaccio was the illegitimate son of a Florentine usurer named Boccaccino. The father wished to have the youthful Giovanni follow in his footsteps; but, when he saw this hope was not to be realized, he suggested that the boy study law. The son, however, had his mind set on literature, and he persisted in this desire. That he was not mistaken is proved by the fact that today, after 600 years, his "Decameron" is still read, and that his various works have served as inspiration for later masters, including Chaucer, Shakspeare and Tennyson.

Aside from the "Decameron," two of Boccaccio's works deserve special notice; his life of Dante and his "Filostrato." The latter is the story of Troilus and Cressida, later made known to English readers by Chaucer. The life of Dante is said to be the first biography of the modern world. Although a sincere admirer of the great epic poet, Boccaccio did not hesitate to record Dante's frailties; his intolerance toward those whose opinions differed from his, his neglect of wife and children, his lechery. The biography was offensive to many English commentators of the day, who thought such things could not and should not be true of so great a religious poet.

Some of the best portions of "The Tranquil Heart" are concerned with the medieval conceptions of love, marriage and women, with the Renaissance poets' ideas about the relative importance of Latin and the vernacular in literature, and with the relation between Boccaccio and Chaucer. Furthermore, except for the "Decameron," the author gives synopses of Boccaccio's principal works, a real service, when one considers that many of these never have been translated into English.

As a whole, the book will not be of interest so much to the general reader as to the student of Dante, Petrarch, Boccaccio and medieval history.

Some Recent Thrillers

THE CASTLE ISLAND CASE. By Van Wyck Mason and Henry Clay Gipson. (Reynal & Hitchcock, Inc., New York.)

A DELICATE CASE OF MURDER. By Sinclair Gluck. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

INVITATION TO KILL. By Gardner Low. (G. P. Putman's Sons, New York.)

THE MASTER SPY. By Arthur Gask. (The Macaulay Co., New York.)

DEATH IN THE GLASS. By Newton Gayle. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

ONE of the latest numbers thrown off by detective-fiction writers in their strenuous efforts to be different is "The Castle Island Case." This is a combination of writing and photography with the actual clues shown by snapshots. Maj. Allenby, as a representative of an insurance company, goes to Bermuda to investigate the mysterious suicide of Judy Fortier. Slick paper and clever photography make this exciting reading, with the pictures creating a rather horrible air of reality. The reader will have to be blind to escape the solution of this one.

"A Delicate Case of Murder" continues the American tradition of fast-moving, humorous adventure-mystery tales started by Arthur Sommers Roche. "Breeze" Burnham, ex-football player, finds his lady-love up to her neck in trouble and attempts to relieve the situation to the amusement of the reader and the downfall of skullduggery in municipal politics. One wishes it were all as simple as that.

"Invitation to Kill" is a good idea gone slightly sour. The author presumably takes the events occurring in his friends' lives and builds a detective story before the reader's eyes. The person to whom he reads the manuscript is a psychiatrist and an important figure in the events. The only thing wrong with this is that the asides are more interesting than the story. The psychoanalysis will probably appall professionals and interest laymen.

"The Master Spy" is just what its title indicates. English science and the English Secret Service outwit, in gentlemanly fashion, the dastardly attempts of Germany to bring war and devastation upon civilization, with England acting, as usual, the Sir Galahad of foreign politics.

"Death in the Glass" revolves around an excellent situation—a party assembled through advertisements in a weekly literary magazine. The situation is better than the writing and the plot is as full of loopholes as the income tax law.

Rediscovering Tom Moore

THE HARP THAT ONCE—. A Chronicle of the Life of Thomas Moore. By Howard Mumford Jones. (Henry Holt & Co., New York.)

MOST people today who think of Tom Moore at all, associate his name vaguely with that of Byron and the romantic poets of the Regency period. Some may recall him as the poet of the "Irish Melodies," notably "The Harp That Once Through Tara's Halls," and "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms." For the rest, scarcely anyone knows or cares.

In his own day Tom Moore was anything but the obscure literary figure he has since become. Toasted by Lord Byron, idolized by his fellow Irishmen and by a large English following as well, and roundly abused as a demoralizer of youth, he managed to hold the public eye during most of a long and amazingly industrious life. In the newspapers his poetical squibs filled the place of cartoons in contemporary journalism; and it was this, as much as his other writing, that brought Moore fame during his lifetime.

Contemplating these things with a faint sense of melancholy, Mr. Jones has produced a sympathetic and very able biography of Moore, whose crowning tragedy was that he outlived himself. Moore was a self-made man, whose story often resembles the Fame and Fortune legends, except that the fortune was never quite forthcoming. The story as told by Mr. Jones is well worth reading; for it portrays the period as well as the man with skill and often with fine humor.

MEN ARE BROTHERS. By Eva Taylor. (The Viking Press, New York.)

Shows by examples from the lives of great men of all races that all peoples have contributed and are contributing to the advancement of mankind, that no one race or nation has a monopoly of any good, that the very foundation of any liberty or growth is the recognition of others and of the common brotherhood of men.

UNITED CHARITIES FUND CAMPAIGN OPENS TOMORROW

$2,555,000 Will Be Sought for 85 Religious and Non-Sectarian Welfare Agencies.

FORMER MAYOR KIEL HEADS SOLICITORS

Goal $45,000 Less Than for Last Year—Facts About Distribution and Cost of Work.

In the sixth annual United Charities campaign, which opens tomorrow, $2,555,000 will be sought for 85 Protestant, Catholic, Jewish and non-sectarian welfare agencies of St. Louis and St. Louis County.

Several thousand volunteer solicitors under former Mayor Henry W. Kiel as chairman will conduct the campaign, which will continue until Nov. 20.

This will be the only general campaign for funds to be held this year by welfare agencies. Several, such as the Salvation Army, the Boy Scouts, the Y. M. C. A. and Y. M. H. A., have made or will make their individual appeals for support.

The 85 agencies participating in this year's campaign are five fewer than last year. Agencies which were listed last year but not this year are the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association, which has disbanded; St. Anthony's and Missouri Baptist Hospitals; and the Missouri Association for Occupational Therapy. A hospital and its clinic which were listed as two agencies last year, this year are counted as but one.

The campaign goal is $45,000 less than that fixed for last year, but $428,000 more than the $2,127,000 pledged in last year's campaign.

A deficit of about $75,000, which will be incurred this year, is included in the goal. Although pledges in last year's campaign totaled $2,127,000, a reserve of $85,000 was deducted to provide for pledges uncollectable because of deaths or for other reasons, leaving $2,042,000 available from last year's campaign for this year's expenses. Actual expenditures totaled $2,170,060, indicating a deficit of $128,060, but this was reduced to about $75,000 by collection of pledges made in prior years.

Income, Budget and Payments.

In adjoining columns are printed the list of participating agencies, and the amounts each is receiving during 1937 from United Charities. Many of the agencies have other income, from fees, endowments or other sources, and the money they get from United Charities is used to meet deficits which otherwise would be incurred in their operation.

This is most conspicuously true in the case of the hospitals, which have substantial income from paying patients, but provide free, or part-pay care, for many others.

How much each agency receives is determined by the United Charities Budget Committee, subject to the approval of the board of directors, after scrutiny of budgets submitted by each agency through one of the three member federations, the Community Fund, Catholic Charities or Jewish Federation. Other things being equal, the amounts allotted next year to each agency are likely to approximate the allotments this year.

Members of the Budget Committee which will make the decision are Paul Bakewell Jr., Irving Bettmann, the Rev. John J. Butler, William C. Connett, Robert C. Day, Leo C. Fuller, William L. Igoe, Gale F. Johnston, Benjamin M. Loeb, Sidney Maestre, Frank C. Rand, Aaron S. Rauh, Charles M. Rice, Oliver F. Richards, John E. Riley, Bishop William Scarlett, W. B Scholz, Ethan A. H. Shepley, Edwin H. Wagner, Aaron Waldheim and William D. Walsh.

Each agency receives its funds month by month as its need arises. None receives any money from United Charities unless it shows a deficit after applying against its operating expenses all other income, except, of course, contributions which may be received as endowments.

All contributions go into a general fund, to be spent at the discretion of the Budget Committee. A donor may specify that his money is to go to one or more particular agencies, but no agency will receive more than the amount allotted to it by the Budget Committee, even though designated gifts to it might exceed that amount.

Cost of the Campaign.

The cost of conducting the campaign is estimated at $115,000, or less than 5 per cent of the amount sought. This estimate is based on the actual cost of last year's campaign, $99,540, plus $15,000 for the added expense this year of the United Charities Exposition, held at the Municipal Auditorium last week to acquaint the public with the work of the participating agencies.

In addition to the campaign costs, United Charities has a year-round administrative expense which, for 1937, will total $54,354, or 2½ per cent of the money pledged last year.

The money sought in the campaign is to be used for purposes for which public funds are not available. Of the five classifications in which United Charities agencies are placed, by far the largest share of funds goes to the hospitals and other health agencies which provide free or part-pay care to those unable to pay full rates.

These health agencies recieved 36 per cent of the money contributed in last year's campaign. With that money they provided free or part pay care to 39,278 patients and 4347 infants; gave medical treatment in clinics to 17,251 men, women and children; provided nursing or medical attention in their homes for 3438 infants; and nursing care in homes to 12,307 patients.

Where Other Money Goes.

The family service agencies got 24 per cent of the funds raised last year, which enabled them to provide guidance and advice for 4288 families and material relief each month for 963 families. If the only need of an applicant in distress is money, the United Charities family service agencies refer him to the public relief agency, but where the problem is complicated by illness, neglected children, marital difficulties, poor home management or some other factor, the United Charities agencies will undertake to deal with those situations in addition to supplying the necessities of life while seeking to rehabilitate the family.

Agencies for the care of children received 16.7 per cent of the money raised last year. They cared for 1364 children each month in institutions, aided 2589 in their own homes or in foster homes, and took 50 boys from unwholesome downtown environments and placed them on farms.

The group of agencies listed under "Leisure Time Activities" include settlement houses, day nurseries and organizations for the betterment of Negroes and foreign born persons. They got 6.6 per cent of the money raised last year. Total attendance at their educational and recreational programs for the year was more than 800,000. Each month 409 children were cared for at the day nurseries while their mothers were employed. Among their other varied activities were English classes for the foreign born, attended each month by 523 men and women.

In the old folks' homes, which received 2.2 per cent of the money raised last year, 225 men and women were cared for. Many of these would still require institutional care even though adequate old age pensions were paid.

Under the heading "Specialized Services" are grouped agencies which received 7.4 per cent of the money raised last year. They include the central offices of three federations represented in United Charities—the Community Fund, Catholic Charities and Jewish Federation—the Social Service Exchange, through which the agencies clear information concerning those under their care; the Social Planning Council, which studies changes in the community's needs and recommends means of meeting them; the National Red Cross, and the Missouri Welfare League, which is concerned chiefly with prison welfare work.

Campaign Organization.

The organization which will conduct the campaign is divided into five major groups, each with its own chairman.

The special gifts division, with Wilbur B. Jones as chairman, will solicit those expected to give $250 or more. Its quota has been fixed at $1,469,000, more than half of the total sought.

An employe division, headed by Irving Edison, will solicit workers in business establishments and public offices. Its quota has been fixed at $726,000, somewhat less than a third of the total.

In residential neighborhoods a house-to-house canvass will be made by solicitors in the general division, of which Fred L. English is chairman. This division's quota is $245,000.

The county division, under Mayor Charles A. Shaw of Clayton, has a quota of $90,000. Solicitors under Dr. E. V. Mastin and Dr. O. A. Kelly will seek contributions from physicians and dentists. The quota for this division is $25,000.

In last year's campaign contributions were obtained from 163,158 individuals and corporations. The contributions of 156,464 were amounts less than $25. Contributions between $25 and $100 were obtained from 4298 donors; between $100 and $250 from 1306; and more than $250 from 1090.

As in previous years the campaign organization is suggesting contributions of 1 percent of income of those whose annual earnings for less than $3000. Those with larger incomes are asked to give more. Payments may be made in cash, or in quarterly or monthly installments.

HOW $2,554,842 GOAL FOR UNITED CHARITIES CAMPAIGN WAS SET

IN explanation of how the goal for the sixth annual United Charities campaign was ed Charities campaign was fixed, the campaign organization prepared this statement:

The campaign goal for 1938 has been set at $2,554,842.87, which is $57,891.48 less than the amount which the Budget Committee determined was necessary to meet the service requirements of the agencies and all other costs of the organization for 1937. It has been possible to set the goal at this figure due to two factors: 1. Experience during 1937 indicates that the income of the agencies from sources other than the United Charities will be greater than estimated for 1937. 2. Discontinuance of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association. These factors more than offset the increases necessary to take care of the deficit incurred in 1937, an increase in the reserve for losses, and the cost of the United Charities Exposition.

These changes from the recommendations of the Budget Committee may be summarized as follows:

1937 requirements as approved by the Budget Committee.	$2,612,734.35
Estimated deficit for 1937	75,000.00
Increase in reserve for losses	15,000.00
Cost of exposition	15,000.00
	$2,717,734.35
Less: Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association	37,000.00
	$2,680,734.35
Less: Estimated increase in agency income from outside sources and reduction of administration expense	$125,891.48
1938 campaign goal	$2,554,842.87

Horses and Mules.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., Oct. 30.—Horses the past week were usually draggy and the price trend was lower, with the exception of the better grades of mares and fillies and well-broken work offerings, which held about steady. Probably the poorest results were on wild, branded material that sold on the lowest basis in five years. A good many buyers attended the sale.

The mule market looked about in line with the previous week except for some good 1000 to 1200 pound material, with quality which had a strong undertone. Support for mules from the cotton country continues disappointing.

Commission receipts of horses and mules the past week were approximately 535 head, and a similar run is in sight for trading the coming week.

*NATIVE HORSE QUOTATIONS.

Good to choice chunks, $90@110; medium to good draft, $100@125; good to choice draft, $125@150; smooth-mouthed chunks, $65@90; large farm mares, $125@150; medium farm mares, $90@110; fillies, yearlings and twos; small, common, $30@50; good size, $60@85; extra size and quality, $120@150 (horse colts sell $15@25 per head less than fillies); good Southern mares, $75@100; small Southern mares, $40@60; small cheap horses, $30@50.

*MULE QUOTATIONS.

Farm mules, 15.2 to 16 hands, $110@140; colt mules, small, $60@85; draft mules, $150@200; mine mules, 14.1 to 15.2 hands, $120@160; choice cotton mules, 14.3 to 15.2 hands, $160@200; small green mules over 3 years old, $50@85.

*Quotations are for average animals and do not cover those of outstanding quality or the very cheapest grade.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY STOCKYARDS

Shares Emerge From Recent Turbulent Threshing With Best Week's Gain in About 4 Years

Nineteen Per Cent of Loss Suffered From Mid-August to Oct. 18 Recovered—Slight Decline Yesterday.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The best stock market advance in almost four years brought sunshine into Wall Street canyons this week after more than two months of almost uninterrupted gloom. Prices of shares of several leading corporations at the close of trading were from $5 to almost $15 above the levels of a week ago.

Today's session was not in itself very inspiring. Prices fluttered about without notable progress in either direction, but, when compared with the levels at which they finished last Saturday, they recorded striking recovery. The Associated Press average of 60 leading issues advanced $3.90 for the week to $50.16—the biggest weekly gain since the third week of January, 1934. At this level, prices have recovered 19 per cent of the loss suffered in the steep slide from mid-August to Oct. 18. Last Saturday the 60-stock average was 46.3, while today it was 50.2 at the close, firmly for the day above the turbulent 40's.

The week's business barometers, however, still pointed to "unsettled." Steel and automobile production and railway freight movement slackened. But at least two things happened that struck Wall Street as possibly significant.

Events of the Week.

First, Tuesday afternoon directors of United States Steel Corporation ordered a dividend of $1 a share on the common stock, the first such disbursement in five and one-half years. Wall Street was definitely cheered.

The market did not do much the next day. Veterans, however, recalled that October back in 1923, when pessimism in the securities marketplace was almost dissipated by the announcement, "U. S. Steel directors order an extra of ¼ of one per cent."

Wednesday night brought the second development. The response to that was immediate. That was the action of the Federal Reserve Board in cutting margin cash requirements for the purchase of stock and in lifting the amount of cash necessary to sell short.

The news of the week brought a steady stream of corporation earnings reports for the quarterly period ending Sept. 30, and, while Wall Street is more interested in future earnings prospects than past results, the reports were generally encouraging, indicating that corporate profits as a whole in the first nine months of 1937 were the best since 1929. The first 149 important corporations to issue September quarter reports showed an aggregate net for the three months of $338,739,305, a gain of 23 per cent over the similar period of last year.

Among Factors Involved.

The third quarter reports have tended to show a narrowing of the gain over 1936 shown earlier in the year. For instance, U. S. Steel's net for the third quarter was 125 per cent over 1936, while for the first half, it was up 299 per cent. Du Pont was 3 per cent under 1936 in the third quarter, while 4 per cent over in the first half.

Bumper crops, despite smaller prices, still tend to bolster farm income. Business Week says that, "while farm income ran 14 per cent ahead of last year in the first nine months, it probably will run closer to 6 per cent above 1936 the rest of the year."

Commodity prices have continued to drop, the Associated Press daily index of 35 basic staples reaching 80.6 per cent of the 1926 average, a drop of about 12 per cent in three months. Yet there are some signs that buyers who have been waiting for the bottom of the market are coming in. Cotton mill activity picked up, and a notable increase in large building projects has been announced.

Some Gainers and Busy Month.

Here is how some stocks finished the week, with their gains over last Saturday: Chrysler, $76.25, up $14.62; Bethlehem Steel, $55.50, up $12.50; U. S. Steel, $63.50, up $10.12; Montgomery Ward, $44.37, up $7.37; General Motors, $43.25, up $5.37; Paramount, $15.62, up $4.37; General Electric, $43.25, up $4.75; Southern Pacific, $22.87, up $3.50.

Completing a month which included one of the heaviest day's trading in exchange history, turnover in the Stock Exchange in October totaled 51,064,881 shares, best month's business since January this year. In September 33,854,188 shares changed hands while in October, 1936, the total was 43,995,282 shares. Bonds changing hands this month were $227,291,245, face value, the biggest total since April this year. In September $182,078,000 changed hands and in October last year the total was $337,919,000. The big day of stock trading this month was Tuesday, Oct. 19, when 7,287,990 shares were dealt in, the largest total since July 21, 1933. Stocks staged a rally on the nineteenth as the climax of the late summer and early fall decline which had shopped some $25,000,000 from listed values.

Sales during the week amounted to 11,190,090 shares, compared with 22,165,791 shares a week ago and 8,539,080 corresponding week a year ago. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 351,771,084 shares, compared with 396,884,163 a year ago and 282,301,497 two years ago.

Many Pivotal Issues Slip Trifle in Saturday Session.

Many pivotal issues slipped a trifle lower in today's indecisive abbreviated session of the stock market. No particular trend was apparent, and t rading was at a fairly slow pace through most of the day, with the ticker frequently at a standstill. Steel shares proved the most hesitant, although one or two closed higher. Rails were narrow and mixed. A few amusement and specialty stocks moved higher.

U. S. Steel dipped as low as 62¼, but rallie dlater to finish at 63½, off ½ net. Bethlehem, on the other hand, ended ⅝ up at 55½. Others down a bit for the day were Inland Steel, 70; American Rolling Mills, 26⅛; Westinghouse Electric, 104½; Western Union, 32¾; General Motors, 41¼; American Telephone, 154⅛; Sears-Roebuck, 70¾; Montgomery Ward, 43⅜; Anaconda, 31⅞; Kennecott, 36¾; Union Pacific, 99; New York Central, 21½; du Pont, 125¾; Union Carbide, 80, and Allied Chemical, 163¾.

Chrysler benefited from a $3 dividend on the common ordered after the close yesterday, and finished up 1 at 76¼. Other gainers included R-K-O, 6⅜; Paramount, 15⅝; Radio Corporation, 8⅛; Santa Fe, 42⅜; Northern Pacific, 15; Goodrich, 22¾; Goodyear, 26¼; Woolworth, 41¾; Standard Oil of New Jersey, 53½; Texas Corporation, 46¼, and Barnsdall, 16¼. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks dropped .1 of a point at 50.2. Transfers totaled 713,910 shares, against 1,565,020 last Saturday.

INDUSTRIAL PACE AT ITS SLOWEST SINCE JUNE, '36

Fifth Consecutive Weekly Decline, With More Than 12 Pct. Cut From Rate in Seven Weeks.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Industrial activity slipped into new low ground for this year this week, chalking up its fifth consecutive decline. Measured by the Associated Press seasonally adjusted index, the tempo dropped to the lowest since June, 1936. In seven weeks, more than 12 per cent has been cut from the rate of industrial operations.

The index fell to 92.6 per cent of the 1929-30 average from 94.4 a week ago and compared with 95.7 last year.

Steel mill activity and residential building both touched new lows for the year.

Four of the six components of the index have fallen behind last year: Steel operations were 30 per cent down, residential building 1½ per cent, freight carloadings 6 per cent and cotton manufacturing activity 5 per cent.

Cottoncloth production alone turned up during the week.

Automobile assemblies, despite the show in New York, fell back contra-seasonally. Trade quarters pointed out stocks on hand were ample for the time being. Something of a problem was reported to have developed in the used car market, where already heavy inventories conflict with a rising repossession of financed cars.

Freight carloadings declined sharply as the movement of industrial items receded. Electric Power was lower.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components based on the latest available statistics and with 1929-30 as 100, compared as follows:

THE WEEK ON NEW YORK STOCK MARKET—

NON-FERROUS METALS TREND IS STEADIER

Improved Business Reported in Scattered Lines — Lead, Copper, Zinc Prices.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—The tendency toward lower prices in nonferrous metals was still in evidence during the past week. Steadier trends were noted toward the close, however, with improved business reported in scattered lines.

Tin sold off 2 cents early in the period on a sharp break in the London market, and then recovered by ¾ cents to rule last at 48½ cents per pound. Tin plate production is off seasonally to approximately 75 per cent of capacity. There is improved inquiry for 1938 arrivals.

Copper was reduced ¼ cent in the domestic market to 11¾, when the custom smelters who led in previous revisions cut the price to improve lagging business. Intake has been steady, with stocks accumulating and indications domestic requirements have fallen as much as 25 per cent from September. Even the 11¾-cent quotation is meeting resistance, since outside offerings are held in various quarters at 11½ and finding buyers. In the export market, the price eased almost ½ cent, after a precipitous drop at London, but later regained almost half its earlier losses, as continental demand picked up.

Zinc was reduced ¼ cent to 5¾ cents, St. Louis, as producers found Mexican grades underselling domestic output. Unsteadiness at London was a contributing factor. Business at the lower range was only slightly better.

Lead remained unchanged at 5.50 cents, New York, with demand fairly active and November bookings encouraging to the trade.

Steel ingot production again declined, this time to 51 per cent of capacity. Scrap markets were exceedingly dull. Although lettings for steel construction were more numerous, the attitude of automobile manufacturers and the continued quiet in new railroad buying were still an enigma. Hopes were based almost entirely on sales of the new 1938 cars.

Antimony weakened by ½ cent to 17¾ cents for Chinese grade, with business extremely spotty.

Commodities at New 1937 Lows, Several Groups Under Year Ago

Decline in Three Months Has Erased 12 Pct. of Average Price of 35 Staples—Slight Rallies.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. — Commodity prices as a whole touched the lowest level since October, 1936, this week, with practically every major categories chalking up new lows for this year.

The decline of the past three months has erased 12 per cent of the average price of the 35 staples making up the Associated Press weighted index of wholesale spot quotations. The index fell this week to 8062 per cent of the 1936 average.

Although prices rallied fractionally at the close of the period—Saturday 80.86—recessions outweighed gains. The only individual group that didn't fall behind last year was livestock.

Metals were among the heaviest losers. Non-ferrous metals have fallen 16 per cent in the last six weeks. Steel scrap, copper, zinc, antimony and tin suffered price cuts this week.

Underlying the long period of liquidation, analysts say, has been the unwillingness of industrial consumers to make commitments. The tempo of industry has slid steadily lower in recent months and many inventories have been congested.

Other industrial staples, including rubber, turpentine and bituminous coal, weakened. Lumber and burlap eked out a small upturn.

Farm commodities slid lower in the face of probable increased harvests and prospective demand—tied up with the pace of industry — seemed smaller. Cotton, for instance, dipped as unofficial estimates of this year's harvest were raised to the highest level ever recorded and cotton men forecast a somewhat reduced oonsumption.

Grains also were marked down: Corn, wheat and oats more than offsetting a minor upturn in rye.

Livestock has shown a consistently downward trend since the middle of September. Packers point out that larger supplies of fatter animals have been reaching the various markets in recent weeks. Hogs, cattle and lamb joined in the reaction.

Although mixed, food prices were carried down by heavily weighted flour and lard. Eggs and cocoa were up a notch.

The index, with its components based on 1926 as 100, compared as follows:

	Oct. 30.	Prev. Wk.	Yr. Ago.

FOREIGN MARKETS AT A GLANCE

By the Associated Press.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 30.—Wheat futures, down early today as a result of October contract liquidation, responded to week-end covering and reports of frost in the Argentine. Prices recovered completely, closing steady and unchanged.

Bombay selling and hedging, reflecting an easier spot basis, encountered trade calling and investment buying of new crop positions in the cotton market. Values reacted in late trading under renewed hedging and selling by Egyptians. The close was quiet, 5 to 9 points lower. (London and Paris, closed.)

FACTORY AND WHOLESALE SALES AND COLLECTIONS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The Commerce Department reports September net sales by 562 reporting manufacturers increased 4 per cent over August and 11 per cent over September a year ago. Increases over September, 1936, ranged from 3 per cent for the leather products industry to 25.5 per cent for the machinery industry.

The manufacturers' collections on accounts receivable averaged 77 per cent in September, compared with 78.9 per cent in August and 78.8 per cent in September last year.

September sales by 1261 wholesalers rose 8 per cent over August and 7 per cent over September a year ago, with increases over September, 1936, ranging from 1.5 per cent for metals to 27 per cent for electrical goods. Wholesales' collections on accounts receivable are reported at 69.8 per cent in September, 71 per cent in August and 68.4 per cent in September last year.

RAILWAYS' NET OPERATING INCOME OFF FOR SEPTEMBER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The Association of American Railroads reported today Class 1 carriers had a net railway operating income of $59,304,948 in September, a decrease of 15.4 per cent, compared with the same month last year.

The decrease was due, the association said, to rising cost of operation, including increased cost of materials, supplies and fuel, as well as a higher wage rate. Operating costs during the month were said to be 5.7 per cent higher than last year, while gross revenues were only 1.7 per cent higher.

September's return was at the annual rate of 1.96 per cent on property investment. Last September the annual return was 2.32 per cent.

EFFECT OF WAR ON WHEAT EXPORTS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—War in the Orient has disrupted domestic trade and darkened prospects for imports of wheat from the United States. This report came today from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics after it assembled information from its representtaives in China and Japan.

Shanghai said the wheat and flour market there remained almost at a standstill, with mill activity declining. Several flour mills recently were forced to shut down because of hostilities in the vicinity.

Tokio reported foreign and domestic wheat prices had advanced recently, and United States Western white wheat was the cheapest foreign wheat available. Imports are uncertain, it was said, because of rigid Government control over foreign exchange. Japan reported improved domestic and foreign demand for flour with mills working at full capacity and stocks above average.

Current predictions tha[illegible] of corn will arrive in Chic[illegible] a total seldom equaled so[illegible] season, are about eclipsed [illegible] Europe's corn purchases fro[illegible] total already well up in mil[illegible] els. A reason given for the [illegible] trans-Atlantic demand relativ[illegible] Statse corn is that Argentina'[illegible] plus supply now amounts to ha[illegible] than half as much as at this time last year. Meanwhile, the weather has been about perfect for corn husking and marketing in this country.

Indications are that Argentina at present has only sufficient corn to permit clearances of 3,000,000 bushels a week until April 1, compared with exports of around 7,000,000 bushels weekly during the last few months. On the other hand, a large part of the unusually liberal arrivals of new domestic corn here and at other centers has passed into the possession of strong holders. Evidence is plentiful that corn reserve supplies among industries and other domestic users are nearly exhausted.

S. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Oct. 30.—Wheat futures closed ½c higher after a slightly irregular course. December finished at 97cand May at 96¾c.

Winnipeg started ⅝@1c higher and early was 1@1⅜c up. The close was 1¼@1⅜c higher.

Liverpool wheat was ⅛@⅜d lower at outset. The close was net unchanged.

Argentine wheat opened 1½@1¾c up and corn ⅜c higher. The close was 1⅜@1⅝c higher for wheat and ⅛@⅜c up for corn.

Local wheat receipts which were 34,000 bu, compared with 52,500 a week ago and 19,500 a year ago, included 39 cars local and 22 through. Corn receipts which were 174,000 bu, compared with 42,000 a week ago and 55,500 a year ago, included 87 cars local. Oats receipts which were 8000 bu, compared with 6000 a week ago and 14,500 a year ago, included 6 cars local and 2 through.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was steady. Supply was small. Trading basis was a little easier. Mills, elevators and order buyers were the purchasers. Corn was ½@2c lower. Demand was rather slow early, with mills showing the interest, while late in the session elevators came in the market and a fair clearance was made. Oats were unchanged. Supply was somewhat larger and with a fair demand a clearance was effected. Outside order buyers showed the interest.

LOCAL STOCK MARKET HAS FURTHER RECOVERY

Volume of Business Less Than Half of Preceding Week's Heavy Trade.

With the further steadying of the security market at New York and here, additional price recovery took place on the St. Louis Stock Exchange last week on a volume of business that did not aggregate half of that of the preceding week.

Wagner Electric and International Shoe were the leaders in volume of trade, the former showing the better rally, namely two points. Scullin Steel preference was best gainer, being up 3 points at peak for week. There were advances of fractions to a full point in the last.

When the lowering of margin rate on long stock and placing of heavy payment on short sales affected the New York board prices bullishly, local prices joined in the upswing.

DIVIDENDS DECLARED

By the Associated Press.

Directors of the Peoples Gas Light & Coke Co. have voted a dividend of $2 a share on common stock, first authorized since payment of $1 in July, 1933, to be paid Dec. 10 to stock of record Nov. 12. The dividend was authorized despite a reported net loss of $212,931 in the third quarter, compared with a net loss of $376,672 for the similar 1936 period. George A. Ranney, chairman, told the directors he expected the full year to show a profit greater than the $3.21 earned in 1936.

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 30.—The Hazel-Atlas Glass Co. reports profits of $672,885 for the third quarter and $2,405,548 for the past nine months, equivalent to $5.53 a share on outstanding stock. The directors have declared a dividend of $1.25 a share, payable Jan. 3 on stock of record Dec. 11.

WEEK'S SALES ON ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, Oct. 30.—Sales of stocks on the local board during the week amounted to 8464 shares, compared with 19,142 the previous week. Bond sales were $13,000, compared with $5000.

NEAR CLOSE CUTS ANY EARLY CURB GAINS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Increased selling near the close erased many gains made in early curb market trading today in an extension of the recent rally. Final prices were mixed.

A few leaders dipped sharply under previous closings as bids were withdrawn. Mining shares were generally steady and utilities and oils held to a narrow range.

Aluminum Co. of America finished at 97, off 1½; New Jersey Zinc, 67, off 1¾; Creole Petroleum, 25¾, off ¼, and American Gas and Electric, 25¾, off ¼.

Fractionally higher were American Cyanamid "B" at 26, Hecla Mining at 10½, Hudson Bay Mining at 22½, Molybdenum at 6⅞, Electric Bond and Share at 11½ and Atlantic Gas at 6.

Transactions totaled 128,000 shares, against 273,000 last Saturday.

COTTON DIPS UNDER 8 CENTS, RECOVERS

Irregular Fluctuations During Week — Closing Prices Below Previous Range.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Irregular fluctuations over a range of $1.50 a bale characterized trading in cotton this week. March contracts, which had eased from 8.25 to 7.96, recovered part of the losses in the later session, closing yesterday at 8.07, compared with 8.26 a week ago. Today cotton eased below 8 cents under liquidation and hedging, March selling off from 8.04 to 7.98 and closing at 8.00, with final prices 7 to 8 points net lower.

Prices moved easily in response to moderate orders early in the week but the range narrowed later. The holding movement in the South was still regarded as checking southern offerings on declines. There were 757,000 bales reported to have been pledged to the Government through October 22.

Trade support was small owing to quiet conditions in the textile and spot cotton markets. Except for active selling from Bombay and Liverpool early in the week, foreign orders were mostly on the buying side, although in smaller volume.

Ginnings of 11,068,319 bales prior to October 18 were about 2,500,000 more than to the same date last year and represented the largest ginnings to that date on record.

Opening losses of 4 to 6 points today reflected the influence of easier cables but the undertone held fairly steady early in sympathy with steadiness of the stock market, and on trade buying. Reports of an easier basis in the South and of a poor demand for spot cotton influenced sentiment.

Cotton goods sales for the week were estimated at around 60 per cent of the current rate of production. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the close of the week was estimated at 206,000 bales, against 165,000 last year and 232,000 two years ago.

The day's range follows, high, low, last: Dec., 8.10, 8.04, 8.04@05; Jan. 8.02, 8.01, 8.01; March 8.04, 7.98, 8.00@01; May 8.04, 7.98, 8.00; July 8.03, 7.98, 7.99; Oct. 8.13, 8.10, 8.10@11. Spot quiet; middling 8.24.

JAPANESE COTTON IMPORTS FALL OFF

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. — American Consul Krentz at Osaka reports that Japanese mill consumption of cotton this season, which started with September, is expected to be substantially less than last year.

Japanese trade sources forecast a decline in domestic consumption of cotton yarn and piece goods while foreign orders for future delivery have dropped. A high level of cotton mill activity in September was attributed to anticipation of restrictive government regulations.

The Japanese Government is said to be considering measures to limit raw cotton imports and at the same time maintain exports of piece goods at high levels.

Japanese September imports of 128,000 bales of foreign cotton were far below the 254,000 bales imported in September last season. Purchases of 2000 bales of American cotton last month compared with 27,000 in September, 1936.

NEW YORK.

THE earth, like all things on it, bears the ticket of mortality and, in time, is expected to have a grand finale. The Bible speaks of the end of the world. The tenets of practically all religions refer to a doomsday. The mythology of the ancients carries the story of the twilight of the gods when the sun will be dimmed, the earth will sink into the ocean, the stars will fall and time will be no more. Down through the ages, sundry prophets have made dire predictions of a universal catastrophy that did not come to pass.

With the modern day and the development of such sciences as astronomy and geology, seers have been replaced by scientists who practically all agree that the earth will not become a lifeless world until some 36,000,000 years from the present time. This suspended sentence, however, is based on the forces of nature and does not take into consideration the carnage and havoc such as man is releasing through modern warfare in Spain and the Orient.

Provided that the human race survives until the distant day now chalked up, there should be a sight so replete with sheer terror and tragedy that the imaginative writings of H. G. Wells and the weird paintings of futuristic artists will fall into the kindergarten category. There will be the chance, of course, that by this time the human race will have found a way to evacuate the earth and take refuge on Venus or some other planet.

But how is this green old earth to be transformed into a blackened ball? Earlier physicists and astronomers thought that the great danger lay in a gradual cooling of the sun which eventually would result in life on the earth being frozen out of existence. The discovery of the presence of radio active substances in the sun, giving out heat by an automatic and almost infinitesimal disintegration, is regarded by many scientists as having disproved this theory, or as having lengthened the life of the sun in this respect. There are, however, other possibilities: a star or a comet could collide with the sun or with the earth and the moon could disintegrate. These possibilities or the events leading up to them are being shown at the Hayden Planetarium in this city.

This planetarium, like all others, reproduces the sky and its constellations and planets, with the aid of an electrical machine, on the interior of a domed roof. The machine looks somewhat like a long-legged spider with a knobby body and a head studded with eyes. By means of this equipment, the movements of planets and stars are so accelerated that in a few minutes the audience can see what otherwise might take days or centuries to transpire. The mechanism of the solar system may, in reproduction, be speeded up from 125,000 to millions of times and in two minutes the sun can be made to rise and set. The audience may be taken back to the sky as it was in the days of Genghis Khan or forward to the sky as it will appear to the spectators' great grandchildren's great grandchildren. The machine which "controls the universe," is operated by a small electric switchboard. The operator of this machine may, if he chooses, become a modern Joshua and cause the sun to stand still. Professor William B. Barton Jr., associate curator of the Hayden Planetarium and director of these awe inspiring catastrophes in miniature, ranks the end of the earth through the bursting of the moon as the most impressive spectacle.

With Barton lecturing in the darkened auditorium, the moon is shown exerting its tendency to draw away from the earth. Millions of years ago it was much closer and the earth had a nine-hour day. Millions of years hence a day will be 30 times as long as it is now because of the increasing distance between earth and moon. As the spectators see the moon in the hemisphere above them recede from the earth, they notice the moon decreasing its speed of rotation and thereby tending to fall toward the earth. Almost imperceptibly it looms larger through the moments rep-

the earth it is split asunder as represented by turning on the lights in the darkened auditorium. This explosion is caused by the pull of gravity, Barton explains. For instance, if the moon, 2000 miles in diameter, were only 2000 miles from the surface of the earth, instead of nearly 250,000, then the face of the moon nearest the earth would have about four times the pull of gravity that the far side would have. Such a difference in the stress and strain would be the disrupting force. There is difference of opinion as to just how the moon would break up, most authorities saying that it would first snap into two pieces which would continue this dividing process over a period of centuries. Others say it would break into millions of pieces at once. The millions of pieces, endowed with the same motion that they had when they were parts of the moon, would continue circling the earth, forming a beautiful ring such as there is about Saturn.

The moon in coming close to the earth, according to Barton, would upset the tides in the oceans, causing tidal waves and volcanic action that would destroy all life although they would not cause the earth to disintegrate. Cities would totter and fall, buried under volcanic ashes and lava or engulfed by the seething oceans displaced from their beds.

Foremost, however, is the danger of a star or some

ROME.

AN HUMBLE sculptor who achieved a dubious renown nine years ago for his unintentional part in the most spectacular international art fraud of modern times, died here in straitened circumstances a few days ago. Now, by the irony of fate, it seems likely that in the years to come an authentic piece of his work will be valued just because it came from his gifted hand. For Alceo Dossena, the tall, stoop-shouldered, mild-mannered native of Cremona, had not only the ability to improvise in the manner of long dead Gothic, Byzantine, Romanesque, and Renaissance masters; he also had the ability to animate himself with the spirit of old masters and even to think in their manner, according to many who knew him. One day he was Rossellino, another day he was Donatello, and on still another he imbued himself with the spirit of some unnamed Milanese sculptor of the fifteenth century. So it is only natural that despite the exposure of the hoax in 1928, the works of this premier producer of counterfeit antiques should go on selling at lower prices, but prices that still were not in the lagniappe class.

Owl-eyed critics, avid collectors and sedate curators have agreed that this man, born of poor parents in 1878, had the spark of genius in him. It was fanned by the training that he received as a youth while apprenticed to an artisan engaged in restoring marble details of the churches and public buildings in his native city and neighboring towns. He was fairly steeped in the aura of old masters that emanated from such buildings as the Cremona Cathedral, of Lombard Romanesque style, which was begun in 1107, consecrated in 1190, and completed in 1491; the Palazzo de Gonfalonieri of the Thirteenth Century; the great Torrazzo, highest tower in Italy; and the Monte di Pieta, with its famous Fifteenth Century frieze of terra cotta bas reliefs. The work required the most careful and accurate duplication and expansion of ancient elements. In order to carry it out successfully, it was necessary to simulate perfectly the tone of ancient work. Dossena became invaluable to the artisan. After a few years the artisan recognized that he had a man whose art in restoring early statuary in marble, wood, bronze and terra cotta was not far from miraculous. He apparently had been infused with so much of the spirit of his predecessors that he could turn out work that rivaled theirs. Eventually he struck up a small trade of his own through his reputation for being able to do a neat little piece a la Byzantine or a small relief in the manner of Donatello. Not a good business man, Dossena received only pittances from the customers.

Then came the World War, and Dossena, having so much of that quick nervousness popularly associated with artistic temperament that he could hardly do the manual of arms, nevertheless had to go to fight for his King.

Home from the war at last, in ill health and poverty stricken, Dossena was unable to find work. Things were in a turmoil and the people were thinking about the necessities of life. Artists were forgotten. Dossena sadly decided there was nothing he could do in Rome except experiment with creations of his own. It was a pleasant pastime for him and then there was always the hope that someone might see some of his work and give him an order. Fortunately for Dossena, two art dealers from another city came to his dusty attic studio overlooking the gloomy Tiber and reached an agreement with him to fill orders for them. He would not make much, they told him, but it was something to keep the wolf from the door.

IN A few months the art world began to receive here and there a hitherto unknown masterpiece dating back to ancient times. A ready market was found in the United States for pieces with such exquisite qualities. Purchasers included the Metropolitan Museum of New York, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, the Cleveland Museum and the Frick collection. Dossena was busy. He saw nothing wrong. He believed his works were to be sold as copies only. In the 10 years before the hoax broke on the art world in the winter of 1928, Dossena made about $35,000. The dealers who paid him this money made a sum estimated as high as $2,000,000.

They had plausible explanations for every purchaser. Skeptics were given the argument that it would be discreet not to go to the actual chapel in which the piece was found since that would be quite likely to arouse ecclesiastical or political authorities. Another piece, it was said in whispers, was smuggled by a laborer from the excavations in historic ruins. If there was doubt, take the piece to any art connoisseur.

They even went so far as to conceive rare types of sculpture that would be tempting tidbits for overzealous collectors. One example of this was the offering of sculpture as the work of Simone Martini, known only as a painter of the early Sienese school. Who was there that could flatly assert that Martini did not try his hand at a few pieces of sculpture? Centuries had passed since the days of Martini. Maybe he had done a few carvings. With the commercial value of art works varying directly with rarity, such pieces, if genuine, would command a high price. A museum paid $18,000 for this fake.

A genuine Seventeenth Century Italian Madonna and Child wood sculpture of nominal value was metamorphosed with bits of old wood into the style of Giovanni Pisano—added prestige for any collection. It was decorated with real polychrome removed by soaking from old statuary and picture frames. This was supplemented with modern gold leaf three layers deep and tooled to give it appearance of great antiquity.

These were skillful frauds, but because Dossena had to depend on ancient Roman copies and photographs, his supposed archaic Greek sculptures had a few weaknesses. Those who knew Dossena said later that these flaws would not have appeared had he been able to work from Greek originals. The first of these spurious Greek pieces to enter the United States, it is understood, was the tomb that the Boston Museum took for a Fifteenth Century work of Mino da Fiesole. It turned out to be a composite work, the sarcophagus being modeled from the Tornabuoni tomb in the Church of Santa Maria Sopra Minerva in Rome, and the recumbent figure copied from a tomb by Rossellino in the church of Santa Maria Novella in Florence. The museum is reported to have paid $100,000 for the piece.

Even the late John Marshall, one of the world's most eminent archaeologists, whose authority in his field was never questioned, was duped to the extent of advising the Metropolitan Museum of New York to buy what he felt confident was a genuine piece of archaic Greek art. The museum paid several thousand dollars for the piece, a Greek maiden of the type of art common in 500 B. C.

MARSHALL had obtained it through a Venetian art dealer who said it had been unearthed a few months before in a tomb on the site of an ancient Greek colony in Etruria. As no marble statue of that period ever had been found in Etruscan tombs, the statement aroused Marshall's curiosity. With no marble quarries in that section of Italy, the finding of such a statue would signify that Etruscans had been importing Greek art at a much earlier period than had been supposed. Marshall pressed the dealer; what else was found? Some terra cotta vases, but they were broken. Marshall asked to see the fragments so that he could decide definitely from them the exact period when the Etruscans began to import Greek art. The dealer promised to send the fragments and Marshall went on his way, satisfied that he had made a good purchase and also had stumbled on a trail.

Marshall never received the fragments. This, of course, made him suspicious. On a visit to the United States (he spent most of his time in Rome) he went to the Metropolitan and made another study of the statue. He convinced himself that it was an excellent imitation treated to give it the appearance of great antiquity. Museum officials, on being advised, put the piece in the basement and made no announcement of its acquisition.

Soon after this, in the spring of 1926, a Florentine art dealer called on Marshall in Rome and sought to interest him in a fragment of a Greek relief which he asserted had been found in some excavations. Marshall kept the statue a few days to study it. Noticing a similarity between it and the statue with which he had been deceived, he studied it at length and found that it was a fraud. Thereupon he had it photographed, kept the picture for future reference and told the dealer he did not care to buy. Marshall also had found, through the similarity of the workmanship in these two pieces, that they were more than likely made by the same man.

This set him to wondering who the man might be and on just how large a scale he was operating. While he was thinking over the problem, a letter came from the Metropolitan Museum informing him that it had been offered a fine marble tomb of Renaissance workmanship by Mino da Fiesole. The price was $100,000. Marshall wrote back for an enlarged photograph of the rare piece. As soon as he laid eyes on the picture he perceived that the tomb had come from the same hand as the two fakes. Investigation revealed that the dealer who had offered the tomb was of excellent reputation and that he had believed it genuine. As several dealers had handled it, the origin could not be traced. The Boston Museum, however, accepted the tomb, paying $100,000 for what it took to be a rare find.

Then the Florentine dealer's statue that had been rejected by Marshall was purchased by the Cleveland Museum for $120,000. Officials did not know Marshall had turned thumbs down on it. They did buy it, though, with the indorsements of some of the leading archaeologists of America and Europe. Marshall heard of this and decided that he must find who the talented forger was. He enlisted the aid of Captain Piero Tozzi, painter, specialist in tracing art forgeries, and former member of the Italian legation at Washington.

Now Tozzi had just returned from the United States where he had visited several museums and noted pieces that he was sure were spurious. He had remained silent, however, since his opinion had not been asked. As soon as Marshall showed him his photographs he saw that the pieces represented there and the ones he had seen in the museums were obviously by the same man. Tozzi lost no time in starting his investigation. He soon became convinced that many of the dealers who had sold the fraudulent pieces had themselves been deceived while others were party to the fraud. Before long he was assured that most of the pieces had been in the hands of a certain Florentine dealer or one in Rome. Another clew was afforded by the discovery that most of the statues had been chiseled out of the same kind of marble, Pantelic, which is imported into Italy from Greece. The captain then made the rounds of the marble importers and learned where the big shipments had gone.

A PROCESS of elimination led to Dossena. When the sculptor was confronted by Tozzi with evidence in hand, he frankly admitted that he was the author of the pieces in question.

"But he protested," Tozzi said, "that he had not been guilty of any attempt to deceive. He said he had been commissioned by certain art dealers in Italy to make copies for them of certain masterpieces or in the style of Renaissance masters. He had done so, he said, taking for granted that the pieces if sold to museums would be sold as copies and not as originals."

Investigation also is said to have revealed that Dossena's name was removed from practically all of his pieces. It did not reveal, however, the technique by which Dossena gave his works the effects of age. Even geologists had declared that the apparent erosion was the result of natural processes working through the centuries.

Popular sympathy was on the side of Dossena, especially when it was found that he was living in modest circumstances. One art critic summed it up with the remark: "It was as one of the numberless unintellectual handicraft artists of the Middle Ages that Dossena was exploited by cunning dealers who removed his name." And on four years later, a group of "genuine Do senas" brought $9125, with a top of $675 for one figure, in a New York sale. That is one of the reasons why many art connoisseurs believe that Dossena's profound appreciation of the art of past centuries will live in the history of art long after the heat of debate over the hoax has been forgotten.

WHEN Jessie Pepper and Elvin Allen were children and played at children's games, Elvin nearly always won because, though they were the same age, she was bigger and stronger than Jessie. When they went to high school and played games there, Elvin won and Jessie lost. When, after they had graduated, Elvin heard that Jessie had been talking about her, she slapped Jessie and pushed her around, and Jessie had to take it because she was smaller and weaker than Elvin. When, another day, Elvin came charging at her, heedless of the warning to keep away, Jessie shot and killed her. Now Jessie is in jail, but she has a feeling of freedom which she did not have while Elvin lived. Now it is the law that is bigger and stronger than she, but she has hopes that when she has her day in court, and tells how Elvin always got the best of her, the law will not be hard on her.

While Jessie and Elvin were children they continued to play together, although Elvin won at all the games, because there were not many children for Jessie to play with along Coushatta Bayou, where the Peppers and Allens were near neighbors and other neighbors were few. They were schoolmates in the grades and then in high school at East Point, eight miles away, traveling back and forth together, seeming to be friends, but not really friends because Elvin knew her strength and Jessie knew her weakness. It was something between them.

They were graduated from high school last June, each 17 years old, and returned to the bayou life that was empty after the fullness that school had supplied. The Peppers and Allens lived close together above the bayou bank on the Haynes plantation, large families in small houses. Jess Pepper and Hart Allen worked hard to support their families. They were friends, as were their wives. The younger children of the two families played together, but between Jessie and Elvin there was a constraint which neither of them explained or even acknowledged. It was something that lay too deep for their powers of analysis. At Crichton, nearby, and at Coushatta, the seat of Red River Parish, they sought the social life which did not exist on Coushatta Bayou, but each went her own way. Sometimes they went to Mount Zion Baptist Church at Hall Summit, but they did not go together.

One reason that Elvin went to Hall Summit was that she saw Percy Methvin there. Percy, who had been a student at East Point High School when the two girls were students, was beginning to take notice of Elvin. If Jessie would have liked for him to take notice of her, it was just another instance of Elvin getting the best of her.

Then, late in the summer, Elvin went on a visit to her Uncle Ben Allen at Vivian. While she was away, there was gossip about her, for which the Allens blamed Jessie. She was saying, they were told, that Elvin had a good reason for going away, hinting broadly at the kind of a reason it was. It came to the ears of Hart Allen that there was talk about his girl and he asked Percy Methvin about it. Percy said yes, Jessie Pepper had told him that Elvin had to go away.

When Elvin came back she was told about the talk. So Jessie Pepper had been telling lies on her. Well, just wait till she got hold of Jessie Pepper.

It did not suit her to seek Jessie at her home, but she talked it about that she was going to get even with Jessie for telling lies about her. Jessie heard about it and, remembering how Elvin had always pushed her around, she was afraid. She spoke to Elvin's father about it.

"I understand," she said, "that Elvin says I've been talking about her and threatening to get even with me. It's not true. I haven't been talking about her. Tell her to bring her mother and come over to my house and we'll fix it up."

They did not come, but a few days later Elvin and her mother found Jessie at Otis Moore's store, out on the highway. On their arrival she went inside. Elvin went to the door and said: "Jessie, I want to see you outside."

Jessie said: "If you want to see me you can see me in here. I'm not coming outside."

"I want to know what about the lies you've been telling on me."

"I haven't told any."

"Yes you have."

"I haven't told anything. My mother told me what they were saying about you and I told her to hush it up, for I didn't believe it."

"What did you tell Percy Methvin? If you don't tell me I'm going to slap you."

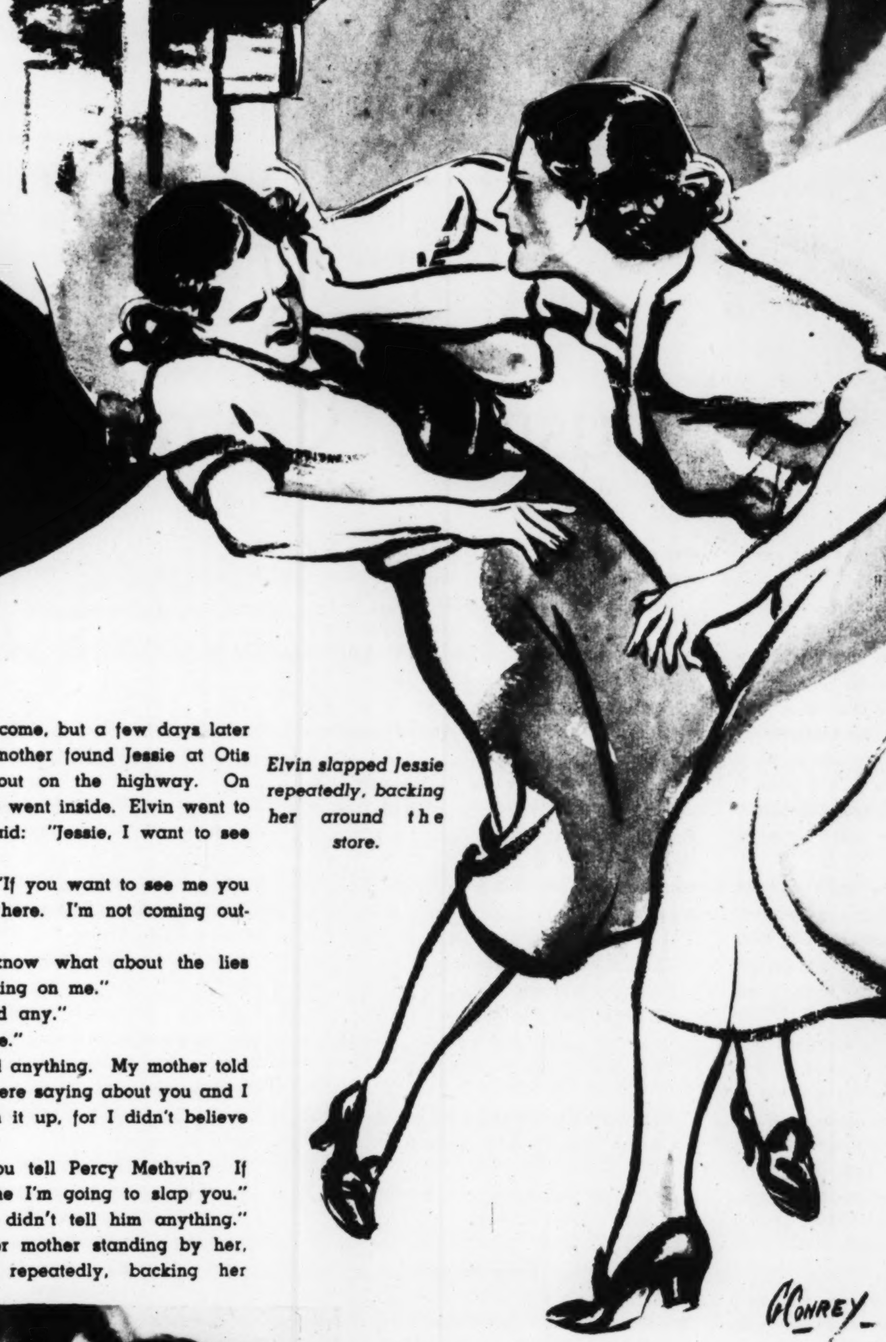
"I tell you I didn't tell him anything."

Elvin, with her mother standing by her, slapped Jessie repeatedly, backing her around the store. Jessie did not strike back.

Jessie's father, out in front in a truck, heard the commotion and went to the door. "Come on outside," he said to his daughter, "this is no place to settle anything."

Jessie climbed into the truck and they went home, with Mrs. Allen and Elvin following.

Three days later, on Monday morning, Mrs. Allen went down the bayou to get her cow and was driving it home under the bayou bank when Mrs. Pepper came from her house above the bank and confronted her. "I want to know," she said, "why you and Elvin jumped on my girl over at Moore's place."



Elvin slapped Jessie repeatedly, backing her around the store.

Jessie Pepper whispering to her father at her preliminary hearing.

"My God, Minnie," said Mrs. Allen, "you nearly scared me to death comin' on me like that. I never touched Jessie."

"Yes you did, and you've got to quit abusin' my child."

In her right hand, held behind her, Mrs. Pepper clutched her husband's revolver. As she raised it Mrs. Allen picked up a piece of metal lying where a repair man had left it and the two women struck each other.

Mrs. Allen dropped the metal and grappled with Mrs. Pepper, trying to take the weapon from her. As they struggled Jessie came running from the Pepper home, carrying Mrs. Pepper's 5-months-old baby in her arms. "See there, Mama," she cried, "I told you not to bring the gun. You know you've been sick. Get your hand on the trigger or she'll shoot you."

Dropping the infant to the ground she threw herself against the two women and got hold of the barrel of the weapon. Mrs. Allen by that time had hold of the butt. She pulled the trigger. The bullet missed the girl, but the powder burned her left hand. Mrs. Pepper caught hold of Mrs. Allen's trigger finger and bent it back so that she could not shoot again and Jessie twisted the revolver from her hand and stepped back.

Holding the weapon awkwardly in both hands she pointed it at Elvin who had heard the outcry and had come running from her house and charging down the bayou bank toward Jessie.

"Stay back or I'll shoot you," Jessie cried.

"You ain't got the nerve," said Elvin, and kept coming.

Jessie fired, but missed. Elvin rushed upon her and she fired two more shots, hitting her in the breast and abdomen and she fell dying to the ground.

Mrs. Allen running for help, found Rock Baldwin driving his tractor. Because of the noise that it made he had not heard the outcry below the bayou bank. He stopped the tractor as he saw Mrs. Allen running. "What's the matter?" he called.

"Jessie Pepper has killed Elvin," she said.

BALDWIN ran to the bayou and lifted Elvin up and asked her to speak to him, but she was beyond speaking.

Jessie carried the revolver home and climbed into Shelly McDowell's truck. "Take me to the Sheriff," she said, "so's I can give myself up." Then she noticed her mother bleeding from the blow she had received on her head and said: "Come along with me, Mama, and I'll take you to the doctor."

McDowell took them to the office of Dr. W. B. Hunter in Coushatta and then Jessie went to the office of Sheriff Floyd Jones, but he had gone to the scene of the shooting, so McDowell took her back to Coushatta Bayou. She found the Sheriff there and said: "Mr. Floyd, I guess you want me."

"Yes, Jessie," he said, "I guess I'll have to take you along."

At the inquest Jessie told her story. "Elvin was coming at me," she said, "with a stick in her hand. I told her to stay back, but she kept a-coming. I shot at her. She kept a-coming and caught me by the hair. Then I shot the last two times, which took effect. The reason I shot was that Mrs. Allen and Elvin were both coming on me at the same time and Elvin was armed with a stick."

Mrs. Pepper and Mrs. Allen testified, each throwing the burden of blame on the other.

Mrs. Baldwin said she heard the trouble and sent her little girl to call Elvin. "Tell Elvin," she instructed the child, "that her mother's calling her down by the bayou, I don't know what for." Then as Elvin came running Mrs. Baldwin went out as far as her well and called to Elvin: "Hurry up, they're fighting your mother." As Elvin went down over the bank Mrs. Baldwin heard Jessie say three times: "Elvin, don't you come any closer." Then the shots. She didn't see anything in Elvin's hand.

Charles Baldwin, 13 years old, who saw it all, heard Jessie say: "Don't you come down here. Stop or I'll shoot you." She said that three times, but Elvin kept on going down. Then Jessie started shooting.

JESSIE was held and a warrant was also issued for her mother, charging her with assault with intent to kill and aiding in the killing. Partly because of the baby she was admitted to bond of $1000, which was signed by two Coushatta merchants, J. E. Brown and J. E. Holley.

There was a preliminary hearing at which the testimony was substantially the same as at the inquest. Jessie, attractively clad in a pink silk dress, told her story in a modulated voice, her bright eyes shining, linking the killing up with the "brush" with Elvin at Moore's place, when Elvin slapped her and pushed her around, claiming that the shooting on the bayou was self-defense.

It was for District Judge James W. Jones Jr. to say whether Jessie should be released on bond. He pondered his duty as laid down for him by the law of Louisiana. Now if Jessie had killed Elvin when the bigger girl was slapping her around at Moore's place a few days before, that might have been called self-defense, but Jessie had had time to cool off between Friday and Monday. In such circumstances the law presumed a measure of deliberation in what occurred on Monday. And it could not be overlooked that the revolver with which Elvin was killed was a Pepper weapon and was brought upon the scene by Jessie's mother. It would be for a jury to decide whether the situation was created in pursuance of a plan of revenge or whether Jessie, after going to the help of her mother, found herself in need of defending herself. It might be justifiable homicide in self-defense or manslaughter or plain murder, depending upon how a jury would look at it. Bail was refused.

After a grand jury has acted, Jessie may be found guilty, as Henry W. Bethard Jr., appointed special prosecutor, explains the law, by the vote of nine jurors, with 20 years in prison as the maximum punishment, or murder, in which case all 12 jurors must agree, "with capital punishment," death or life imprisonment at the option of the Judge, or murder "without capital punishment," carrying a sentence of life imprisonment.

In her cell, made comfortable by the kindness of Sheriff Jones, who treats the girl as he would want his daughter to be treated if she fell into misfortune, Jessie waits with patience and confidence, reading the many letters of sympathy that she has received, strong in the belief that when a jury hears how she was always put upon by Elvin she will be set free.

The PRESIDENT on the PAN in a New Musical Comedy

NEW YORK.

FROM four of the most fertile minds in the theater has come a satire on national affairs so devastating that its presentation in many countries would have resulted in the exile of its authors to some pestilence ridden penal isle, providing they were not shot "while trying to escape." This being the United States the four flip gentlemen can look forward to nothing worse than a swollen pocketbook and a headache when income tax day next comes around.

The satire is "I'd Rather Be Right," now delighting capacity audiences in this irreverent metropolis. The authors are George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart—collaborators on several epic hits—and Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, ace musical comedy writers of the past decade. Hart and Kaufman did the book, Hart fashioned the stinging lyrics and Rodgers drew new melodies from his inexhaustible store.

From such a collaboration something unusual was expected, but despite the word that leaked out some weeks ago no one thought the authors would go so far as to name their President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Some people felt things had come to a pretty pass when "Of Thee I Sing" (Hart and Kaufman) used the White House for a locale. To these circumspect souls "I'd Rather Be Right" is a sure case of apoplexy.

For President Roosevelt and his Cabinet and his family have been handled with sly and biting humor which sometimes is so acid that one suddenly remembers the huge taxes that Hart and Kaufman have been paying these past years and the thought arises did the boys have a little ax of their own to grind? Whether they did or not they succeeded in writing the frankest critique of the New Deal—twisted to fit comic situations—yet unfurled.

The idea behind the play, or musical comedy, is simple yet ingenious. Hart conjured it up during one of the fits of melancholy to which he is prone. He brought the problems besetting the national regime today down to its effect on a boy and a girl. The boy wants to marry the girl, but can't because he is unable to get a raise. His boss in unable to give the raise because he has so many taxes to pay.

The boy and the girl are walking through Central Park en route to a concert and discussing their perplexing dilemma when they meet President Roosevelt (hilariously played by George M. Cohan). The boss also appears on the scene. In short the President agrees to try to balance the budget so he can lower taxes thus permitting the manufacturer to give the boy a raise and clear the path for the nuptials.

That was the idea Hart talked over with Kaufman. They decided to write it in Hollywood, but when Kaufman arrived in the film capital to get to work he found Hart determined to give the whole thing up. Kaufman finally persuaded his collaborator to reconsider, which will turn out to be a lucrative bit of work on his part if present indications hold true. Kaufman, incidentally, was the hero of Mary Astor's purple diary.

A few months of intensive labor and the rough script was ready. Rodgers and Hart—authors of "Babes in Arms," "On Your Toes," "A Connecticut Yankee"—had started work at that point and began forming the lyrics and songs.

The result was unveiled in staid old Boston and the censor's verdict eagerly was awaited. He was too busy guffawing to take any action. Political bigwigs in the audience said they saw no inept slurs. It was a healthy sign, they indicated, when citizens could get a few wholesome laughs from the playwrights' exaggerations of their political leaders.

THE budget's the thing in the play. When Joy Hodges, who plays the girl and Austin Marshall, who plays the boy disclose their problem to the Chief Executive in the park, he passes it on at one time or another during the mad two hours to members of the Supreme Court, to the White House butler—Landon by name—to Sistie and Buzzie and his mother Mrs. Sara Roosevelt. The only Rooseveltian figure conspicuously missing is that of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President.

But Franklin D. remembers her. At one point he sings:

"I'm very fond of Eleanor
But I never read her column. . . ."

Cohan manages to look a little like the President by continually flashing his teeth in a smile. Other characters also are recognizable portraits particularly Paul Parks as Postmaster-General Farley; Bijou Fernandez as Secretary of Labor Perkins (a tricorne hat does the trick there); and Marion Greene as Secretary of State Hull.

Although there is no marked resemblance Taylor Holmes is delightful as Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. Other important roles are played by John Cherry as Chief Justice Hughes; Marie Louise Dana as the President's mother and Joseph Allen as Landon, the butler.

The cabinet meeting on the budget is a belly-laugh sequence. Morgenthau suggests:

"Why not have an official Government pickpocket just to go around taking people's money?"

Secretary Perkins sternly vetoes this plan. She recommends taxation of postoffices. As she warms to the discussion the President breaks in:

"Now, Frances," he calms her, "relax."

Finally the President himself jubilantly voices a suggestion. He urges that all women give up cosmetics, pouring the money they normally would spend into the treasury. A revolt of the females cancels this plan.

The President sighs that there seems to be nothing left but to ask for a third term so that he can gain more time in which to tinker with the budget. He sings a lyric which gets the biggest laugh of the night:

"And if I'm not re-elected,
I'll never feat for hunger,
I'll never fear for thirst,
I've got one son with du Pont,
And another one with Hearst."

Secretary Morgenthau also gathers a major laugh with his ditty beginning:

"I have achieved, you must admit
The biggest—deficit. . . ."

The President steals the stage again with a wry reference to John L. Lewis following which he hums a few bars from "Frankie and Johnny." Then he goes to sit down on a rock and finds it is covered with a copy of the New York Herald Tribune which contains the column of Walter Lippmann, one of his severest critics.

"Walter Lippmann," he exclaims, "that's fine."

And he sits right down on Lippmann. Mrs. Roosevelt, observing with motherly solicitude, that things aren't going well for Franklin summons Landon and tells him to "show Frankie how to balance the budget."

This is the moment the favorite son of Kansas has been waiting for.

"I don't photograph well," he snaps. "I haven't got that smile. Frankly, I know I was lousy on the radio. But, Mr. Roosevelt, I did balance my budget. And, as we say

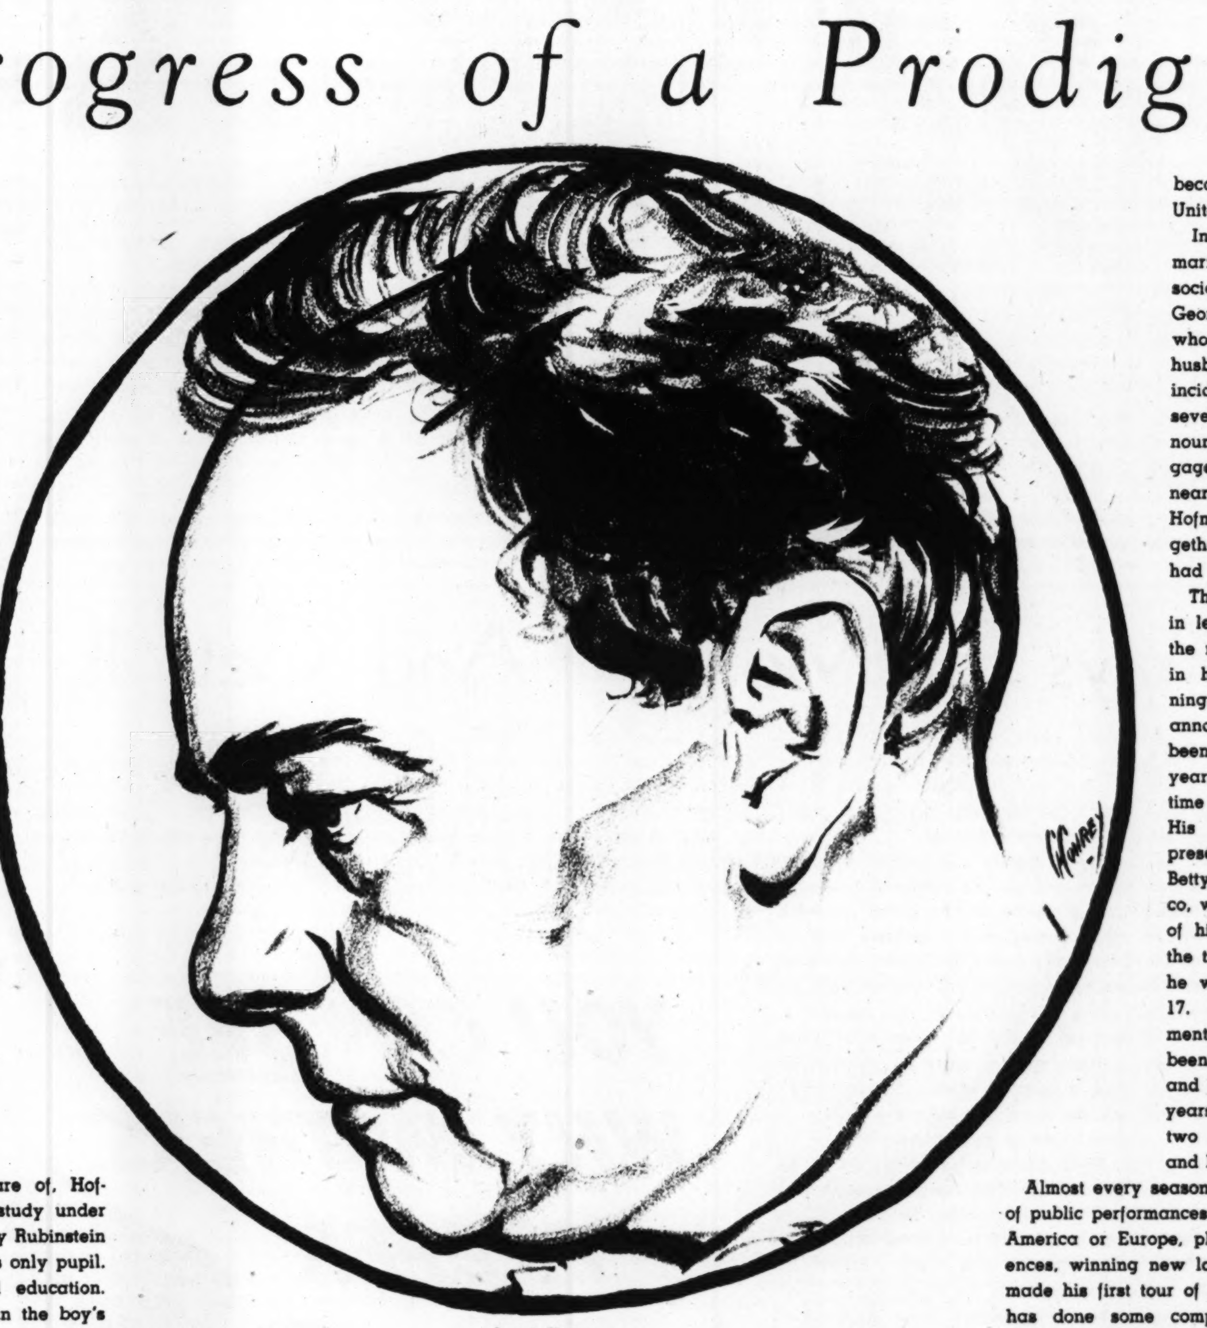
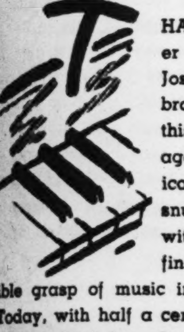
Progress of a Prodigy



Josef Hofmann.



THAT master piano player and able gadgeteer, Josef Hofmann, is celebrating a golden jubilee this fall. Fifty years ago he made his American debut, a little snub-nosed Polish boy with magic in his stubby fingers and an incredible grasp of music in his immature mind. Today, with half a century of solid achievement behind him, he is appearing before American audiences on his jubilee tour in the splendid fullness of his musical power, demonstrating that genius may be durable, that an infant prodigy need not be a morning glory.

Hofmann has been fortunate, both in his natural endowments and in the circumstances which have affected them. His musical gift, early recognized, was allowed to develop without forcing but with the aid of superlative training; at a time when this gift might have been nipped in the bud by too severe demands upon it, rescue came like an act of providence. The pianist has been blessed with good health. He has had love, domestic happiness, the joy of children, acclaim and prosperity. There is a balance in his mind which has saved him from the devastating eccentricity that so often causes men of high artistic ability to get badly mauled in contact with everyday life. Hofmann has strong interests outside his professional work, and, without diminishing his stature as a musician, they keep him from being lopsided as a man.

He dresses like a lawyer, hikes like a boy scout, handles machinery like a Scotch marine engineer, and deals rummy like one of the boys in the back room, for all that he plays like an angel.

Both heredity and environment may claim credit for Hofmann. His father was a composer and conductor, his mother an operatic soprano. In their musical household in Cracow, Poland, he was playing the piano before he was 4 years old, first with an aunt as teacher, then under the instruction of his father. The child had absolute pitch—that is, he could identify any note on hearing it played. When he was 5 he began to play occasionally in public. When he was 7, he attracted the admiring attention of Anton Rubinstein, the famous pianist. After a successful tour of Europe, young Josef, at the age of 11, made his bow to America with an appearance at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York on November 29, 1887. He played the Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 1, and was hailed as a marvel.

Within three months the "boy wonder" played 42 concerts in this country. He was engaged to play 40 more—and no one knows what that heavy schedule might have done to the youngster's health and talent. But at this point an anonymous patron offered $50,000 to finance Josef's further study under his father's guidance and to render further earning needless until he passed childhood. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children enabled the Hofmann family to accept the offer by causing the contract for the additional appearances to be canceled. The patron was the wealthy Alfred Corning Clark of New York; Hofmann did not learn who his benefactor was until after Clark's death.

With finances thus taken care of, Hofmann returned to Poland and study under his father and others. Eventually Rubinstein himself took him as a pupil—his only pupil. There were tutors for general education. Music was not the only thing in the boy's life, by any means. He swam, skated, boated and, whenever he had a chance, tinkered. Things mechanical fascinated him—a true bent, time showed. Before he was out of boyhood he was inventing things.

When he was 18 Hofmann returned to the concert platform, to be recognized at once as one of the great artists of the piano. Two years later he made another American tour, and presently he established a home in this country, took out naturalization papers and became a citizen of the United States.

In 1905 the musician married the wealthy and socially prominent Mrs. George Peabody Eustis, who had divorced her first husband. The marriage, incidentally, preceded by several weeks the announcement of the engagement. His wife was nearly 10 years older than Hofmann. They lived together for 20 years and had a daughter, Josefa.

The public was tardier in learning of the end of the marriage than it was in hearing of its beginning. In 1928 Hofmann announced that he had been divorced for four years and in the meantime had married again. His second wife—and present one—was Miss Betty Short of San Francisco, who had been a pupil of his in New York. At the time of their marriage he was 48 and she was 17. When the announcement was made, they had been married four years and had a son, Anton, 3 years old. They now have two other sons, Edward and Peter.

Almost every season since his resumption of public performances Hofmann has toured America or Europe, playing to large audiences, winning new laurels. Last year he made his first tour of South America. He has done some composing, notably four piano concertos. He has taught piano, and for several years has been director of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

During all these years the musician has had an absorbing avocation: Applied science—doing things in mechanics, chemistry and electricity, fixing things, inventing things, working with lathes and hammers and retorts. Calling him a gadgeteer really doesn't do justice to his skill in this field, for he has taken out more than 60 patents on his inventions, and some of them, including pneumatic springs and hydraulic snubbers for automobiles, have made a good deal of money for him. He has work shops at his homes in Merion, Pennsylvania; Aiken, South Carolina; Camden, Maine, and Mount Pelerin, Switzerland.

As a boy, when his legs were too short to reach piano pedals comfortably, he devised extensions for the pedals. He invented a collapsible piano bench whose legs can be adjusted to any unevenness of a platform floor. He has invented folding roller skates and improvements for oil burning furnaces. He built an automobile in 1899, and later, at Aiken, constructed a 50-horsepower car of his own design. He can repair a piano or fix a broken water pipe. But a piano tuner goes with him on tour.

ONE of his philanthropic interests is the Musicians' Emergency Fund. When his third son was born, the announcement of the event to friends suggested that any gifts be checks made out to this fund.

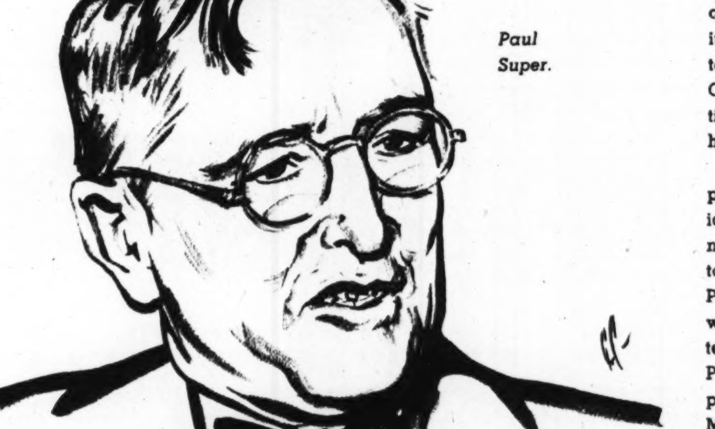
At 61, the short, stocky pianist is energetic and still youthful looking, despite thinning gray hair. His skin is fresh in color, his blue eyes are alert and shrewd, he talks rapidly. His hands seem strangely ill-suited to the work that has made them famous. Although extremely muscular, of course, they are very small, and the fingers are short and thick. Because of this shortness of finger, Hofmann uses a special keyboard on which an octave is an eighth of an inch narrower than on a keyboard of standard size.

In the summer Hofmann usually takes a complete vacation from the piano. He doesn't practice very much any more—just when he thinks he needs it. Chess, rummy ping pong, work shop, are some of the things which give him relaxation from his musical work.

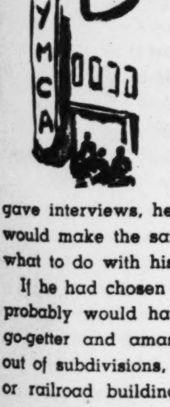
After a concert, says this top flight pianist, "usually I come home and think about how badly I've played."

KEITH KERMAN.

The Man Who Prays for Money—And Gets It



Paul Super.



BACK in his old home town the other day for the first time in 12 years, Paul Super appeared to have no regrets over a decision he made a long time ago. As he visited with relatives and friends here, made speeches and gave interviews, he left little doubt that he would make the same decision today about what to do with his life.

If he had chosen a career in business, he probably would have become known as a go-getter and amassed a sizeable fortune out of subdivisions, soap or cereal, banking or railroad building. He has the driving energy and the gift for influencing people that yield such results when applied to their possessor's financial advancement. But Super elected to devote himself to a cause. He is now an ace of the Y. M. C. A. service, especially distinguished as builder and general director of the Polish Y. M. C. A.

St. Louis is not quite his native city. He was born in Cincinnati, but his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel R. Super, brought him here when he was 2 years old, and it was in St. Louis that he grew up. He went to the Stoddard Grade School, then used for white pupils, and won a scholarship to the old Manual Training School at Eighteenth street and Washington avenue, which was a preparatory school for Washington University. From Manual he graduated second in his class; he would have been first if faulty deportment hadn't pulled down his average—even then he had too much energy to keep within the limits of strict decorum.

At the University of Missouri he enrolled in the Engineering School, and for the first year had a pretty lively time. His capers weren't wicked, merely youthfully mischievous, but his religious family thought the moral influences to which he was subject should be strengthened. So in his second year the university Y. M. C. A. spread its wings over him, and he soon was devoting some of his surplus vigor to its affairs, particularly in the expansion of its social activities.

In that second year at college young Super attended a Y. M. C. A. convention. And there occurred the peculiar phenomenon of a college sophomore acquiring a religious conviction. Under the pressure of this feeling the student decided to make Christian work his vocation. He took stock of his personal qualities. He was not particularly suited to the ministry, he felt. But he was naturally a promoter and organizer, and knew it; and he believed such a person could be useful to the Young Men's Christian Association, then struggling not very successfully for growth. With that organization, then, he definitely cast his lot.

HE CHANGED from the Engineering School to the College of Liberal Arts. Much of his spare time during his last two years as an undergraduate he gave to the campus "Y," of which he became president. He found time, however, to serve as news editor of the university newspaper and as a director of the Choral Union. He had played freshman football, but wasn't big enough to go out for the varsity; that was around the turn of the century when football teams relied heavily on gross tonnage.

After graduation, Super remained with the Y. M. C. A. at Columbia a few years, then served a short time as general secretary at Orange, New Jersey. In 1906 he was sent to Hawaii to take charge of the Honolulu association.

Before leaving on this assignment, Super got married. His bride was Miss Margaret L. Stump, whose father was Mayor of Nevada, Missouri. The romance had developed at the university, where she also was a student. They have a son, Donald E. Super, who is now studying for a doctor's degree at Columbia University, having received an M. A. at Oxford.

Ten years in Hawaii, and then Super, because of the special skill he had shown in the training of personnel, was called to New York to be secretary for training on the staff of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A.

When the United States entered the World War, Super did a lot of thinking about what he should do. Because he had received a good deal of military training, he felt sure he could get a commission. But he had a bad knee, the result of an injury suffered when playing soccer in Hawaii, which definitely barred him from physically active service, and a military desk job didn't appeal to him. He finally decided to stay where he was. As a consequence, a heavy task fell on his shoulders: Organizing the training of some 23,000 Y. M. C. A. workers for service.

In 1922 Super was sent to Poland to direct the establishment of the Y. M. C. A. in that country—in response to an invitation to the American Y. M. C. A. from a group of leading Poles. He was far from elated at the assignment. He knew very little about Poland—he had had to consult a map to find out exactly where it was—and he didn't know its language, but he did know—he had just learned—that there was unusually formidable difficulties in the way of his mission.

Poland was a devastated country. Six-sevenths of its area had been fought over in the World War, and after that conflict ended the Poles fought for two more years to push the Russians and Germans back over the frontiers of the nation that had just been created anew. On the heels of warfare had come a terrible epidemic of typhus. There was great poverty. Also Poland's experience with the Y. M. C. A. had been limited to the association's war-time service; in establishing a permanent civilian Y. M. C. A. it was necessary to liquidate the chocolate-and-movies business and replace it with character building activity. Religion, too, offered a special problem. The Y. M. C. A. was known as a Protestant organization. Poland was almost entirely Catholic. To harmonize the two required some figuring.

Super tackled the job by following the policy of "marshaling the strong in the service of the weak." Leading citizens of the nation—public men, business men, educators, etc.—were enlisted in support of the Polish Y. M. C. A. Marshal Pilsudski, who was to become dictator—Super prefers the term by which the Marshal was known in Poland, "the deciding factor"—accepted a place in the movement as First Honorary Member, a title which meant patron. After Pilsudski's death, Marshal Edward Rydz-Smigly, who succeeded to command of the army and is officially second citizen of the Republic, became the First Honorary Member. The Government has given moral and financial aid.

At first Super had several American and Canadian assistants, and most of the money used both for buildings and operating expenses came from America. In a short time, however, the association was turned over entirely to Polish hands—with the exception that Super remained as general superintendent—and as the years pass an increasingly large proportion of the revenues come from Polish sources. Super emphasized from the start that this Y. M. C. A. belonged to the Polish people, and planned its work to serve their particular needs. He planned it to serve all classes, down to the homeless waifs, deserted boys, many of whom are being fed, clothed, sheltered and educated by the Polish "Y."

To carry out its functions, the Polish Y. M. C. A. had to be fitted into "a Catholic framework." That is, while it is open to persons of other faiths, its program and methods are such as to be acceptable to practicing Catholics. Its secretaries are Catholic, as are 90 per cent of its members and practically all the Government officials and private citizens who support it. Super, a Presbyterian, says, "We want our Catholic members to be better Catholics." Soon after he arrived in Poland he went to Cardinal Kakowski, Archbishop of Warsaw, and told him that if he found any of his American secretaries trying to turn Catholics into Protestants he would send them home.

THERE are now five Y. M. C. A.s in Poland, with about 8000 members and 39 secretaries. The $900,000 association building in Warsaw is the largest of the kind in Europe. The Polish Y. M. C. A. is now entirely self-supporting as to local operating expenses. The North American Y. M. C. A.s pay Super's salary and lend him to the Polish organization. He is now on a leave of several months from his post.

In his 15 years in Poland Super has grown extremely fond of the country and its people. He has learned to speak and read its language, and has written two books about it: "Events and Personalities in Polish History" and "Elements of Polish Culture as Seen by a Resident Foreigner." When Germany and Poland were baring their teeth at each other a few years ago, he offered his services to the Polish Government in the event the quarrel became a fight. Poland, on its part, has honored him with three decorations. The 10-Year Medal for service to Poland in the first years of the new republic, the Officers' Order of Polonia Restituta (similar to the French Legion of Honor) for promoting friendly relations between Poland and America, and the Commanders' Order of Polonia Restituta for his Y. M. C. A. work.

in Kansas, take that home and try it on your ukulele."

Even Justice Black comes in for mention. In the second act dance of the nine Justices, Chief Justice Hughes warns the last man in line:

"Hurry up, Justice Black. Remember, you've got to go on the air at 7:30 and do a little more explaining."

The climax of the evening comes when the President says to Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre:

"Mac. I feel a chat coming on."

McIntyre runs off stage and returns with a portable fireplace. In the ensuing jamboree Morgenthau sings a plaintive lullaby entitled "Just a Baby Bond for Baby," Miss Perkins retails Washington gossip and someone mistakes the Wagner Act to mean a trio of acrobats.

There is a roar when the President perceives Attorney-General Homer Cummings.

"Homer," he says, "take down a law."

When Landon the butler appears the Chief Executive sighs:

"I wonder whose butler I'll be three years from now."

Postmaster Farley then checks in with another budget balancing suggestion. He wants letters sent air mail even if the distance is only a few blocks. That can't be done, the President points out.

"We'll only pretend to do it," Farley insinuates.

"That isn't honest," the President snaps.

"Oh," says Farley, "I thought you were talking about politics."

At various times the President denies that he has left Washington because of an unpaid laundry bill, the G. O. P. is interpreted to mean Gone Out of Politics and the Justices of the Supreme Court, in a burst of enthusiasm, declare the Constitution unconstitutional.

With all this going on the problem of our young couple never is really settled, but is doesn't matter for it all turns out to be a dream anyhow.

A piquant situation developed during the out-of-town tryouts when word leaked out that Cohan—who had no compunction about lampooning the President—had refused to sing a lyric involving Alfred E. Smith, ardent anti-New Dealer and Cohan's good friend.

Cohan decided to eliminate the lines at the last moment. He interrupted the smooth flow of a Rodgers and Hart number to extemporize a few sentences, concluding with the remark—heard clearly by the audience:

"I'll probably get my two weeks notice for that."

Rodgers, Hart, Kaufman and Lorenz Hart all joined with Cohan in minimizing the differences.

"Lorenz wrote some lyrics I wouldn't sing because they were about personal friends of mine," Cohan said.

And no one will divulge what the lyrics were. Hart said he had written new ones more acceptable to Cohan.

Incidentally Moss Hart is just recovering from the effects of the opening. He loses up to 20 pounds every time one of his shows goes on. Asked for comment on the current show he said:

"I've bitten my nails down to the cuticle. I hope you like it (the show)."

wandering comet colliding with the earth or the sun. As evidence of such a thing having occurred, the audience is shown the Milky Way, or Galaxy, in the artificial sky—ruins of what once may have been a rival of the sun or perhaps an entire solar system with satellites equivalent to Mars, Mercury and Venus. Another celestial mass of some kind got in the way. The collision and ensuing debris resulted in the Milky Way.

Of course, the space is so great in this universe that the likelihood of such collisions may be compared, Barton points out, to five birds, each flying over one of the continents, with a remote possibility of running into each other.

Barton says that the results of meteorites colliding with the surface of the earth may be observed from day to day. Millions of small cosmic articles are almost constantly coming into contact with the earth's atmosphere. Most of them burn up when they make this contact; but a few of the larger ones, called Meteorites, fall on the earth. There is Meteor Crater in Arizona, a scar where a large meteorite landed. Nearly a mile in diameter, the cavity is 600 feet in depth. A great meteor struck in Siberia in 1908. While such disturbances were only local, the meteorites were in reality miniature collisions of the earth with remnants of broken comets, a comet being nothing but a large quantity of gas, dust and fragments of rock and metal held together while rushing through space.

As the sun goes rotating about on its way, Barton guides some chosen star so that it meets the earth in the shattering blow that would mark the end of all life on the earth. This, also, is represented by turning on the lights and ending the lecture. There are pictures, however, which give an artist's conception of the effect of these earth blasting accidents.

Even if various bodies such as meteorites do not strike the earth's surface they represent a grave danger to the existence of the earth. They constantly add to the weight of the earth, thus increasing its mass and slowing down the speed of rotation. The result of this, Barnard asserts, is that eventually the earth may be drawn into the sun with fatal results.

And there is still another danger. From time to time, astronomists observe that some far away star suddenly looms brighter and brighter. Then, after some time, it may settle back again to its original status. Such process has been interpreted by science as a sudden explosion which takes part within the star. The star in its new, more intense form of light is then called a Nova.

Of course, the earth's sun may in the distant future become a Nova. The result would be that temperature on all the sun's planets would rise to such an extraordinary degree that all life would be exterminated by the intense heat.

THE sun as a Nova would change the oceans into boiling caldrons. Mountains would turn into raging volcanoes, continents would disappear, ocean bottoms would rise to form new continents. Life in its present form would vanish. But perhaps some life in lowly form would remain and the chain of evolution into higher forms of life would start all over again. Perhaps our own present world of existence on earth with its manifold shapes is the result of the sun having turned into a Nova some hundreds of millions of years ago.

Y. M. C. A. and recently completed one, yet unpublished, to which he has given the title "Objectives and Their Attainment." It is a result of many years of attention to military strategy. All his life this pleasant-faced, kindly Christian has been fascinated by the science of warfare. As a small boy he listened avidly to stories of the Civil War and enthusiastically drilled playmates armed with wooden guns and swords. He was a captain in the uniformed Boys' Brigade of St. Mark's Lutheran Church here. He was in the cadet corps during his four years at the University of Missouri. In Hawaii he organized a national guard company of white men to serve as a source of supply of white officers for guard regiments. He read histories of military campaigns and in time built up a considerable library of such works. And finally he came to the conclusion that the principles and forms of military strategy could be successfully applied to practically every kind of endeavor. The new book deals with this notion.

Collecting old maps and documents is one of his hobbies. Among his valued maps are one made by a British admiral for Peter the Great of Russia about 1710; a Mercator of Russia and Poland, possible date, 1554; an Orteleus of 1570, and a 1660 map made for the King of Sweden showing Swedish conquests in Poland. He has also the Spett map of 1910, which supported Poland's claim to the Corridor after the World War—and which, for that reason, he says is now verboten in Germany. One of his documents, dated 1656, is a call to arms issued by the Polish King Jan Kazamierz against the Swedes. On a wall of his apartment is a piece of gold paper inscribed for him by Li Yuen Hung, fifth President of China; it bears the names of the donor and the recipient and the Chinese inscription: "Humility and Reverence Is the Atmosphere of the Home."

FOR several years, with writing, study, research and collecting, as well as his regular work, making demands on his time, Super kept a record of how he spent his hours—his half hours, to be exact, for he divided the day into 30-minute periods. Every once in a while he would go over this record, see he had been spending too much time on this, not enough on that, and change his habits accordingly. During that period he seldom worked less than eight or more than 13 hours a day.

He has a remarkable memory for figures. He can tell the exact date of events of no great moment that happened years ago. If he looks up a telephone number, the chances are that he can call it without looking it up again the next day or the next week. He visualizes numbers.

Super speaks and writes with unusual clarity. His outstanding mental trait probably is his "drive," a tenacious energy that sometimes tries to carry him too fast and too far. Recognizing the danger in this characteristic, he makes it a practice to have closely associated with him someone of more cautious type to serve as a brake on him, a balance wheel. It was fortunate, he says, that he got a wife of a calm, judicial temperament.

As a raiser of money for the Y. M. C. A. Super has been unusually successful. In Honolulu he undertook to collect $100,000 in 10 days, and friends told him he was crazy. Before the campaign was six days old $140,000 had been pledged, much of it cabled and wirelessed from distant parts of the earth. His success in this phase of his work undoubtedly is due in part to his whole-souled belief in the worthiness of the cause he represents. Thus armed, he can present his case convincingly. He doesn't beg for contributions. He marshals reasons for them.

Also he prays for money—for the Y. M. C. A. Paul Super believes God answers prayers for aid in doing His work, and he believes the Y. M. C. A. is doing work that God wants done. He has received large donations from persons whom he had not solicited—but whose purse strings he had asked God to loosen. Super doesn't go around shouting about this, but he makes no secret of it.

In his late fifties, Super looks younger, despite gray hair. He is short in stature, and incisive without being curt. In profile he is almost the image of Pope Pius XI.

KILLED HER BECAUSE SHE WOULDN'T GIVE HIM a DATE

A Boy and Girl Tragedy of an Indiana Town.

By F. A. BEHYMER
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

RICHMOND, Indiana.

HOLLYS SAGESTER was 16 years old and in love with Martha Markey, who was 14. She was the one woman in all the world for him. But Martha was not in love with him. Not enough in love, at least, to put up with his headlong wooing. She turned him down and sent him a note telling him she never wanted to see his face again. What was worse, she made a date with another young gentleman. That was too much. Hollys made one last try for a date and announced that if he didn't get it he was going to kill the false and fickle Martha. One of his friends tried to dissuade him. "No woman's worth that," he argued. Maybe not, but he, Hollys Sagester, would show Martha Markey that a man's affections were not to be trifled with like that.

Hollys and Martha were members of the young set at Dennis Junior High School here last year. Before that Hollys, who was a grade ahead of Martha, had not taken any interest in her. To him she was just a kid. At the opening of school in the fall, however, she attracted his attention. It occurred to him that she was pretty, and she was growing up. She was as tall as some of the girls in his grade and, if you asked him, she was prettier than the prettiest of them. So said Hollys Sagester, who considered himself something of an expert in such matters, speaking to himself or to the other young men of his crowd when they engaged in their favorite pastime of appraising the girls that they knew.

Young Mr. Sagester, although disposed to be guided by his own judgment in his dealings with the fair sex, did not despise the hint that was dropped by another young man who had called Martha his sweetie before Hollys took her up, but whose gallantries had not been encouraged. "Marth's all right," he said, "but she makes a fella stay in his place. That's all I've got against her."

Sagester drew him aside. "Do you mean—?"

"Yes, that's what I mean. But maybe if it was somebody else—"

"I see. Thanks, old man."

SAGESTER was to graduate from Dennis Junior in February, so during the fall term he had to dig and couldn't be bothered with girls. He continued to take notice of Martha, though, and about the middle of last January, when his graduation seemed to be assured, he began making dates with her, and this continued after his graduation in February, although he felt that, as a freshman at Morton High, his association with a junior high school girl involved a certain condescension on his part. Besides, he was an athlete, or so he considered himself, big and strong, something of a shining star in baseball and football, and when it came to girls he could take his pick, but it was, after all, his own business if he chose to honor one who was below him in scholastic rating and belonged to another set.

It did not escape Hollys that Martha Markey, though she called him her boy friend and went everywhere with him—to parties and the movies and on rides when Hollys was permited to have his father's car or sneaked it out of the garage—was not greatly in awe of him, but that didn't worry him. He thought he understood women. What they needed was a little of the cave man stuff. "Catch 'em young and treat 'em rough," that was his motto. When he got good and ready he would turn on his strong will power and have her eating out of his hand.

It was well along toward the end of vacation when Hollys started to get rough. It didn't work. Martha told him he was no gentleman and demanded that she be taken home at once. What was more, she would never set foot in his car again. She said that as he put her down at her door.

"So that's the way you feel about it," sneered Hollys Sagester.

"That's the way I feel about it."

"Well, good-by then, Miss Markey."

Martha did not answer and Hollys drove away.

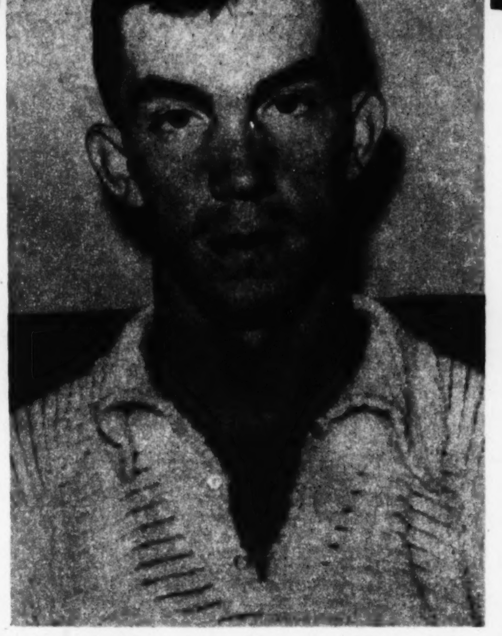
When Hollys drove away from the Markey home at 14 South West Second street, he told himself that it was all over between him and Martha Markey. He was a fool to have wasted his time on her. Who'd she think she was anyway. He'd show her. He would stamp her image out of his heart and it would be as though she had never entered his life. She would be sorry for what she had done and come asking his forgiveness. When she did that he would spurn her and sneer at her and tell her she was nothing to him any more.

It was not as easy as that. For one thing, Martha did not come asking for forgiveness. On top of that she began going with other boys. It was noticed and there were comments about it. Sagester turned it off. Yes, there had been a little difference between him and the girl, but he guessed it would blow over. The boy who had dropped him a hint thought he understood. Martha had put him in his place.

Sagester saw Martha a time or two, just to give her a chance to say she was sorry. He made up his mind that he wouldn't spurn her and sneer at her if she did. He would be broadminded about it and tell her it was nothing at all, but at the same time he would contrive to make her realize that he was doing her a great favor. But Martha didn't say she was sorry and didn't act like she cared. She was so snippy that Hollys flew into a rage and stalked away.

Martha Markey.

The Markey residence.



Hollys Sagester.

When he received a note addressed to Mr. Hollys Sagester, informing him that Miss Martha Markey never wanted to see his face again, it began to look like Martha was in earnest about it, and it gave him a shock. He realized that he cared. Perhaps it was too much to expect her to ask his forgiveness. Perhaps if she would give him a chance he would even go as far as to acknowledge that it was his fault. If he could get a date with her he could smooth it over without humiliating himself too much. But how to get the date. Maybe Muriel Hill would help him. Muriel was Martha's chum.

He went to see Martha's chum. "Muriel," he said, "you may have heard that there's a little difference between me and Martha."

"Yes, she told me about it," said Muriel.

"Just a silly little misunderstanding. I want to see her and straighten it out. I want you to make a date with her for me."

"I'll see what I can do, but she's pretty sore at you."

"Ask her if she won't go riding with me tomorrow night and I'll square it up."

"I'll tell her."

Muriel came back and told told Hollys: "Martha says she doesn't want a date with you and she never intends to set foot in your car again. Besides, she has a date with Dale Stevens for tomorrow night."

Hollys thought that over. The situation was getting desperate. He would have to do something. That night he drove to Martha's home. There was a car standing in front of the house. Maybe Martha had company, but he didn't care. He entered and found Muriel there with Martha and John Guyer and John Schneider waiting to take the girls out. He knew John Schneider was Muriel's friend. So John Guyer was going to take Martha out. "John Guyer," he stormed, "I want you to stay away from Martha."

Guyer said he would have to leave that up to Martha. Hollys went tearing out of the house.

Late that night, after Muriel had gone to bed, Hollys came to her door and asked for her. Her mother called to her. She dressed and came down.

"Muriel," said Hollys, "I want you to make another effort to get a date with Martha for me tomorrow night. If I don't get it something's going to happen."

He took off his wrist watch and handed it to Muriel. "If I get the date," he said, "I'll be back for it. If I don't get the date keep it in remembrance of me, for I'm going to kill her and myself."

"Don't be silly," said Muriel, unimpressed by the boy's theatricals, a form of speech that was not unusual among her acquaintances. But Hollys thrust the watch upon her and she accepted it. "All right," she said, "I'll see you about 5 o'clock tomorrow evening and give it back to you."

The next morning Muriel went to see Martha; asked her again for a date for Hollys.

"No," said Martha, "I don't want to see him. I'm through with him."

As Martha and Muriel and Elizabeth Morgan were standing on the door steps at Martha's home, Hollys drove up and stopped. Martha sniffed and went inside. Elizabeth went with her. Hollys called Muriel to his car. "Do I get my date?" he asked.

"No. She says she's through with you."

"You will see things happen around here in about 15 minutes. Get her in the yard."

"Stop talking foolishness," said Muriel, turning to go inside. Hollys drove away.

Inside the three girls looked at some things Martha had bought up town, and then Martha said: "Let's go out to the ledge, it's cooler out there."

Muriel, remembering Hollys and his threats, demurred, but Martha said, "Come on," and the three went out and sat on the concrete ledge beside the front steps.

Hollys, when he drove away, stopped at the home of Don Stikeleather. "I'm going to kill Martha Markey," he said.

Don came to the car and said: "You're crazy to do that. Don't you do it. No woman is worth that much."

"Well, I'm going to," said Hollys.

Then he drove to the home of Ray Kinder Jr., and borrowed a small rifle. He said he was going hunting, but after he had the weapon he told Ray he was going to kill Martha Markey. Ray got into the car with him and tried to regain possession of the weapon, but Hollys put it out of Ray's reach. He drove toward the Markey home, but stopped before he reached it and wrote on a piece of paper: "Ray Kinder has nothing to do with this." He gave the paper to Ray and then drove around the block and into the alley bisecting it and, parking the car at the rear of the Markey home, went around the house and came near to where the three girls were sitting.

MURIEL saw him coming with the rifle in his hands and sprang up and ran. Elizabeth sat still with her arm around Martha's shoulder and watched. Martha did not turn her head. Hollys raised the weapon and fired, shooting Martha in the back of the head. He ran back through the yard to his car and started to drive away, but stopped and backed up in front of the house and offered to take Martha to a hospital. Martha's mother screamed at him to go away. He advised that an ambulance be called and then drove away, but returned a little later and inquired if the police had been called. Detective J. C. Vallandingham, who had arrived said: "I am a policeman."

"I shot the girl," said Hollys, "take me to the police station."

Martha Markey died within an hour at the Reid Memorial Hospital. The same day Hollys calmly told Prosecutor John R. [illegible]ten all about it and signed the statement:

"I have known Martha Markey since September, 1936. I went with her some since January 17. Afterward I went with the girl steadily and was with her much of the time. Until about a week ago we had very little differences between us. Then she started going with other boys and we have been fussing almost continuously since, mainly having broken since Monday of this week.

"On Tuesday of this week she made the statement that she didn't ever want to step foot in my car again, and this morning she made the same statement to Muriel Hill. I was trying to have Miss Hill make a date with her for me for tonight, but was told through her that she was going to have a date with Dale Stevens and she wouldn't consent to having a date with me.

"I drove by and stopped and Martha went inside. I called the Hill girl. She came out and talked to me. Elizabeth Morgan started in. Muriel said: 'Tell Martha I'll be in in a little bit.' Muriel told me she couldn't get the date for me.

"I drove to Ray Kinder's and got a .22 rifle from him. He told me to be careful of it and I said I would. I asked him where the temple is, relative to the anatomy of the body. He didn't answer. I got two cartridges at home. Ray rode up on his bicycle and got into the car. I said: 'Be quiet as we are leaving, I don't want mother to hear me leaving with the car.'

"I TOLD him I was going to Markey's and I think I told him I was going to shoot Martha. He reached for the gun. I put it over on the other side.

"The three girls were seated on the cement front steps. When less than 30 feet from them I raised the gun, pointed in the general direction of Martha and pulled the trigger, aiming to shoot her, but did not sight for any particular spot.

"I turned and ran back toward the car and as I remember it I tried to place the gun toward my head and pull the trigger, but it didn't fire, and I went on to the car and asked Ray what was the matter with it, whether it was jammed or what. He said he didn't know and then, with the gun pointed at the ground, I pulled the trigger and the second shot fired, so that I could do nothing more toward taking my own life.

"I started away, but thinking what I had done I backed up in front of the house. I asked Ray to get out and help me call the police and an ambulance and help move her to a hospital. Her mother came screaming for me to get away, so I got back in the car and pulled away. At home I obtained a hunting knife and think I told my mother what had happened. I started out of the house with the knife, but didn't seem to have strength or courage enough to use it and threw it away in some bushes. I got in the car and went back to the Markey home and called to John Burton to drive me up to the police station, but a detective was there and the police car came and they took me to the station."

When he was arraigned before Judge G. H. Hoelscher he pleaded guilty to the charge of murder.

"Do you know what you are doing?" the Judge asked.

"Yes, sir."

"Have you talked this over with your lawyer and your parents?"

"Yes, sir."

"I sentence you for the term of your natural life to the Indiana State Prison at Michigan City."

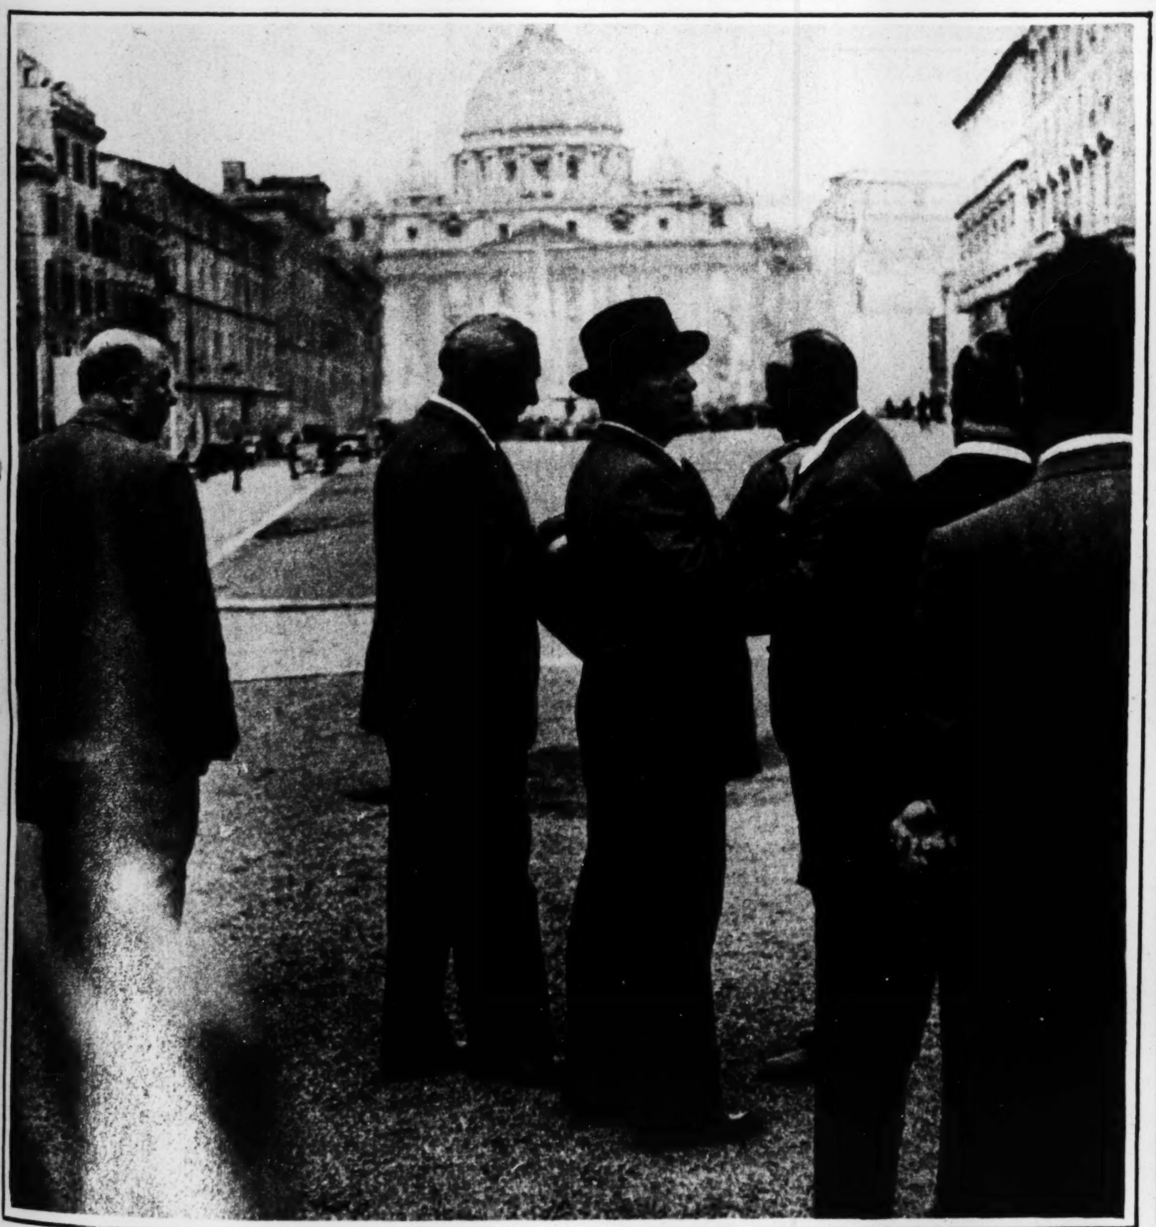
HOW ITALY'S YOUNGSTERS LEARN ABOUT WAR

Their heads encased in little gas masks, equipped with child-size wooden rifles, these Italian children charge through a cloud of imitation war gas at their camp near Rome. They are members of the Ballila, juvenile Fascist organization. Such military exercises are a part of their regular training.



In striking contrast to his frequent military appearances, Premier Mussolini turned up recently in a lounge suit to inspect demolition work to provide a more imposing approach to the Cathedral of St. Peter's in Rome. It was his first public appearance in civilian dress in many months and it made headlines.

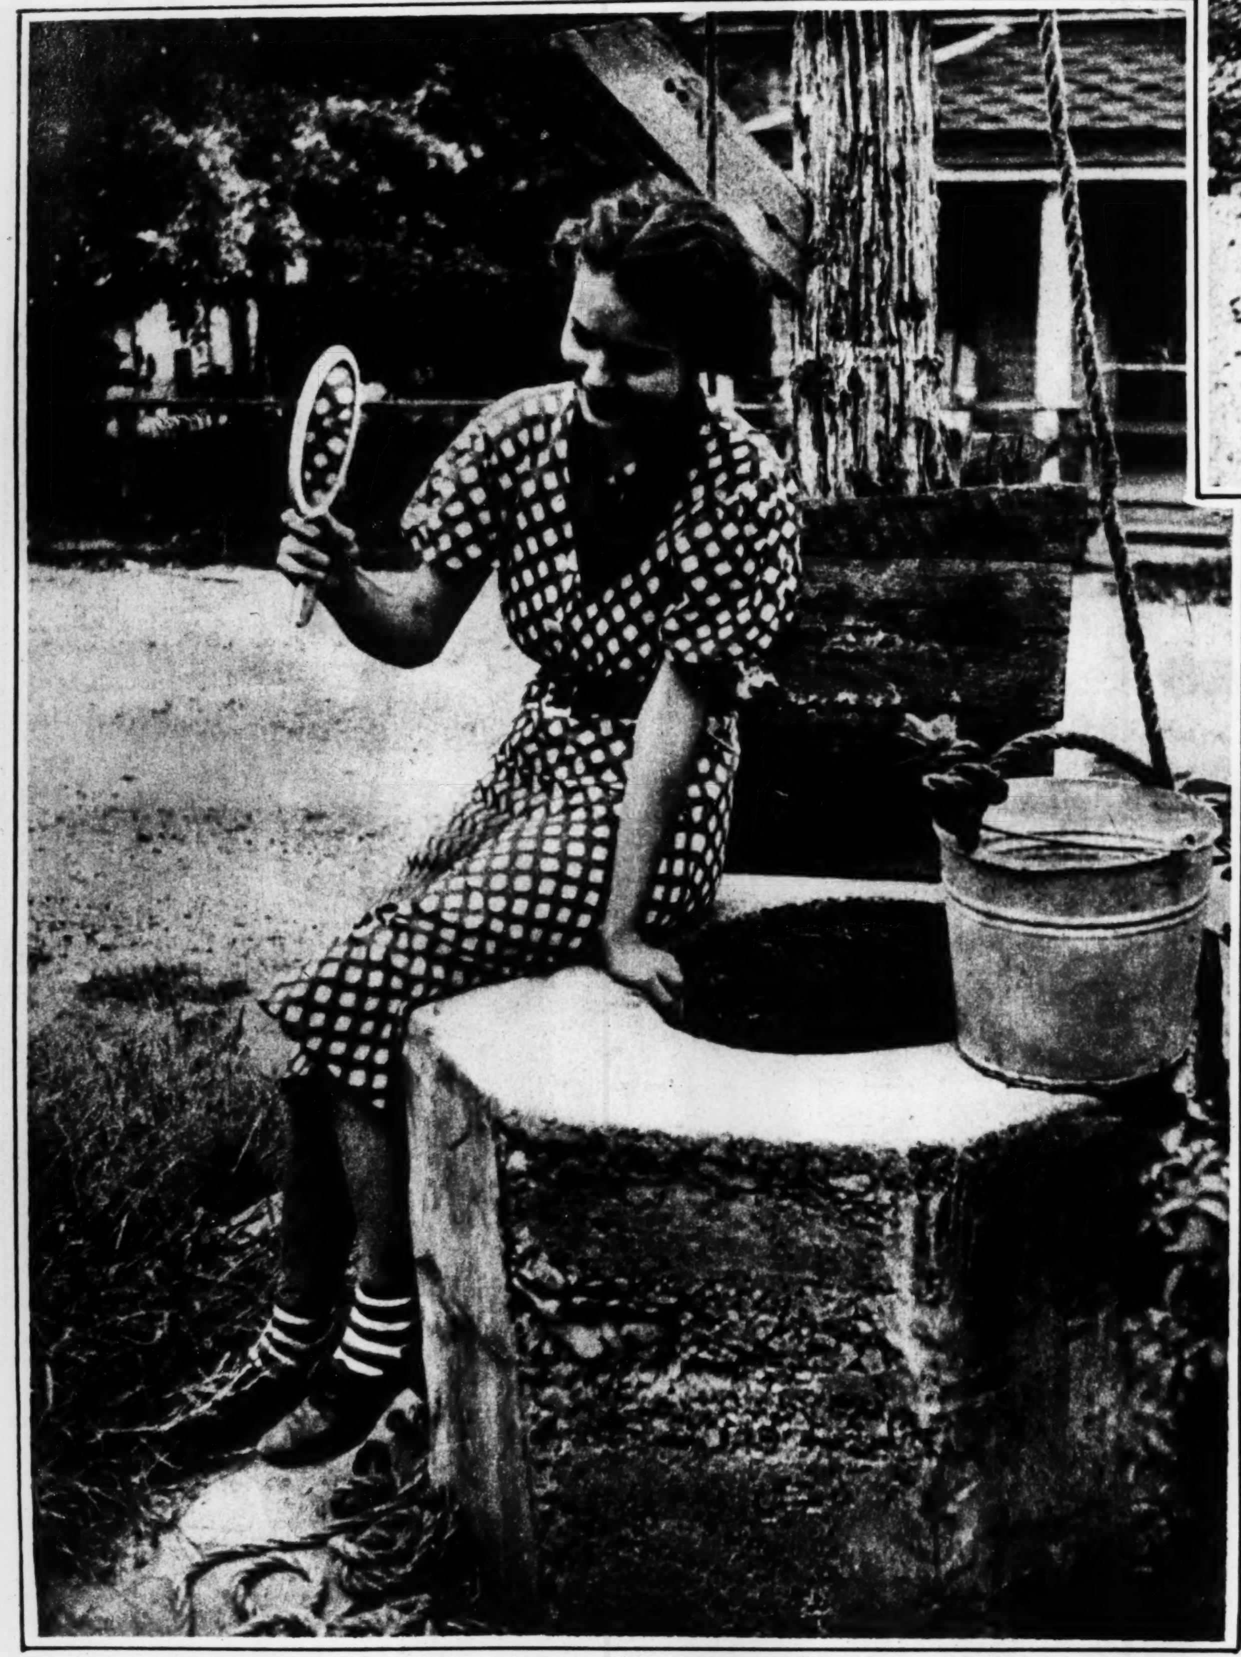
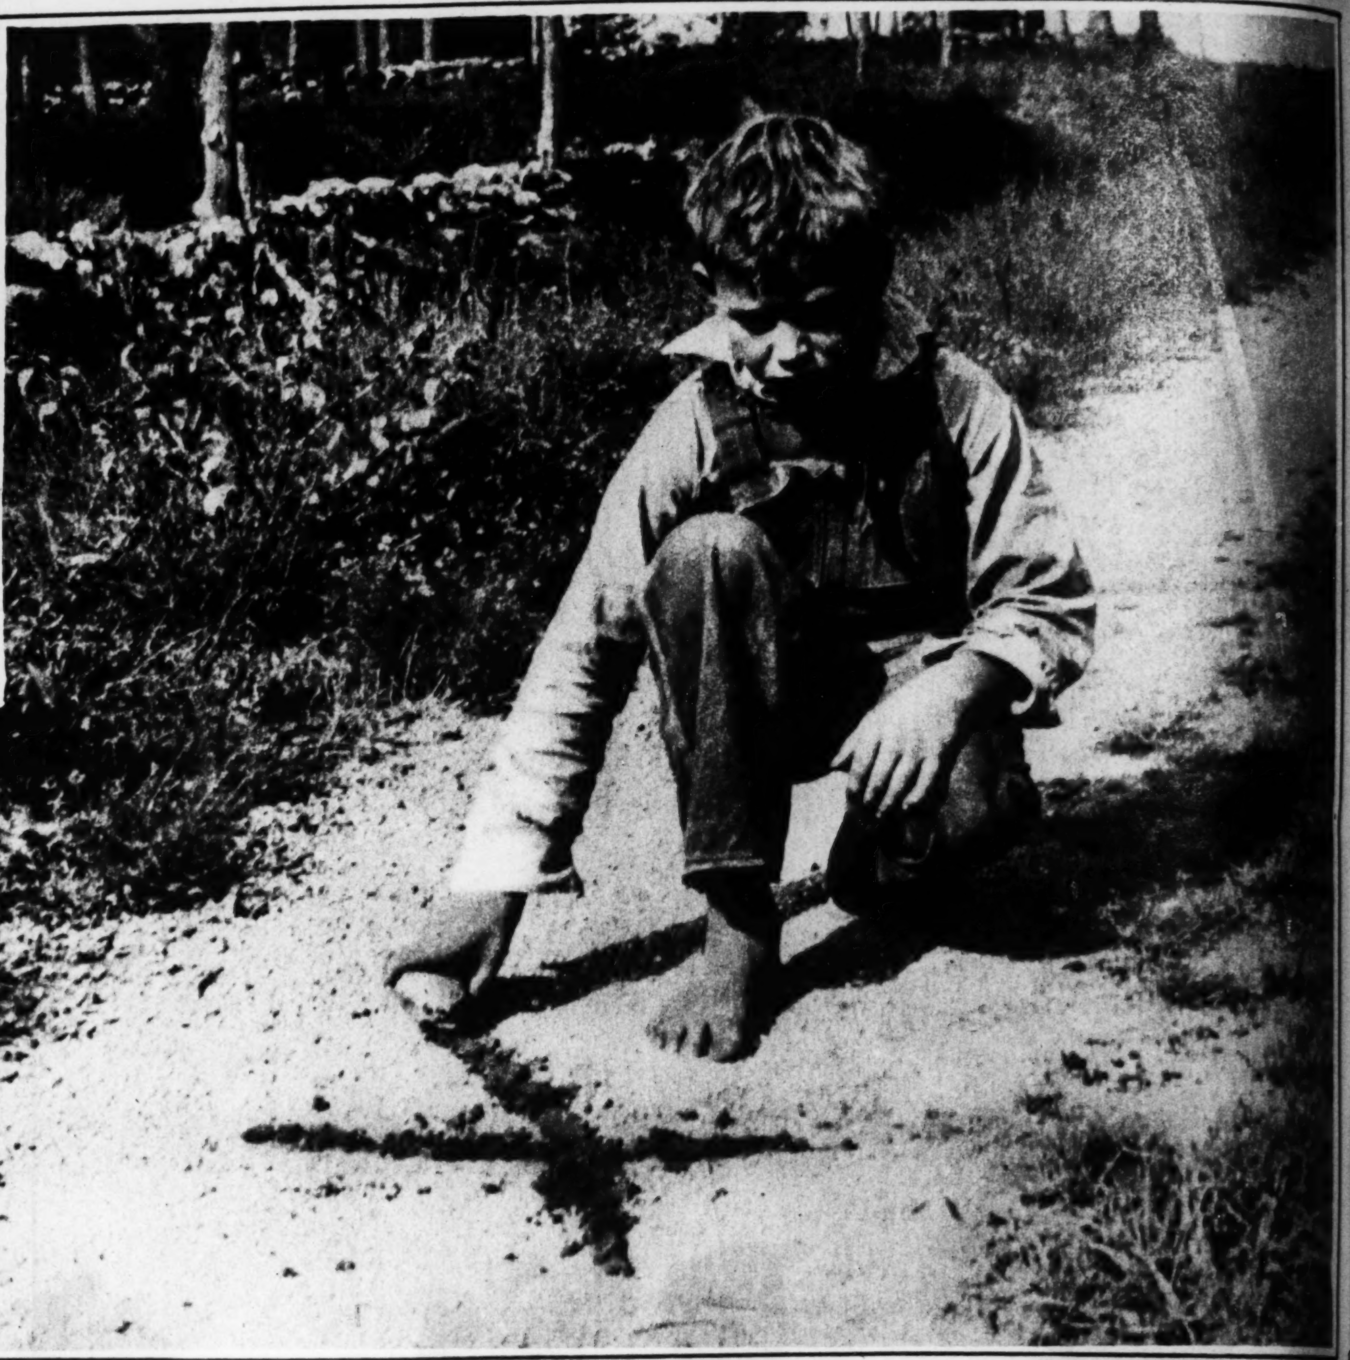
OLD SUPERSTITIONS of the OZARK MOUNTAINS

Residents of the Shepherd of the Hills Area Demonstrate Some of the Beliefs Which Formerly Were Handed Down From Generation to Generation.

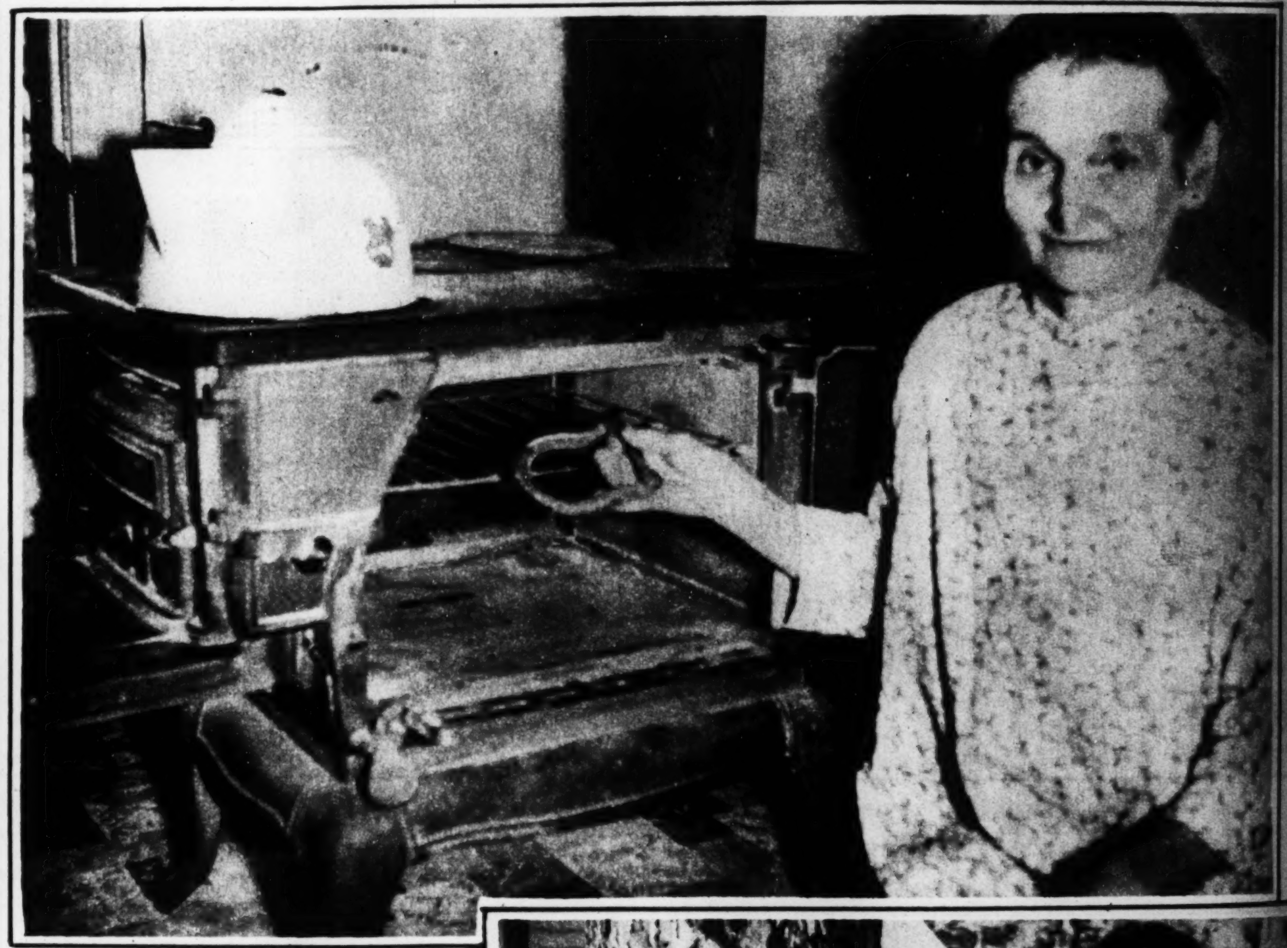
—Photos by V. C. Russell for the Post-Dispatch.



Many a fair maiden has seen her future husband in a mirror over an open well on an early morning, say hill legends. Virginia Lewis tries out the old belief.

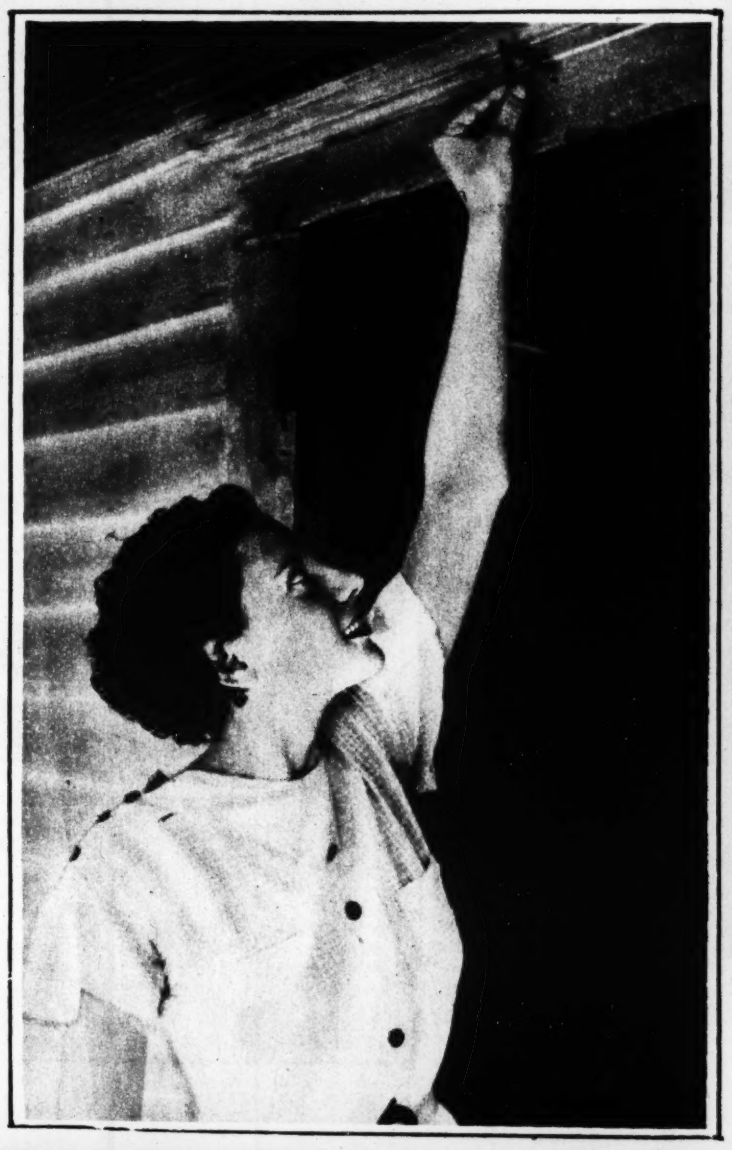


Little Cecil Isaac has forgotten what his mother sent him for and must return to the house. He makes a cross in the path, to prevent ill luck in the future.

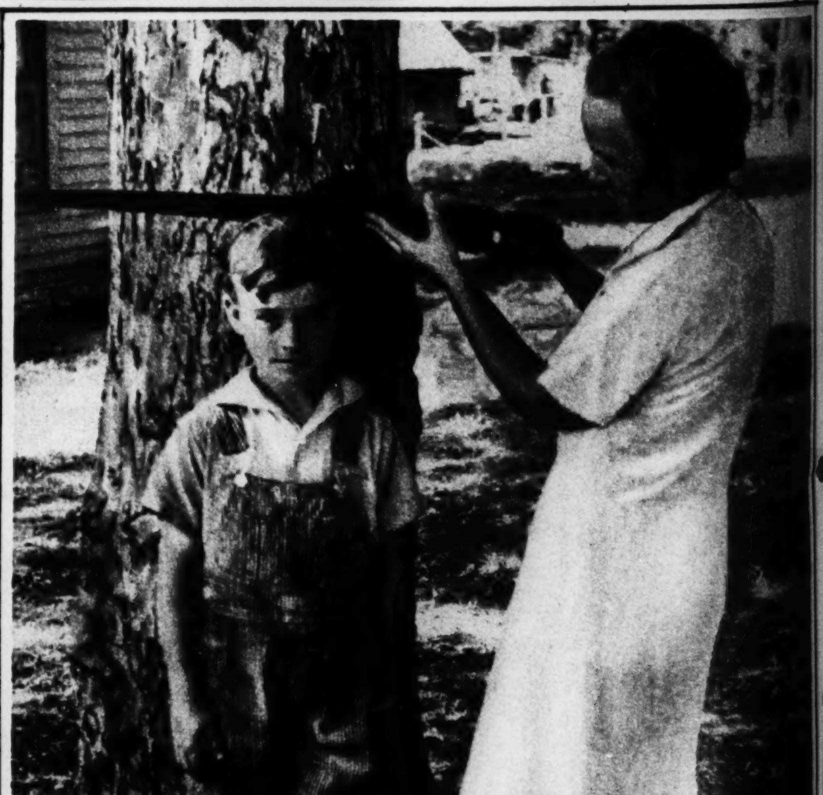


Many times has she placed a mule shoe in the cook stove oven to drive the hawks away from the chickens on her hill farm, says Mrs. Caroline Danner.

Nezzie Persinger brings home a new coat and is cautioned by her mother against buttoning it before it is worn. Superstition says that brings ill luck.



Verona Clemons is testing out the old hill belief that the placing of a wishbone over the door will attract her future husband to call.



It once was a common superstition that an undersized child had a "tisick" (asthma), which stunted its growth. To cure this a tree was notched at the child's height and a lock of hair put in the notch. When the child grew above the notch, it was thought the ailment was outgrown and the child would thereafter gain rapidly.

Goodbye Worry!

I've discovered a laxative with exercising action

WHY not make a whole-hearted effort to be more healthy? Realize once and for all that sitting back and worrying never helped a single case of constipation. Resolve that this time you will show real determination in your campaign to win back youthful regularity.

During the past five years, Saráka* has helped many, many men and women turn such resolutions into realities...has helped thousands of sufferers from chronic constipation forget their worries. Saráka is the laxative with exercising action.

Strengthens Muscles

The principal ingredient in Saráka is bassorit — hardened sap of a tree in far-away India. Saráka contains this substance in the form of tiny granules.

After passing through the stomach, these granules absorb water and expand to many times their original size. They turn into soft, smooth BULK.

You know the importance of bulk. It encourages your intestinal muscles to exercise — gives them something to exercise on. Instead of weakening those muscles, Saráka helps to build them up.

Bulk Plus Motility

In addition to providing extra bulk, Saráka contains another ingredient of plant origin — a specially treated cortex frangula which has a valuable stimulating action on the intestines. Gently but firmly it urges the intestinal muscles to keep waste products in motion. So you have BULK PLUS MOTILITY* — a combination not found in ordinary laxatives. Results are thorough but not violent. Most people have no sensation of having taken a laxative! They are reminded of healthy childhood when constipation was a thing never thought of.

Why not make that real effort to be more healthy right now? Ask your doctor about Saráka. We are confident he will tell you that it is safe and non-habit forming. Then try Saráka. See for yourself how pleasant it is to take — and how pleasant after taking. Get a package from your druggist. Save money by buying the new "Hospital Size." Here's the 1938 car that sells itself in 10 miles!

RIDE IN THE AMAZING 1938
STUDEBAKER
BEFORE YOU DECIDE ON ANY CAR!

ALMOST PERFECTLY EQUALIZED WEIGHT at each wheel is one reason for every 1938 Studebaker's marvelously restful ride on any road . . . on any turn . . . at any speed. Studebaker is said to be America's best balanced new car. See for yourself.

YOU RIDE RELAXED without grabbing for door handles or assist cords. You glide instead of jolting and bouncing. There's no swerving on the turns. The car steers without wheel shock and without effort. Take a 10-mile ride and prove it.

EXTRA ROOM IN FRONT includes not only seat room but eye room. Windshields are extra wide and extra high. New vacuum-operated Miracle Shift, optional on Presidents and Commanders at extra cost, assures front floor clearway, simplifies gear changing.

TREAT yourself to the amazing experience of a 10-mile ride in a 1938 Studebaker and see how that ride cools off your interest in any other 1938 car. You'll give Studebaker first place in handling ease three minutes after you get behind the wheel.

And you'll just as quickly agree that Studebaker's new marvels of comfort engineering give the smoothest, steadiest, most restful ride you ever had.

Every 1938 Studebaker model has an almost perfectly equalized distribution of weight at each wheel—a center of gravity only 25 inches from the ground—and the incomparable combination of symmetrical direct-action steering, independent planar wheel suspension and finest hydraulic shock absorbers at no extra cost.

They're saying all over America, "There's nothing to match the 1938 Studebaker ride." Give that amazing ride a 10-mile trial before deciding on any car.

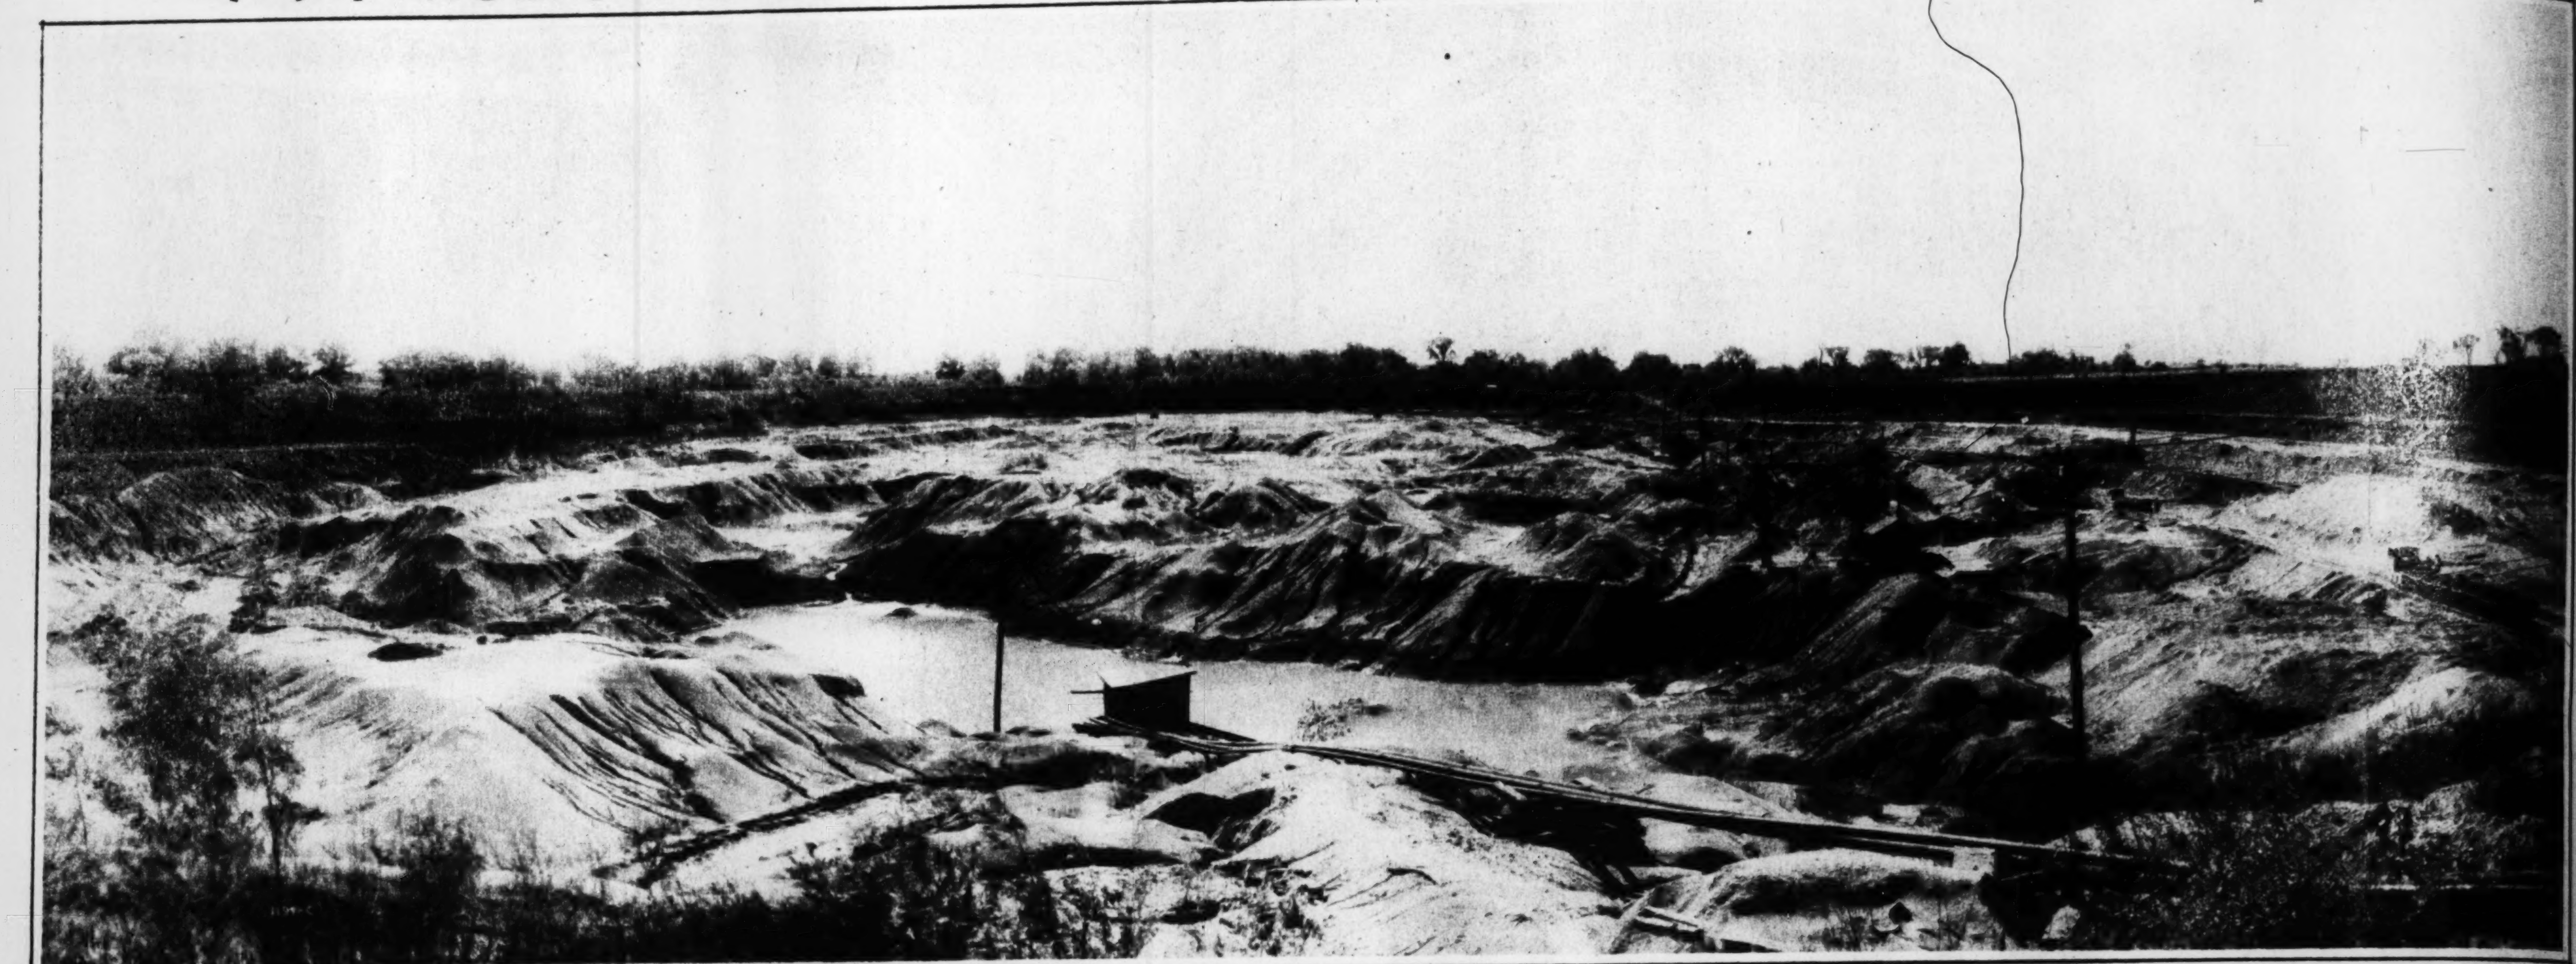
A MISSOURI LANDSCAPE 225,000,000 YEARS AGO



Panorama of the surface of the earth as it existed near Mexico, Mo., at the beginning of the Pennsylvanian period of the Paleozoic Era in geologic time. The reason for laying it bare is economic. At the beginning of the Pennsylvanian period the hills and valleys existed as shown. Later they were covered with a deposit of pure fire clay, and this in turn was covered by other overlying rock. Man now has stripped off the overburden in his mining of the fire clay, exposing the original landscape.

UNAWARE THAT THEY ARE WANDERING INTO A TRAP SET BY THE NOTORIOUS MAHARAJAH OF IBOR, BOB AND CONNIE McGUIRE CONTINUE ON THEIR SEARCH FOR THE JEWELS OF THE GENGHIS KHAN------
ACCORDING TO THIS MAP, WE MUST FIRST LOCATE AN OLD LAMASERY, OR A BUDDHIST MONASTERY. THE JEWEL CACHE IS THREE MILES NORTH OF THAT--I'M AFRAID WE ARE OFF THE TRACK
I'M FRIGHTENED! THIS COUNTRY IS SO WILD AND DESOLATE! NO WONDER OUR CARAVAN MEN DESERTED US LAST NIGHT!
BUCK UP, CONNIE! YOU KNOW HOW MUCH THIS MEANS TO US! JUST BECAUSE THE MEN HAVE TURNED YELLOW IS NO REASON WHY WE SHOULD--BESIDES, WE'RE DISGUISED AS AFGHANS--A RAIDING PARTY WOULDN'T BOTHER US!
I CAN'T HELP IT, BOB--I FEEL THAT SOMETHING IS WRONG--OH! LOOK, A MAN!
BUT, LIKE A FLASH THE HORSEMAN WHEELS AND SPURS DOWN THE OTHER SIDE OF THE HILL-----

A LITTLE WHILE LATER, HE STANDS BEFORE THE MAHARAJAH IN THE OLD LAMASERY--
THEY OUGHT TO BE HERE WITHIN THE HOUR--THEY'RE NOT FAR AWAY--
AH! QUICK, GO DOWN AND FREE THAT OLD MONK AND DRAG HIM UP HERE! I HAVE A JOB FOR HIM!
AND JUNGLE JIM'S CARAVAN STRIVES TO OVERTAKE BOB AND WARN HIM BUT THEY ARE CONSTANTLY UNDER THE EYE OF THE MAHARAJAH'S SINISTER AID "THE SILENT ONE"!

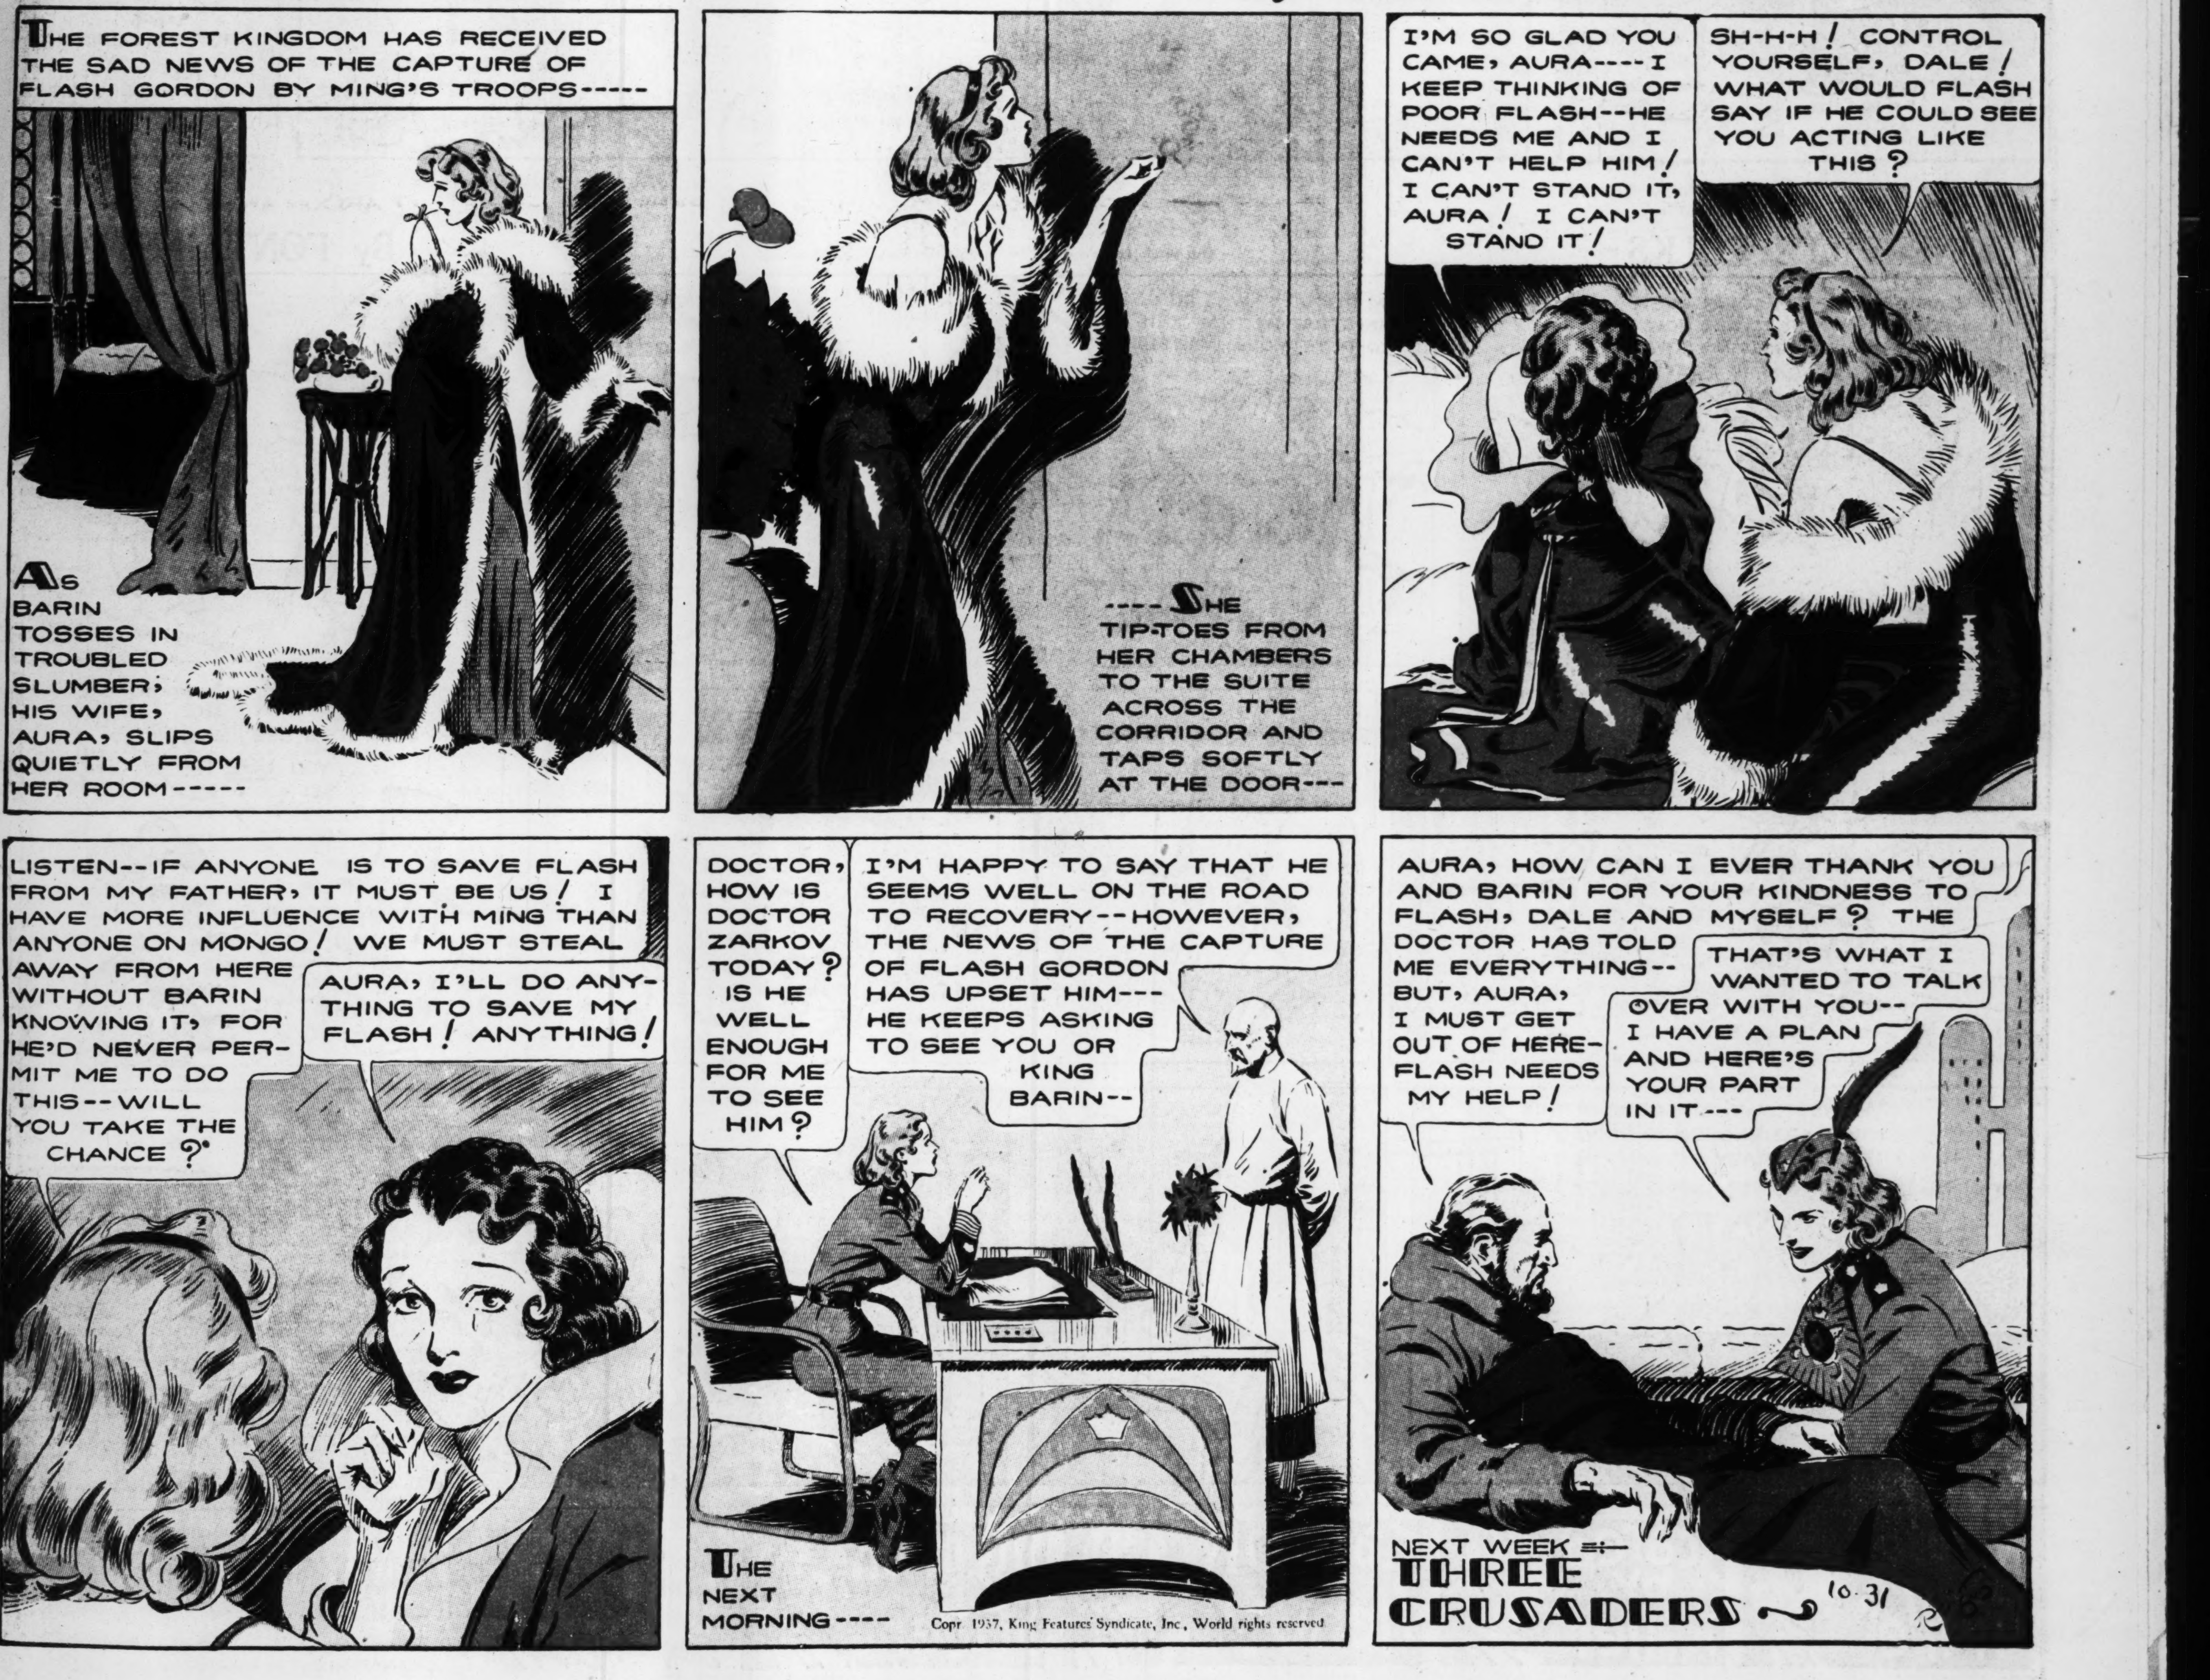
FLASH GORDON

By ALEXANDER RAYMOND



THE FOREST KINGDOM HAS RECEIVED THE SAD NEWS OF THE CAPTURE OF FLASH GORDON BY MING'S TROOPS----- AS BARIN TOSSES IN TROUBLED SLUMBER; HIS WIFE, AURA, SLIPS QUIETLY FROM HER ROOM-----
----SHE TIP-TOES FROM HER CHAMBERS TO THE SUITE ACROSS THE CORRIDOR AND TAPS SOFTLY AT THE DOOR---
I'M SO GLAD YOU CAME, AURA----I KEEP THINKING OF POOR FLASH--HE NEEDS ME AND I CAN'T HELP HIM! I CAN'T STAND IT, AURA! I CAN'T STAND IT!
SH-H-H! CONTROL YOURSELF, DALE! WHAT WOULD FLASH SAY IF HE COULD SEE YOU ACTING LIKE THIS?
LISTEN--IF ANYONE IS TO SAVE FLASH FROM MY FATHER, IT MUST BE US! I HAVE MORE INFLUENCE WITH MING THAN ANYONE ON MONGO! WE MUST STEAL AWAY FROM HERE WITHOUT BARIN KNOWING IT, FOR HE'D NEVER PERMIT ME TO DO THIS--WILL YOU TAKE THE CHANCE?
AURA, I'LL DO ANYTHING TO SAVE MY FLASH! ANYTHING!
DOCTOR, HOW IS DOCTOR ZARKOV TODAY? IS HE WELL ENOUGH FOR ME TO SEE HIM?
I'M HAPPY TO SAY THAT HE SEEMS WELL ON THE ROAD TO RECOVERY--HOWEVER, THE NEWS OF THE CAPTURE OF FLASH GORDON HAS UPSET HIM---HE KEEPS ASKING TO SEE YOU OR KING BARIN--
THE NEXT MORNING----
Copr. 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc., World rights reserved
AURA, HOW CAN I EVER THANK YOU AND BARIN FOR YOUR KINDNESS TO FLASH, DALE AND MYSELF? THE DOCTOR HAS TOLD ME EVERYTHING--BUT, AURA, I MUST GET OUT OF HERE--FLASH NEEDS MY HELP!
THAT'S WHAT I WANTED TO TALK OVER WITH YOU--I HAVE A PLAN AND HERE'S YOUR PART IN IT---

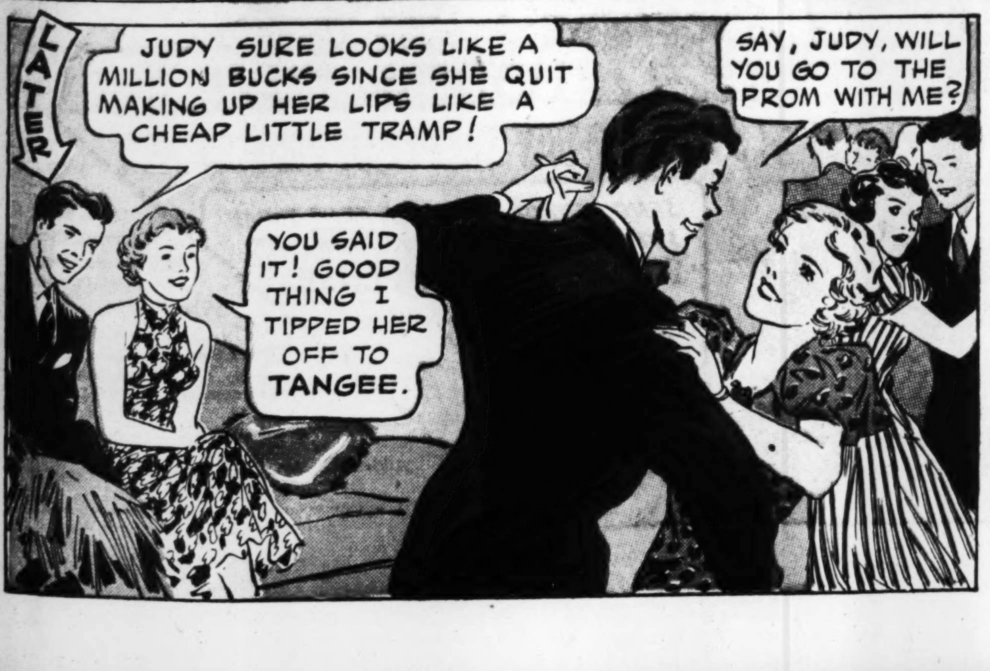
GOSH, SIS, YOU SURE LOOK CHEAP!
WELL A GIRL HAS GOTTA WEAR LIPSTICK, HASN'T SHE, BIG BOY?
YEAH! BUT YOU DON'T NEED TO SMEAR IT ON LIKE HOUSE PAINT. I'M ASHAMED YOU'RE MY SISTER SOMETIMES
PSS'T! LOOK WHAT BLEW IN! MUST BE A BURLESQUE SHOW IN TOWN
NAW! THAT'S JUST JIMMIE JOHNSON'S SISTER. SHE'S REALLY A NICE KID!
SHE LOOKS LIKE A HOT TAMALE TO ME!
I'VE NEVER BEEN SO INSULTED IN MY LIFE
WELL JUDY DEAR, YOU'VE GOT TO ADMIT...
DRUGS
ADMIT WHAT!!! COME ON, ELSIE, OUT WITH IT!
PROMISE YOU WON'T BE MAD IF I TELL YOU! HONESTLY, JUDY, YOU DO USE THE AWFULLEST LIPSTICK. IT'S TOO FLAMING RED--YOU LOOK SORT OF PAINTED!—WHY DON'T YOU USE TANGEE?
LOTS OF GIRLS THINK TANGEE IS AN ORANGE LIPSTICK--BUT THE FUNNY THING IS WHEN YOU PUT IT ON, IT CHANGES. ON YOUR LIPS IT COMES OUT A PRETTY BLUSH-ROSE--JUST THE RIGHT SHADE FOR YOU.
I SUPPOSE I'D BETTER GET SOME TANGEE AND TRY IT.



LATER
JUDY SURE LOOKS LIKE A MILLION BUCKS SINCE SHE QUIT MAKING UP HER LIPS LIKE A CHEAP LITTLE TRAMP!
SAY, JUDY, WILL YOU GO TO THE PROM WITH ME?
YOU SAID IT! GOOD THING I TIPPED HER OFF TO TANGEE.

DON'T LET A "PAINTED LOOK" KEEP YOU FROM POPULARITY!

Change to Tangee today! It's one lipstick that isn't paint, the only lipstick with Tangee Color Change Principle. Tangee is orange in the stick, but on the lips it changes to just your shade of blush-rose—a magic touch that no other lipstick can give! So buy Tangee: 39¢ and $1.10. Or send coupon for Miracle Make-Up Set.

You're a Little Double-Crosser!!
A SISTERS' SPAT PUTS IRIUM "ON THE SPOT"
SIS, HOW COULD YOU?
MAYBE THAT WILL TEACH YOU TO STOP MAKING A PLAY FOR MY BOY FRIENDS!
SIS, YOU ASKED FOR IT... SO HERE'S THE COLD TRUTH! I DON'T WIN OVER YOUR MEN— ... YOU LOSE THEM BECAUSE OF YOUR DULL DINGY TEETH!
I'M S-S-SO SORRY, ANN... I DON'T KNOW HOW I LOST MY HEAD LIKE THAT! JEALOUSY IS A TERRIBLE THING...
FORGET IT, SIS... BUT MARY, WHY DON'T YOU DO SOMETHING ABOUT YOUR TEETH? I'VE TRIED AND TRIED TO GET YOU TO CHANGE OVER TO PEPSODENT LIKE I DID!
MARY ACTS ON HER SISTER'S ADVICE...
MY SISTER HAS SUCH LOVELY TEETH — AND SHE'S BEEN RAVING FOR A LONG TIME ABOUT PEPSODENT CONTAINING IRIUM.. JUST WHAT IS THIS IRIUM, ANYWAY?
FRANKLY, THE SCIENTIFIC NAME IS A "JAW-BREAKER"* SO THE PEPSODENT PEOPLE CALL IT IRIUM.... AND IRIUM CERTAINLY HELPS PEPSODENT WORK WONDERS!
MY TEETH CERTAINLY FEEL CLEANER!
AND IN JUNE
I THINK MARY IS THE YEAR'S LOVELIEST BRIDE!

Learn "THE MIRACLE OF IRIUM" from either Pepsodent Powder or Pepsodent Paste ... BOTH contain wonder-working IRIUM!

● AT LAST!... Now you can see your faithful brushing properly rewarded by teeth that glisten and gleam with all their glorious natural beauty... thanks to "The Miracle of IRIUM!"

This exciting experience may be yours, your own mirror may reveal it soon—if you'll just discard forever that old-fashioned dentifrice that has never improved the appearance of your teeth—and start in at once with Pepsodent Tooth Paste or Pepsodent Tooth Powder containing IRIUM!

You see, proper brushing is only half the secret of teeth that shine and sparkle with their full natural radiance. The other half is the right dentifrice. So do as millions are doing... brush your teeth twice a day with Pepsodent containing IRIUM. Then you'll quickly bid goodbye to dull, dingy surface-stains that hide the true beauty of your teeth! . . . But remember, PEPSODENT ALONE CONTAINS IRIUM! This new luster discovery is in every tube of Pepsodent Tooth Paste and every can of Pepsodent Tooth Powder now on sale.

Pepsodent containing IRIUM is Safe! Contains NO DRUGS, NO GRIT, NO PUMICE. It quickly loosens surface-stains, then gently brushes them away... revealing natural pearly brilliance in record time! Try it AT OUR EXPENSE and see for yourself! See how Pepsodent shows up any other dentifrice you've ever used—BAR NONE!

Mail the coupon now for a FREE 7-day supply. Send it right away—before you forget! Check whether you want Pepsodent Tooth Paste or Pepsodent Tooth Powder. Both contain remarkable, patented IRIUM.

GO, NED!
TOUCHDOWN CARTER!
IT WAS AN ILLEGAL PLAY, REFEREE — THE TOUCHDOWN DOESN'T COUNT!
THE PLAY WAS LEGAL–SEVEN MEN WERE ON THE LINE OF SCRIMMAGE –THE SCORE COUNTS, CARTER WINS!

Breathless in their seats, Carter fans tingle as Tamarack, leading 7 to 6, kicks far down the field.

Tackler after tackler hurls himself at the flying Shekels, who is eluding them all.

But as Bud crosses the goal line untouched, an alert official sees a violation and blows his whistle.

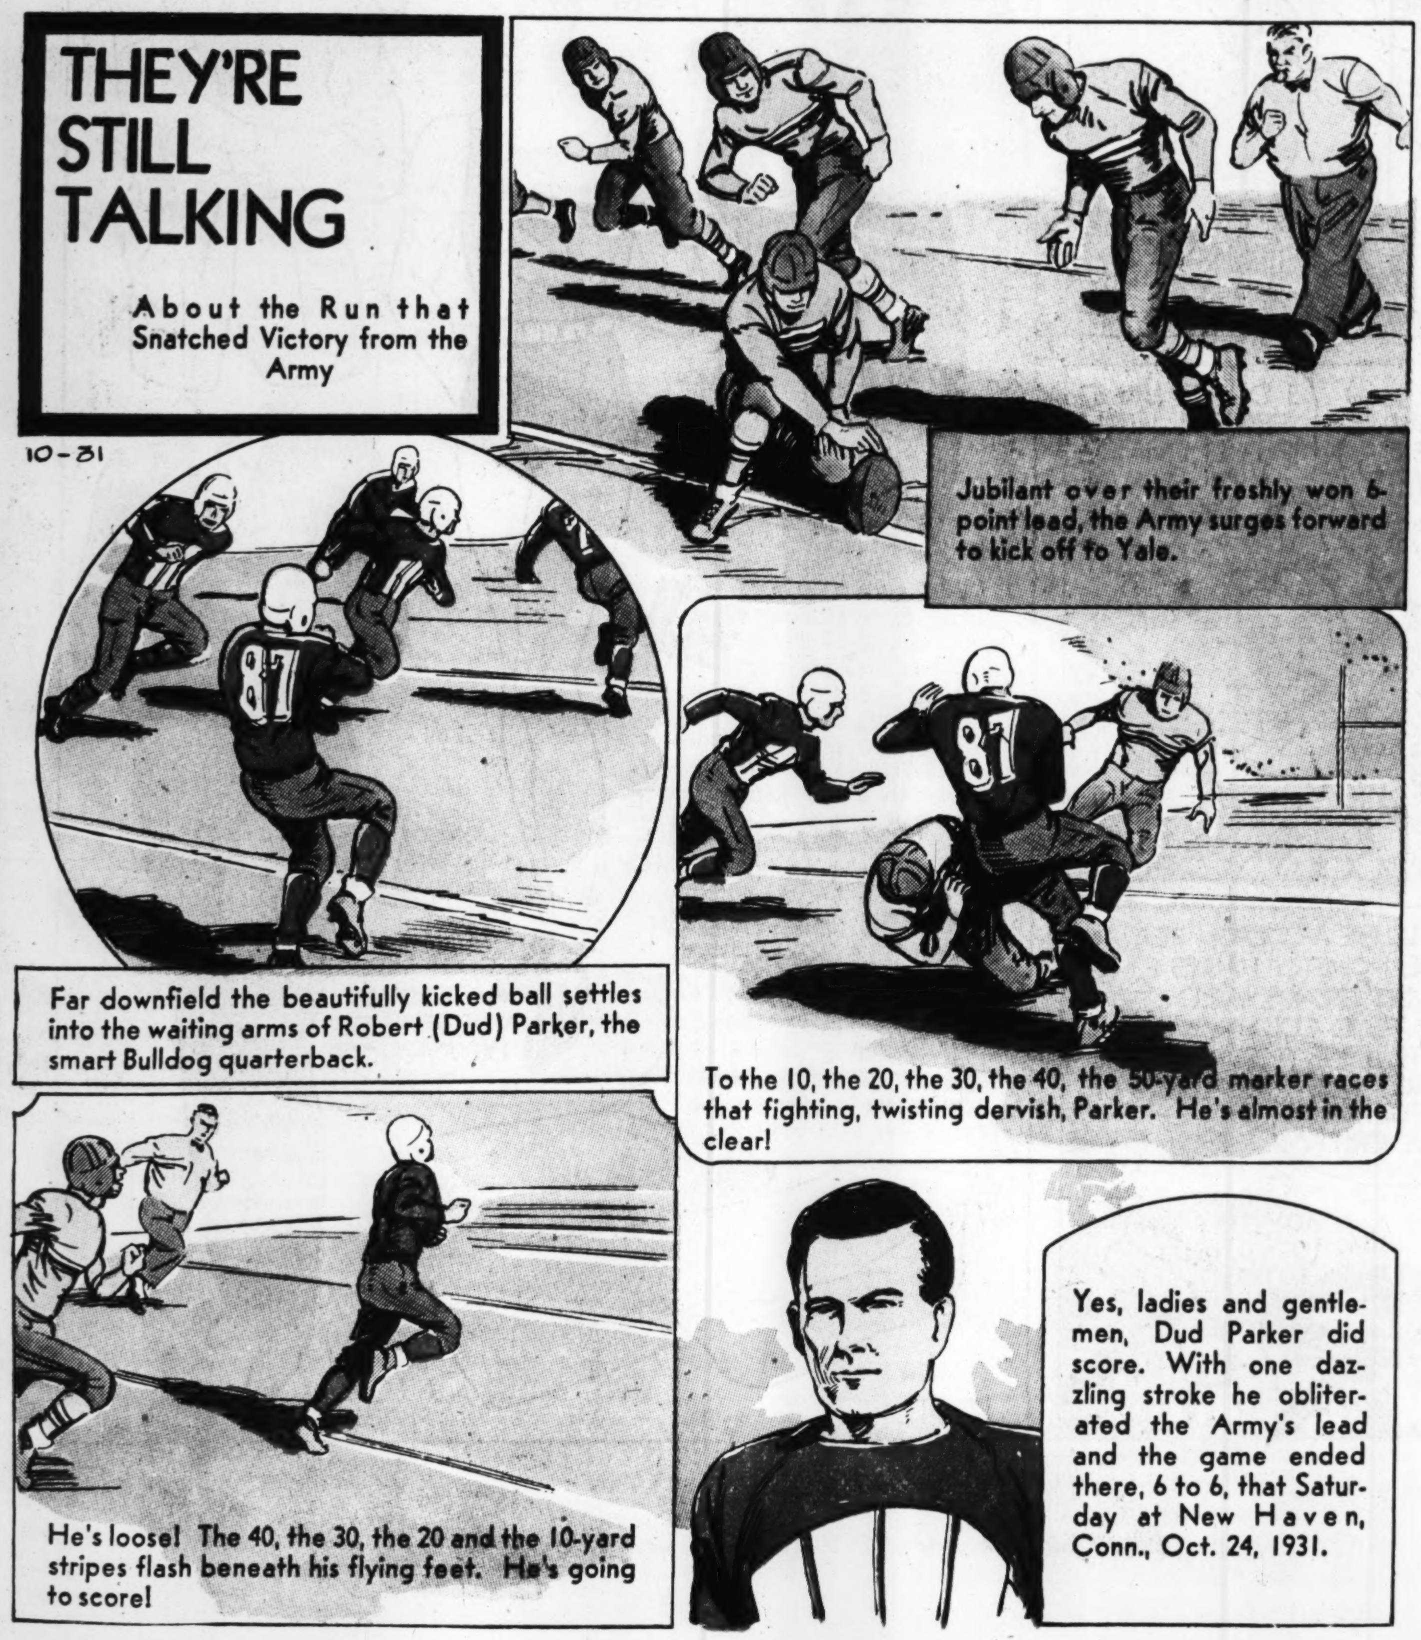
THEY'RE STILL TALKING

About the Run that Snatched Victory from the Army



Jubilant over their freshly won 6-point lead, the Army surges forward to kick off to Yale.

Far downfield the beautifully kicked ball settles into the waiting arms of Robert (Dud) Parker, the smart Bulldog quarterback.

To the 10, the 20, the 30, the 40, the 50-yard marker races that fighting, twisting dervish, Parker. He's almost in the clear!

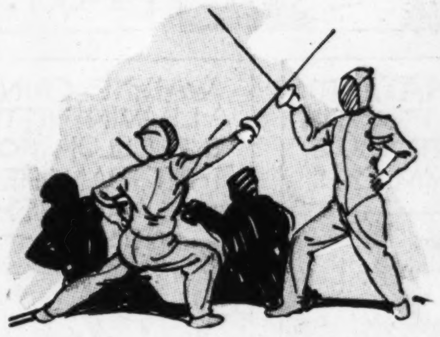
He's loose! The 40, the 30, the 20 and the 10-yard stripes flash beneath his flying feet. He's going to score!

Yes, ladies and gentlemen, Dud Parker did score. With one dazzling stroke he obliterated the Army's lead and the game ended there, 6 to 6, that Saturday at New Haven, Conn., Oct. 24, 1931.

Fencing . . . . by NED BRANT

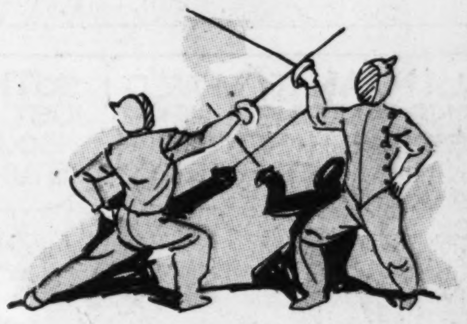
Cuts and Parries

Number Five



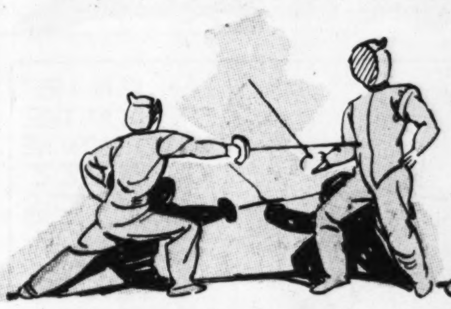
Should your opponent lunge at the head, this parry is used to frustrate the attempt.

Number Six



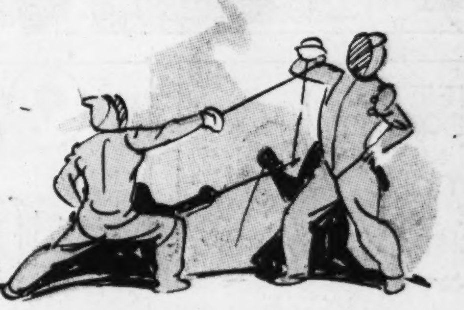
And a second thrust at the head would bring this parry into action.

Number Seven



An attempt by your foe to score at the left flank should find you blocking the attempt like this.

Number Eight



And, finally, you would protect yourself against a thrust at your left cheek in this manner.

I TRAIN LIONS for the MOVIES
MELVIN KOONTZ
FAMOUS WILD-ANIMAL TRAINER OF LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA
MEL KOONTZ GETS A LION CUB FOR HIS MOVIE WORK
MEL, THE SCRIPT CALLS FOR A LION MAULING A MAN
THAT'S SOME JOB! GIVE ME TIME TO WORK THE LION INTO HIS PART
YOU'RE EASY TO HANDLE NOW, BOY... BUT WAIT 'TILL YOU'RE GROWN UP
...THEN WEEKS OF TENSE, PATIENT WORK. THE LION MUST BE MADE USED TO ROUGH TREATMENT. EVERY MINUTE MEL'S SCHOOLING THE BIG CAT HE'S LITERALLY TAKING HIS LIFE IN HIS HANDS.
RESULT — A PERFECT MOVIE ACTION SHOT
GOOD WORK, MEL! THEY'LL SOON BE SET UP FOR YOUR NEXT SCENE. MEANWHILE, HAVE A CIGARETTE
YES, THANKS, SINCE IT'S A CAMEL
I NOTICE YOU ALWAYS STICK TO CAMELS, MEL
TELL ME, ARE CAMELS REALLY SO DIFFERENT FROM OTHER CIGARETTES?
I'LL SAY THEY ARE! I KNOW MY 'BIG CATS.' YOU CAN NEVER TELL WHEN THEY'LL GO HAYWIRE, AND THAT MEANS I MUST AVOID 'JITTERY NERVES.' ONE BIG DIFFERENCE I FIND IN CAMELS IS THAT THEY NEVER GET ON MY NERVES. THAT'S SAYING SOMETHING, TOO, BECAUSE I SMOKE A LOT!
SOON FATE PUTS MEL'S NERVES TO A SPINE-CHILLING TEST. HE'S WORKING 19 BIG CATS IN A SPECTACULAR FILM...SUDDENLY ...A HALF-TAMED LIONESS GOES AMUCK...FANGS BARED...CLAWS UNSHEATHED...SHE SLINKS ACROSS THE ARENA...LEAPS STRAIGHT AT HIM.
SO I'M GOING TO HAVE TROUBLE WITH YOU, HUH?
MEL FLASHES IN TO MEET HER...JAMS HIS FIST DOWN HER THROAT SO THE STARTLED LIONESS CAN'T USE HER FANGS...ONE SECOND PASSES...THEN TWO...WHILE MAN AND BEAST STRUGGLE ON THE ARENA SANDS.
ASSISTANTS RUSH TO THE RESCUE WITH PRONGS AND REVOLVERS...THEY CORNER AND CAGE THE RAVAGING LIONESS.
YOUR ARM'S RIPPED UP!
YEP, BUT IT'S NOT AS SERIOUS AS IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN. GIVE ME A CAMEL!
HERE YOU ARE, MEL!
LARGEST-SELLING CIGARETTE IN AMERICA made from COSTLIER TOBACCOS
TAKE IT FROM ME, THIS 'ONE-CIGARETTE'S-AS-GOOD-AS-ANOTHER' TALK IS THE BUNK. CAMEL IS THE CIGARETTE FOR ME. THEY'RE REALLY DIFFERENT FROM OTHER CIGARETTES... DON'T JANGLE MY NERVES OR RASP MY THROAT...NO MATTER HOW MANY I SMOKE!
Yours truly

TURKISH & DOMESTIC BLEND CIGARETTES

-AND MILLIONS OF OTHER MEN AND WOMEN AGREE 100% WITH MEL KOONTZ ABOUT CAMELS...CAMELS ARE THE LARGEST-SELLING CIGARETTE IN AMERICA...AND IN THE WORLD...BECAUSE SMOKERS CAN AND DO APPRECIATE THE FACT THAT CAMEL SPENDS MILLIONS MORE...YEAR IN AND YEAR OUT... FOR CHOICER TOBACCOS.

CAMELS ARE A MATCHLESS BLEND OF FINER, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS...TURKISH AND DOMESTIC

OL' JUDGE ROBBINS
HAPPY BIRTHDAY, JOHN. HERE'S SOMETHING FOR THE OCCASION
MANY THANKS, UNCLE ROB. I'M MIGHTY GLAD TO HAVE PRINCE ALBERT TO SMOKE IN THIS NEW PIPE
ISN'T IT A BEAUTY? AND JUST THINK — IT CAME FROM THE ROOTS OF A HEATHER THAT WAS NEARLY 40 YEARS OLD
WHY, IT'S OLDER THAN I AM!
YES. AND DID YOU KNOW THAT THIS HEATHER IS CALLED BRUYERE FROM WHICH WE GET OUR WORD BRIAR. THE ROOT IS ACTUALLY BOILED TO AID ITS SEASONING. THEN IT'S SORTED, DRIED SHAPED, AND POLISHED TO GET THE MARVELOUS FINISH YOU SEE HERE
A LOT OF WORK GOES INTO A GOOD PIPE, DOESN'T IT?
YES, AND YET A PIPE IS ONLY AS GOOD AS THE TOBACCO THAT'S PUT IN IT. TAKE PRINCE ALBERT — ITS NO-BITE PROCESS ASSURES EXTRA MILDNESS AND LETS YOU TASTE THE RICH FLAVOR OF CHOICE TOBACCO, AND IT'S CRIMP CUT FOR COOLER SMOKING
ALL 3 GROUPS OF PIPE-LOVERS GET MANY HAPPY RETURNS FROM 1 KIND OF PIPE TOBACCO BEGINNER
OCCASIONAL
ENJOY YOUR PIPE ALL THE TIME. LET COOL, SMOOTH P.A. PUT IT ON REGULAR DUTY
EXPERIENCED
SAY, STEADY SMOKERS! HERE'S THE RICH, TASTY BODY YOU WANT... PLUS MILDNESS PRINCE ALBERT
CRIMP CUT
LONG BURNING PIPE AND CIGARETTE TOBACCO
50 PIPEFULS OF FRAGRANT TOBACCO IN EVERY 2-OZ. TIN OF PRINCE ALBERT
MILDER IN "MAKIN'S" CIGARETTES TOO!

CREAM OF WHEAT

"'You've got something there,' I told myself when I first served Cream of Wheat. The youngsters love it no end—clamor for it. (Friend husband is becoming a fan, too!) And there are so many ways of varying it that interest hasn't a chance to lag. We like it with prunes, with raisins, with brown sugar, or with jelly—as well as plain. I know now why 3½ million bowls are eaten daily!"

"It's more than a rouser of breakfast appetites, too. Cream of Wheat gives just oodles of quick food energy—the kind our doctor says children need for work and play and to help keep the diet in balance. Digestion starts right in the mouth. I've been told that Cream of Wheat is also one factor in our children's steady, natural weight gains."

"Marvelously economical! Cream of Wheat is a blend of the best hard wheat, sun-ripened in the most favored growing areas. It is heat-treated, purified and triple-sealed. Yet it costs less than ½ cent a bowl. It cooks up to 6 times its original volume. There are over 50 servings (I've counted them!) in the large package. So it pays to serve my family Cream of Wheat!"

Amazing—what food energy little youngsters burn up each day!

COMPETITION is as natural to a youngster as breathing. Always he is out to "beat". One result is that pound for pound of weight he burns up each day more bodily energy than a grown-up.

See to it, mother, that when your child steps from the breakfast table into the active hours of the day, his little system is fortified with plenty of this needed food energy.

Let delicious, hot Cream of Wheat help. Every granule is fairly bursting with quick food energy. And this cereal has proved itself in millions of homes through 42 years.
